ALIENIST KROHN 'PEDDLED PERJURY FOR 16 YEARS,' DARROW CHARGES

'Not a Physician; Employed to Go In and Out of Courts, Slaying His Victims,' Lawyer Says.

SARCASM POURED ON STATE'S "ACE"

Attack on Doctor Who Testified Against Loeb and Leopold Features Plea for Youths.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—The youthful slayers of Robert Franks were admitted by every alienist who examined them to be without emotional reaction, a directing force in the mind of any normal person, with the exception of one physician "who sells his services for cash and peddles perjury," Clarence S. Darrow, bulwark of counsel defending Richard Loeb and Nathan F. Leopold Jr., charged today in pleading for mercy for them before Judge John R. Caverly.

"Everyone of the psychiatrists on both sides of this case told the court that emotion furnished the urge and drife in life, that is, with one exception, Dr. William O. Krohn, who is not an alienist, but an orator," Darrow declared. "Dr. Krohn, testifying for the State, said they did have it; that his short opportunity for examining them was '[illegible]' although the others said it was not.

"Without Regard to Age."

"But Dr. Krohn is not a physician. His license has been employed to professionally go in and out of courts slaying his victims without regard to their age or sex or circumstances. Dr. Krohn for 16 years has been peddling perjury and we all know it."

Darrow closed a straight two-hour address with this parting shot. At 20 minutes of 12 Darrow swerved from his argument, resumed from yesterday, that the boys were moved by no motive but were purposeless, senseless and childish, in killing Franks. For the final quarter of an hour he poured a stream of critical, personal and sarcastic eloquence upon Dr. Krohn, who has been described as the "ace" of the State's corps of alienists. Darrow said he would end his argument Monday, "whether I am through or not."

The elderly but vibrant leader of half a thousand legal battles again held a crowded courtroom tense under the spell of his thoughts and words. He talked straight through the half-holiday session, scarcely pausing for breath. For the first time since the hearing began five weeks ago, no recess interrupted the proceedings, but no one connected with the court gave evidence of noting the omission.

Judge Caverly took his eyes off the pleader only when the swinging door groaned, a newspaper writer's chair scraped the floor or some other untoward sound became audible over the voice. Even when the jurist found his big, heavy upholstered chair uncomfortable in the summer heat and moved to a lighter piece of furniture, his gaze remained focused on the attorney.

Defendants Follow Argument.

With equal attention Loeb and Leopold and their relatives followed the argument. Loeb in particular kept his eyes riveted on the slightly stooped man in the baggy gray suit whose brain and tongue were busy in trying to save him from the gallows. Leopold was tense and motionless.

The boys showed no trace of emotion which on Friday sent them tremulous and tearful from the courtroom. But there was little in today's proceedings to arouse such feelings in them. Proceeding with his argument that the crime was "so senseless as to be the possible product of only a diseased mind," Darrow pointed out to Judge Caverly that each detail of the killing, the disposition of the body and the actions afterward took place under conditions that showed lack of mental balance.

'Mad Act of King Lear.'

He emphasized particularly that the kidnaping and killing occurred in the very neighborhood of the boys' home, where they were known to most anyone that might [illegible]. He also stressed the drive of the death car about the busy South Side boulevards in daylight and that they followed the main

PREDICTS FEWER BUT BETTER NEWSPAPERS

Head of Columbia School of Journalism Says Newspapers Should Be Public Trusts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—"Fewer newspapers, we are almost certain to have, with a larger income at their disposal; the survivors ought to be better newspapers," said John W. Cunliffe, director of the Columbia School of Journalism, in his annual report made public today by President Nicholas Murray Butler.

"The pride of the journalist in his profession is not yet dead, very far from it," said Dr. Cunliffe. "And this is a most valuable resource which ought to be encouraged and developed for the public advantage."

But newspapers will only be better, he continued, "If the men conducting them have intelligence, education, professional capacity, and a keen sense of public responsibility. If the conception of the newspaper as a private business enterprise should become universal, and it should no longer be regarded as a public trust, I do not see how democratic government is to be carried on."

Woman Quits Post Over Walton.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 23. Mrs. O. H. Cafky of Forgan resigned as vice chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee today, following a meeting of the Executive Committee, at which all Democratic candidacies, including that of J. C. Walton for the United States Senate, were indorsed. The State Central Committee did not agree to support Walton when it met two weeks ago, and the action of the Executive Committee is in direct opposition to the sentiment of that meeting," Mrs. Cafky said. Walton at today's meeting said he would continue his fight on the Ku Klux Klan in the campaign.

$10,000 TAKEN IN HOLDUP OF BANK AT FREEBURG, ILL.

Seven Men Rob the First National There at 2:15 P. M. When 100 Citizens Are on Public Square.

The First National Bank of Freeburg, Ill., seven miles southeast of Belleville, was held up at 2:15 p. m. yesterday by seven men, who took $10,558.50 in currency from the vault and tellers' cages and fled in two or more automobiles. They were fired upon by R. E. Hamill, president of the bank, who sent four shots from a riot gun after the speeding cars.

Hamill, three women emplose and five customers were in the bank and a hundred or more townspeople were scattered about the publis square. Driving up to the bank, five of them entered with drawn revolvers. They were not masked.

"Stick 'em up!" ordered the leader. "We don't want to shoot up your town, but we mean business. Not a move or we'll drill you.

Work Swiftly.

Leaving three to covere the customers, two of the robbers went behind the cages. They ordered Hamill and Miss Susie Wolf, cashier, to go into the vault. There Miss Wolf was obliged to fill sacks with currency while Hamill held them. Meanwhile, one of the pair was cleaning out the tellers' cages. They worked swiftly and kept up a running fire of talk to remind the helpless occupants that an outcry would bring shots.

After all the money had been gathered the robbers backed out and ran for their machines. Hamill set off a burglar alarm siren and grabbed up his riot gun. He fired four times as the first car drove away. It was a new, red-painted Flint touring car and was followed by a gray touring car.

Posse Goes in Pursuit.

The robbers raced east in the direction of Fayetteville, which is on the road to Nashville, and away from St. Louis. A posse started in pursuit and Sheriff Schnipper of Belleville joined the chase.

Trace of the robbers was lost, after the Flint car cut through a woods road beyond Fayetteville and disappeared in the direction of Marissa.

Madison County Bankers Hold Meeting on Robberies.

As a sequel to the recent orgy of bank robberies in Southern Illinois, member representatives of the Madison County Bankers' Association met in secret session Friday in the Edwardsville National Bank, at Edwardsville, to discuss steps calculated to thwart the operations of the bandits.

While reports of the meeting were obviously guarded, it was learned from reliable sources that a subcommittee was empowered, with necessary funds, to employ detectives, both as guards and investigators, and to make recommendations and suggestions for bank protection.

The meeting was presided over by R. Hewitt, a banker of Alton, who was authorized to receive secretly the reports of the investiga-

MRS. FERGUSON DEFEATS TEXAS KLAN CANDIDATE

With 455,000 Votes Tabulated, She Is Nearly 59,000 Votes Ahead in Governorship Race

TOTAL VOTE PUT AT CLOSE TO 700,000

Record Balloting in Run-Off Primary in Which Woman Sought Vindication of Name.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, the first woman candidate for the governorship of Texas, apparently is assured of the Democratic nomination, the Texas Election Bureau announced at midnight.

The tabulation at that hour of returns from today's run-off primary included incomplete returns from 180 counties and complete reports from 37, out of 252 in the State. The total vote tabulated was 455,851. Mrs. Ferguson had 257,370 and Felix Robertson, the Ku Klux Klan candidate, 198,481, a lead for Mrs. Ferguson of 58,889. Election Bureau statisticians estimated the total vote would be from 660,000 to 700,000. Many of the unheard-from precincts were said to be in rural districts where Mrs. Ferguson was expected to show a lead.

Voting at today's primary, to select a candidate for governorship and six other State officers, was the greatest in any "run-off" primary in the State for years, reports reaching here said. The heavy vote was due to the fact that the Ku Klux Klan was an issue, and also that, for the first time in the history of the State, a woman sought the nomination. Robertson had the support of the Ku Klux Klan and Mrs. Ferguson drew support from the anti-Klan element.

In most of the cities heard from this afternoon, the voting started with a rush, and indications were that the total vote would equal, if not exceed, the 702,000 ballots cast at the elimination primary July 26. Usually the vote at the "run-off" primary is considerably lighter than at the first election.

Mrs. Ferguson entered the race in an effort to vindicate her name from the stigma of the judgment under which her husband and campaign manager, James E. Ferguson, former Governor, was impeached. She drew whatever support that a first woman candidate would have, in addition to the strength her husband has commanded in Texas, and the anti-klan vote.

In the campaign, Robertson admitted the klan support, and James E. Ferguson, who conducted the campaign for his wife, arraigned the klan in virtually every speech he made. Robertson denied the klan was a vital issue, declaring it was a smoke screen laid down to hide what he said was the real issue of prohibition.

In the elimination primary there were nine candidate for the governorship, Mrs. Ferguson and Robertson being the survivors. Immediately afterward most of the defeated candidates in that primary threw their support to Mrs. Ferguson and several of them were antiklan. Some of the Senators who voted for Gov. Ferguson's impeachment were active in the campaign closed today, and not only announced they supported Mrs. Ferguson, but spoke in her behalf. Among those who were active in her support was M. M. Crane, former Attorney-General, who prosecuted the impeachment charges against her husband.

Robertson had a lead of a little more than 5000 votes over Mrs. Ferguson in Dallas, his home county, in the returns from 80 of the 106 ballot boxes. Sixty of the boxes were complete.

The Republicans nominated T. P. Lee of Houston for the governorship in state convention Aug. 13. Lee, however, wired Ferguson that he hoped Mrs. Ferguson would be the Democratic nominee and if she was he would regard his nomination as an "empty honor." This aroused Texas Republicans and Lee wired that he would decline the nomination.

100 YEARS OLD BUT VILLAGE HEALTH OFFICER REFUSES TO RESIGN

LONDON, Aug. 23.

WHEN should a man retire? Not until he is more than 100 or is incapable mentally or physically of doing his job, says Dr. E. J. Slade-King, who has refused to resign from the position of medical officer of health at Ilfracombe, Devon. Dr. Slade-King, who is within a few months of being 100 told a deputation from the Council he would not retire.

"Younger men want to step into my shoes," he said to a reporter, "but let them strike out for themselves, as I had to do. I am hale and hearty and do my job every day."

Dr. Slade-King also holds the position of Coroner.

MAN'S DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT REPORTED

Drier Says He Left Body Beside Road to Bring Injured Companion to City.

Leonard Daudermann, of 6303 Southwood avenue, St. Louis County, reported to police last midnight that he had found a man who appeared to be dead and another who was injured under an overturned Nash roadster on Lemay Ferry road about 15 miles south of St. Louis.

The injured man was taken to City Hospital where he said he was Leo Reinhardt, 22 years old, 4438 Harris street. He was suffering from numerous cuts and bruises. He said his companion was Vernor Fox, 25, of 6133 Suburban avenue, a plasterer. The two had started for the Meramec river, leaving St. Louis about 9 p. m. Reinhardt was unable to give a clear explanation of the accident.

Dauderman said he made an examination which convinced him that Fox was dead. He said he left the body at the side of the road and rushed into the city with Reinhardt.

Joseph Schlain, 51 years old, of 1108A North Twentieth street, died yesterday from injuries suffered June 8, when he was hurt in an automobile accident in St. Louis County. Schlain died at his home, his wife, Mrs. Mollie Schlain, informing the police of his death later in the day. No record of the accident could be found at Clayton.

Mrs. Leah Dorn, 38 years old, her four children and her three-months-old grandson, were injured last night when the automobile of her son-in-law, Louis Drunisky, 33, overturned at Evans and Cora avenues.

Woman Internally Injured.

Drunisky's wife, Louise, 18, suffered several fractured ribs and internal injuries, and their son, Edward, a fracture of the left leg. Mrs. Dorn and her three other children—Esther, 17, Louise, 8, and Henry, 6—escaped with lacerations and bruises. Drunisky was not hurt.

The automobile was moving east on Evans avenue toward their home at 4334 Evans avenue, when Drunisky lost control and the machine, a small touring car, swerved against the curb and turned over.

Mrs. Florence Borah, 52, of 2609 North Tenth street, suffered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries at 6:30 p. m., when struck by the automobile of Joseph Halgans, 17, a machinist, of 1933 Sullivan avenue, while crossing Tenth street near her home. She is in a critical condition at city hospital.

Woman's Son Halts Driver.

Halgans attempted to leave the scene of the accident, according to police, but was prevented from doing so by the injured woman's son, Alvin, 18, who was standing on a nearby corner. The son jumped on the running board of the machine when a passerby shouted to Halgans to stop, and, after riding several blocks, induced the latter to return. It was then that the son learned that his mother had been hurt. Halgans is being held, charged with careless driving and felonious wounding.

ST. LOUIS BOY AND KIRKWOOD GIRL WIN PERFECT-BABY PRIZES

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 23.—In the baby health contest at the State Fair today awards were announced today and Marylyn Frances Jordan of Kirkwood, Mo., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Jordan, was declared the most perfect baby girl between the ages of 12 and 36 months. The Gov. Arthur M. Hyde trophy, a silver loving cup, was awarded to her. She scored 99.

A St. Louis boy, Lyman Ray Ernst, took the honors in the boys' class for the same ages. He scored 98.5. A silver trophy from Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd was the award. These two also won the championship specials.

The fair, Missouri's twenty-fourth, said by exposition officials to be the most successful in its history, ended this afternoon.

DAWES CONDEMNS K. K. K. AS MENACE TO WELFARE OF CIVILIZED COMMUNITIES

DAVIS' ANTI-KLAN STAND CHEERS PARTY LEADERS

Democrats Take View Candidates' Speech Will Win Him Support in Eastern States.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—John W. Davis's clear-cut statement on the Ku Klux Klan yesterday caused much favorable comment here today. Politicians of all parties believe that President Coolidge must now declare himself on that subject or suffer the loss of supporters. An opinion from Charles G. Dawes will not suffice for the entire Republican ticket.

Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at a conference with newspaper representatives today, was asked to express his views on the klan, and he said that issue would be left to Davis and Governor Bryan.

Republican leaders were very nervous over the situation brought about by the naming of the Ku Klux Klan by the Democratic standard bearer. They had hoped that an out-and-out declaration on that subject could be avoided. But now they realize that it has been put up squarely to Mr. Coolidge.

Shaver said that he went from Lincoln, Neb., where he attended the notification ceremonies of Gov. Bryan, to Chicago, and found that Democratic headquarters was functioning well in the West.

"Our prospects there are very good," said he. "The Western states are friendly to Mr. Davis and Mr. Coolidge is not popular there."

Coolidge States in West.

It was predicted by Shaver and Senator Pat Harrison, who had been in the West with him, that Mr. Coolidge would not carry more than three states in the great western country.

Davis' Ku Klux Klan declaration has cheered Democrats here. They think it will give him thousands of votes in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Western States where the Republicans are cultivating the order.

The aggressive attitude of Davis, and his vigorous attack on the Harding and Coolidge administrations, has caused Republicans to waver in their position that President Coolidge should not make many stump speeches. They are afraid for him to speak and afraid for him not to speak. The Republican National Committee today announced the following "speaking engagements" for the President, saying they are "so far as have yet been definitely announced."

"On next Friday, Aug 28, the day following his return from Plymouth, to the delegates of the National Fraternal Congress of America from the portico of the White House at noon.

"At Baltimore on Saturday, Sept. 6, at the unveiling of the statue of Lafayette.

"On Sunday, Sept. 21, at the base of Washington Monument, members of the Holy Name Society in attendance at annual convention.

"On Oct. 1, at the dedication of the first division monument in the plaza overlooking the State, War and Navy Building."

None of these are supposed to be political addresses and the announcement of them by the National Committee is considered unusual.

Tariff and Invisible Empire.

Republican workers would have the President discuss tariff and prosperity but the Davis speech on corruption and the invisible empire have overshadowed those old issues.

Davis Congratulated on His Stand on Klan.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—John W. Davis, the Democratic presidential candidate, began to get the reaction today from his denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan yesterday in his address at Seagirt, N. J. Messages reached his headquarters here from party leaders and others in a number of states. None of them was made public but it was stated that all were of a congratulatory nature. Naturally Davis was heartened by them but he had no comment to offer.

Before the declaration at Augusta of Charles G. Dawes, Republican vice presidential candidate, on the klan was published, Davis had laid aside the cares of politics and sought relaxation after his strenuous day of yesterday in golf at the Creek Club near his home at Locust Valley, Long Island. At his headquarters here, however, it was indicated that he probably would take no public notice of Dawes' statement.

Reaching his headquarters here early in the day, Davis spent a busy four hours reading correspondence and conferring with a number of party leaders, including Edmund H. Moore of Ohio, with whom he discussed the address he is to deliver at Columbus next Tuesday; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Campaign Finance Committee, and James W. Gerard, treasurer of the National Democratic Committee.

Finance Directors.

After this meeting Jones announced the appointment of directors of the Finance Committee of 15 states as follows:

Arkansas; Allen Kennedy, Fort Smith; California, James D. Phelan, San Francisco; Florida, Gilchrist B. Stockton, Jacksonville; Indiana, Charles A. Greathouse, Indianapolis; Kansas, Harris Parkman, Emporia; Michigan, William A. Comstock, Detroit; Oklahoma, Walter M. Harrison, Oklahoma City; Ohio, John Shuff, Cincinnati; New Jersey, William Heppenheimer, Jersey City; South Carolina, William E. Gonzales, Columbia; Pennsylvania, Roland S. Morris, Philadelphia; Tennessee, Rogers Caldwell, Nashville; Texas, W. L. Clayton, Houston; Virginia, Oliver J. Sands, Richmond, and District of Columbia, Robert N. Harper, Washington, D. C.

Jones announced that financial directors for the other 33 states would be appointed in the near future. It will be the function of these directors to organize state finance committees to collect funds for the conduct of the national campaign.

Davis' Statement Has Right Ring, Senator Reed Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 23.—Senator James A. Reed today commended John W. Davis, the Democratic presidential nominee, for denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name.

"I am glad Davis came out against the klan," he said.

"I believe he said exactly the right thing. I see no reason for drawing up an indictment without naming the defendant. In this case, Davis has named the defendant.

"The voters desire direct statements regarding issues from candidates for office, and to me this statement of Davis has the right ring."

Senator Reed, in his campaign for the Senate two years ago, vigorously assailed the klan. The Senator said he felt much improved today. The swelling in his right knee, which kept him in his room in a hotel for several weeks, virtually has disappeared.

BERNHARDT ESTATE TO BE SOLD

(Copyright, 1924.)

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Sarah Bernhardt's famous estate on Belle Isle, off the Coast of Brittany, which during a period of twenty years the great tragedienne developed, improved and beautified, will be sold at auction in a few days. The vast domain, including the chateau, farm villas, parks, lanes and fountains, where the actress—known to the fishermen and farmers of the countryside as "The Good Lady in White"—spent her vacations, is to be cut up into lots and offered for building purposes.

The announcement has caused much indignation in artistic and theatrical circles here, but it is not likely that anything will be done to stop the sale.

HUMAN HAIR ON CLOTHES

Use for Bobbed and Shingled Tresses Found in London.

LONDON, Aug. 23—Human hair is being used here by some women to decorate their coat collars, cuffs, and even their blouses.

One woman, seen in Piccadilly wore a long black coat with the edges of the collar trimmed with auburn hair. The cuffs were similarly adorned, while more human hair hung from the edge of the front of her cream colored blouse. Monkey fur, which has been the rage for at time, has apparently found a rival among those whose tresses have been bobbed or shingled.

JOINS DAVIS IN ASSAILING HOODED ORDER BY NAME

Says "Force Rises to Meet Force and Civilization Commences to Disintegrate Into Savagery."

ATTACKS "BLUFFING LABOR LEADERS"

Criticises Attempts to Influence Union Men Into Political Combination With Socialists.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 23.—Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Illinois, the Republican candidate for the vice presidency, took his audience by surprise at a big Republican meeting today, when he discussed the Ku Klux Klan issue in which he declared that he was opposed to the hooded organization.

It is said that the Republican leaders tried to dissuade Gen. Dawes from speaking of the Ku Klux Klan, but he was deaf to their entreaties.

Ralph O. Brewster of Portland, the Republican candidate for Governor, was nominated, so it is alleged, through the influence of the Ku Klux Klan, after a very close primary contest, in which he was declared the nominee of his party after the certificate of election had been given to his opponent, Frank G. Farrington of Augusta, president of the Maine Senate.

Davis' Speech a Factor.

Since the decision in the primary contest Senator Brewster has not mentioned the klan in any of his speeches. Two things may have prompted Dawes to attack the klan in his speech at Island Park today, one being the statement by John W. Davis, the Democratic candidate for the presidency, in which he said that he was opposed to the klan, and the other a speech by former Attorney General William R. Pattangall of Augusta, the Democratic candidate for Governor, in which he called upon Dawes and Brewster, the Republican candidate for Governor to state their position on the klan.

Pattangall, who seconded the nomination of Senator Underwood of Alabama at the Democratic National Convention waged a fight against the klan in that convention and is making his campaign for the Maine governorship with klan opposition as his one great issue.

Senator Brewster, the Republican candidate for Governor, who followed Dawes, did not mention the incident, but read a section of the constitution, which states that men have the right to worship as they see fit.

Dawes' Remarks.

"I just desire to state, as Mr. Davis did yesterday, relating to the Ku Klux Klan," said Dawes, "that it has no proper part in this or any campaign. The questions of Mr. Pattangall, which appeared in the press this morning, are the familiar trick questions of the ordinary politician. They are not the cause of the statement I am about to make.

"Let me say that I recognize that the Ku Klux Klan in many localities and among many people represents only an institution groping for leadership, moving in the interest of law enforcement, which they do not find in many cowardly politicians and office holders. But this is not the right way to forward law enforcement. Appeals to radical, religious or class prejudice by minority organizations are opposed to the welfare of all peaceful and civilized communities.

"Our Constitution stands for religious tolerance and freedom. This happy country has never been through a religious war such as those which devastated Europe in the centuries passed and brought untold misery to millions of its inhabitants. To inject religious and radical issues into politics is contrary to the welfare of all the people.

"I have told you why I am op-

U. S. FLYERS THINK ITALIAN FAILED TO GET THROUGH FOG

Smith in Message Expresses Opinion Locatelli Never Passed Cape Farewell in Flight From Iceland.

AMERICANS STILL AT FREDERIKSDAL

Are Awaiting Favorable Conditions for Hop to Ivigtut—American Warships in Search for Missing Italian.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD THE U. S. S. BARRY, Aug. 22 (5 p. m.)—In the search for Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator, the destroyer Barry approached to within a few miles of the coastline and steamed parallel toward Cape Farewell, while the shores and fjords were scanned through glasses for traces of the missing flyer.

To the northward the cruiser Raleigh engaged in a similar search. It is the intention of the Raleigh to use airplanes when fog conditions permit.

From the Barry's bridge Cape Farewell presented a most forbidding spectacle—huge mountains, scores of towering peaks, with innumerable needle points and finger-like spires. In the foreground a wide girdle of ice, from which great bergs stood out, glistened in the sunshine.

After a two days' search for Lieut. Locatelli, the Barry headed for Pictou, Nova Scotia, having on board Lieut. Wade and Sergt. Ogden, who are anxious to line up a new machine in readiness for their flight to Boston when their comrades arrive from Indian Harbor.

In the meantime the Raleigh is remaining on the east coast and hopes to be able to use its planes soon, while the Danuish steamer Island Falk, the U. S. S. Milwaukee and a destroyer are combing the west coast from Farewell to Ivigtut.

The situation so far as concerns Locatelli is growing more serious as it is improbable he carried a large supply of provisions, and indications are that his plane met with some mishap or he would have found some means of communication with the searching ships.

It is even considered possible that he missed Greenland altogether and headed out over Davis Straight.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The American aviators at Greenland believe that Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator who accompanied them on their hop from Iceland but did not reach Frederiksdal, failed to get through the dense fog on that day and never passed Cape Farewell.

This opinion was given to the Army Air Service tonight in a message from Lieut. Smith, commanding the world flight, which added that the flight planned for today to Ivigtut was found impossible because of fog. It will be attemptde at the first opportunity.

The message, which was sent from the cruiser Milwaukee by way of Nova Scotia, said:

"Flight of twenty-third impossible because of fog. We are ready to leave on first opportunity. Native sent out by Capt. West off Island Falls returned with information leading us to believe Locatelli failed to get through dense fog on twenty-first and that he never passed Cape Farewell."

First reports from Lieut. Smith, commanding the world flight, and naval officers in charge of vessels co-operating with the flyers in Greenland, deluged the Army Air Service today, coming in piecemeal and in rapid succession after the lapse of long hours of waiting.

While the dispatches contained conflicting statements as to the next hop from Frederiksdal to Ivigtut, said by some advices to have been planned for yesterday and by others to have been postponed on account of heavy weather, they nevertheless served to give officials here a feeling of lessened tension and something of a comprehensive account of the flight from Iceland and of conditions prevailing in Greenland.

Plane Damaged.

The outstanding facts gleaned by Air Service experts from the various dispatches after the contents had been carefully analyzed were listed in the following order:

The American flyers landed safely at Frederiksdal, Greenland, within 11 hours and 20 minutes after they left Iceland, Lieut. Smith making the flight in 10 hours and 30 minutes and landing in advance of Lieut. Nelson. The two airplanes were separated in dense fogs, that of Lieut. Nelson having sustained a damaged pontoon strut when it landed in heavy seas at Frederiksdal.

While Lieut. Smith reported in his wireless dispatch to Major-General Patrick, chief of the Air Service that the damaged strut could be repaired in time for the flyers to reach Ivigtut yesterday, apparently the plans as reported by the flight commander were changed and it was decided to await in Frederiksdal until more satisfactory weather conditions before attempting the jump to Ivigtut.

Admiral Plans Search.

This belief was strengthened by a message from the cruiser Milwaukee sent subsequent to that filed by Lieut. Smith and reporting in condensed language—"No flight Friday, fog."

Comprehensive plans have been prepared by Admiral Magruder for conducting the search for Lieut. Locatelli, missing Italian aviator, who left Iceland in company with the American flyers, but failed to land with them in Greenland, apparently having lost his way in the fog that smothered that last 200 or more miles of the flight to Greenland. Admiral Magruder said the cruiser Raleigh and his flagship, the Richmond, would continue to search for Locatelli, using four airplanes they carried, unless the aviator was found or the hunt had extended beyond all hopes for his recovery.

Funds Needed.

In this connection, Admiral Magruder requested that the Army Air Service and "Canadian" Government be asked to provide necessary funds for conducting the search for the Italian aviator. Naval officers here were inclined to accept this request as meaning that the funds needed for this purpose should be provided by the Army Air Service and the Italian Government, since it was to finance the expedition for the Italian flyer, and that the reference to the Canadian Government had been due to an error in transmitting the dispatch here.

A dispatch from Admiral Magruder (relative of Locatelli) said:

"Plane of Italian aviator is lost in fog. When sighted last plane was in latitude 61.30, longitude 35.50 (about 275 miles northeast of Frederiksdal) at 1430 G. M. T. (2:30 p. m. Greenwich mean time, Aug. 21). Search is being conducted for it by Raleigh, Richmond and Barry.

"Flight to Indian Harbor being guarded by Milwaukee and four destroyers."

Steps taken by the Navy Department at the request of Admiral Magruder, included the dispatch of the cruiser Detroit from Newport, R. I., to St. John, N. B., to take station in the Bay of Fundy while the flight from the Labrador Coast to Boston is in progress, as well as orders for the fuel ship Brazos to proceed at once from Boston to Bay Island on the west coast of Newfoundland with needed fuel oil for the ships on patrol duty under Admiral Magruder's command.

Natives in Search.

A message from the Milwaukee, dated today, and relayed by way of Louisburg, N. S., said natives familiar with the coast of Greenland between Frederiksdal and Frederikshade "will conduct search using motor boats, small boats and kyaks," and that "search parties carrying emergency rations and medical supplies will be employed."

Describing conditions impeding the searchers the dispatch tersely began, "No flight; fog." It concludes with "Request authorization by Canadian Government or army air service for necessary expenditures."

The fog also was mentioned in the Richmond message, which was forwarded by the American naval attache at London.

"Search stopped by fog," it said. "When weather clears will send Barry (U. S. destroyer) to search south of Farewell (Cape Farewell) and then, account of fuel shortage, proceed to Pisto. Assuming Brazos (naval oil tanker), coming, Raleigh (cruiser) is retained to use her planes in search until Locatelli is located."

Messages Indicate Italians May Be Safe in Greenland.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD U. S. S. RICHMOND, Aug. 22.—(Delayed.) While the naval squadron convoying the American world flyers was searching the coast of Greenland near Cape Farewell this afternoon for the missing Italian aviator, Locatelli and his companions, two messages were received by Rear Admiral Magruder which indicated the possibility that the Italians were safe at some isolated Greenland fjord.

One message, from the steamer Island Falk, under date of Thursday night, said: "Think heard airplane flying northward at 7:45 p. m., Greenwich meridian time, but not sure."

The other message, from Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commander of the American flying expedition, read: "Report just received from natives says they heard an airplane 30 minutes after Nelson (Lieut. Erik Nelson, one of the American flyers) landed. Locatelli may be here, so safe."

Eskimos Organize Search.

Inasmuch as Lieut. Nelson landed at Frederiksdal from Iceland at 7:15 p. m. on Thursday, it is believed the reports of a plane being heard refer to the same one.

A wireless dispatch from the U. S. S. Lawrence last night, which also outlined the above message from Lieut. Smith, said a party of Eskimos was being organized to search for the missing Italian airmen between Cape Farewell, on the southern point of Greenland, and Ivigtut, on the southwestern coast.

REEVES TO BE A LEADER IN DAVIS' WESTERN CAMPAIGN

Caruthersville Attorney Appointed Director of Organization—Goes to Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., Aug. 23.—Everett Reeves, an attorney here, today accepted an offer to become director of organization for the Western campaign of John W. Davis, with headquarters at Chicago. He will leave tomorrow to begin work Monday.

Reeves was one of the three original Davis boosters in the Missouri delegation to the national convention and has since received personal letters from the Democratic presidential nominee.

For eight of the last ten years Reeves has been chairman of the Pemiscot County Democratic Committee. He also has been a member of the Congressional and State committees.

The campaign organization department in Chicago will cover all of the United States west of Ohio. It has been proposed to establish headquarters at Denver and Los Angeles, but these would be subordinate to the Chicago office.

Reeves was born in Weakley County, Tennessee, 47 years ago, but has lived here since 1905.

French Senate for Direct Elections.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Senate today adopted a bill re-establishing the direct representation system of electing members of the Chamber of Deputies. By this system, each deputy would be elected by his own separate constituency instead of by groups. It is expected that the chamber will approve the method.

COOLIDGE, VISITING WITH HOME FOLK, SILENT ON KLAN

Reads Davis' Challenge and of Dawes' Remarks, Then Turns to Shake Neighbors' Hands.

AFTERNOON SPENT ON THE OLD FRONT LAWN

Executive Greets Cousins and Aunts and 'Oldest Republican' While Dad Holds Out on Porch.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug 23.—Publication of John W. Davis' challenge to President Coolidge to denounce the Ku Klux Klan and remove it from the campaign as an issue provoked no statement from the President today. Mr. Coolidge and his assistants here read the text of Davis' address this morning. Later, press dispatches disclosed to them that Charles G. Dawes, Republican nominee for the vice presidency, had taken it upon himself to answer the Democratic nominee's remarks in part in his address today at Augusta, Me.

The President spent this afternoon receiving Vermont acquaintances and paid no further attention to the challenge. It is generally conceded here that at one time or another before the campaign ends he must personally make some declaration about the klan, otherwise he faces the danger of a bolt of large elements of the Republican party, particularly the negroes in New York, New Jersey and the Middle West.

It is likewise conceded that Gen. Dawes' attacks on the klan, however pointed they may become, will not answer the purpose of a statement from the President even though the latter congratulates his running mate on some of his speeches. For these reasons the Democratic candidate's utterance yesterday has spread actual consternation among the President's friends.

No Advice on Dawes' Speech.

It was stated at the temporary executive offices here today that neither the President nor Secretary Slemp had been in touch with Gen. Dawes since the Davis speech was delivered. Neither has talked with Chairman Butler. The President, it was said, had no advance information on what Gen. Dawes would say about the Ku Klux in his Augusta address.

There is not even assurance that he would have approved the address in advance. One of his advisers pointed out that he saw no reason for the Republican party to become excited over the klan merely because it was brought to the front by a split in the Democratic party at a convention in which the religious question figured predominantly.

In addition, it was asserted that Mr. Coolidge had stated his position on religious and group intolerance in no mistakeable terms in his acceptance speech. This spokesman expressed the view that, while many persons in the country might be affiliated with the klan, their relationship to it had nothing to do with the outstanding issues of the campaign, such as taxation and the tariff.

In contradiction of reports that negroes in Indiana and other klan states are bolting the G. O. P. ticket for La Follette and Davis, both of whom have announced themselves against the klan and intolerance, some of the President's friends pointed out today that Mr. Coolidge had been generous in his appointments of persons of all races and religious beliefs. They declared his record would stand the inspection of all voters.

Among His Friends.

The President gave himself into the hands of friends and neighbors today and with Mrs. Coolidge and his father spent the afternoon on the front lawn of the family home here, shaking hands and visiting.

For more than an hour the President and Mrs. Coolidge stood in front of the family home and received the callers, who came in from all sections of the State. It was the first really public appearance of Mr. Coolidge since his arrival here and the relatives, townsfolk and natives of this section were on hand.

A clear day and bright sun developed one of the warmest afternoons of their visit here and several of those in line stopped to visit with John Coolidge, the President's father, who sat in the porch swing.

It had been a busy day for the elder Coolidge. The general store corner was crowded by noon with neighbors from the hillsides and he was soon down among them, welcoming old friends and with good humor posing for pictures with the children. It was a gala day for this village and John Wilder, the President's uncle, expressed regret that he and friends had not hired a band to come here for the occasion.

Darrow's Plea for Mercy for Slayers of Bobby Franks

arteries of travel to the section where they disposed of the body.

"If every death vehicle went over the same kind of route driven by sane people, I never heard of it and I fancy no one else ever has," he said, and, rubbing his gray locks as if to bring out an adequate explanation for such an act, added:

"Why did they do it? For nothing. The mad act of King Lear is the only thing I know to compare it with. Yet some of the doctors here have declared it a sane act."

'But Maniacs Plan.'

"The State's Attorney says these boys planned the crime and give that as a reason for hanging them," Darrow said. "But maniacs plan, idiots plan, animals plan and any mind that functions at all may plan.

"The law can vindicate without killing anyone else. Would it be such a glorious triumph of justice to place these boys on a scaffold, their feet tied, black caps on their heads and someone waiting to release the spring?"

Darrow asked the Judge to disregard "inflamed public opinion," and to decide the penalty on the basis of his own conscience, judgment and courage.

"I want to call the attention of this court to some of the other acts of these two boys in this terrible and weird homicide, to show conclusively that there could be no other reason than a diseased mind for their conduct," said the pleader.

"They were not moved by hatred, not moved by spite, not moved by the need for money. They were moved only by the vague mental wanderings of children.

"Preparing for the crime, the boys went over to the Harvard School in broad daylight, known by every one. Loeb's little brother was there. Your Honor has listened to many cases. Has there been in your experience or in that of other lawyers, such a case as this? There never was. It all is only a question of disordered mind and the fact that these boys' parents have money.

Mad Act of a Child.

"They pick up this boy, carry him around. Of course, it is a hard story, one that shocks—a boy bent on killing, not knowing where he was going or whom he was going to get, but trailing a little boy, and the circumstances are opportune.

"As I think of that story of Dickie trailing this little boy around, there comes to me the picture of Doctor Krohn, for 16 years going in and out of buildings trailing victims without any regard for sex, age, families or surroundings. But he had a motive. It was cash, as I shall show further.

"One was the mad act of a child, the other a deliberate act of a man spilling blood.

"They see the Franks boy on the street. Dick and Nathan call to him to get into the car. Five o'clock in the afternoon on a thickly settled street, the houses of their friends and companions, known to every one in the neighborhood. There were automobiles on the street. They took him into the car—for nothing."

Can Find No Parallel for Crime.

"Their conduct shows everything for what it was. These boys should be examined in a psychopathic hospital, handled with care and kindliness.

"They ultimately reach their objective before that, they stop, get something to eat, knowing that the lifeless body of Bobby Franks is bleeding in the car.

"Your honor, we don't need to resort to miracles to satisfy blood. I repeat, you can search the annals of crime and you can find no parallel. It is all utterly at variance with every act in the history of crime. There is not a single thing in it from the beginning to the end, not a normal act in any of it, except the conduct of diseased brains.

With Wisdom Goes Mercy

"If there were such a thing as exact justice, it could only be administered by one who knew the inmost thoughts of a man to whom they were meting it out. I, who knew the families, who knew the origin of every cell that went into their body, who could tell of the emotion that sways the actions of that piece of human clay, could not do it.

"Your Honor can not do it. If you can you are wise. And with wisdom goes mercy. No one would wish them death, with understanding, honest, with himself, and his life. No one who has tried and who has failed, can tell what justice is. And the more we try and the more responsibility we take do we realize that the one thing, mercy, pays.

"Your honor, where is there a human heart that would not be satisfied with placing these boys behind the bars? Where is a human heart who could ask for more?"

Plea for Prison Term.

"Is not that a part of the finer instincts that are slowly developing? Must I ask for these boys for mercy by spending the rest of their lives in prison? It should not be hard to get that much mercy in any court in 1924."

"These boys left this body down in the culvert and then came back," he said. "They telephoned first to home that they would be late for supper. Here surely was an act of consideration on the part of Leopold. Dr. Krohn said he must be able to think and act because he could do this. But the boy who through habit that had telephoned home, had not a thought or a shudder about taking the life of Bobby Franks. He was in the habit of doing what he did, that is all, but in the presence of life and death and a cruel death, he had no tremor, no thought. I will tell the court why a little farther on.

"They got their dinner, they parked the bloody automobile in front of Leopold's house, they cleaned it to some extent that night and left it standing in front of their own home. Took it in the barn next day.

Indicates Diseased Minds.

"Then we find this boy, Richard Loeb, discussing the case with his friends and newspaper reporters. My experience is that the last person a constant criminal would associate with is a reporter. He even shuns them when there is no chance for detection.

"But Loeb picks up the reporter and he tells him he has read a great number of detective stories and that the man who could tell about it was to go down to a drug store on Sixty-Third Street and he would go with him. He takes him back to his home, having a glorious time. Yet, he is perfectly oriented, according to Dr. Krohn. Is there any question about the condition of his mind. Why was he doing it? It did him good to hear other people talk about it.

"Your honor has had experience with criminals. If you have not, you can ask the State's Attorney.

"Was there such a thing heard of before on land or sea? When a man commits a crime, doesn't he keep as far away from it as he can? Does he go to reporters and help them solve it? There isn't a single feature of this whole case but which indicates diseased minds.

"I'm not asking for much in this case. Let me see now. Is it customary to get anything on a plea of guilty? How about the State's Attorney? Don't they give you something on such a plea? How many times has your honor listened to the State's Attorney come into this court with a man charged with robbery with a gun and on a condition of plea of guilty accept a minimum sentence?

"How many times has the State's Attorney asked in this and other courts a sentence of death? How many times have others done it, not twice out of a thousand cases, I will venture to say.

"How many times has the writ been changed? How many times has mercy come, even from the State's Attorney's office? Yet for some reason, here is a case with two minor boys, with immature minds involved and the State's Attorney asked that the death penalty must be invoked.

"Your Honor, would be turning back over the long long road we traveled, from the protection of youth and infancy, from the treatment of children, turning back to the barbarous days, if that request is met.

"You would be dealing a staggering blow to all that has been done in Chicago for the last 20 years in the protection of infancy.

"And for what? Just because people are talking about it. It would mean that in this land of ours, where newspapers are plentiful, a Court cannot herp feeling the great pressure of public opinion.

"I believe these boys should not be at large, that they are immature and irresponsible.

"How many times has assault with intent to rob or kill been changed in these courts to assault and battery? How many times have felonies been waived to assault with a deadly weapon? We are asking that these boys be let off with a prison sentence for life. That is the mercy we are asking from this Court and which we should not be compelled to ask for, but should have by right. Three hundred and forty murderers in 10 years have pleaded guilty in this county. All the young who pleaded guilty were released. One only was hanged and he a man of 40 years. And yet they say we come here with a preposterous plea for mercy.

Reasons for Death Demand.

"Your honor, now let me go a little farther. What are the chief reasons for this demand for hanging? First because the families are wealthy and second because it was a weird and uncanny murder.

"If these boys are hanged, there will be a pall over the land that day that will hark back to ages which we are supposed to have left behind.

"I wonder if it would help other children to hang these boys. Mr. Savage, young and enthusiastic says it would, but has he ever read anything, science, for instance? Did you ever hear a man speak with the assurance that he did? What about this crime and its punishment? Perhaps I know less than anyone, but I have studied that subject as developed for the last 100 years. And as you study it, more men tell you that a hanging for a crime does not satisfy justice. Yet Mr. Savage says that if these boys are hanged there will be no more murders."

Darrow told of the heavy penalties imposed for poaching, and similar misdemeanors in the old days.

"They burned witches," he said, "until juries refused to convict and judges said they would not sentence.

"It is a fact that as mercy has tempered stern justice, crime has decreased."

Crime Inspired by Publicity.

"Your Honor, how many kidnapings and attempts to secure ransom have occurred since the time this crime was committed? Dozens of them, inspired solely by the wide accounts given the Franks details, which have appealed to the weak-minded.

"What if this hanging goes through? Newspapers throughout the land will print columns of its grewsome aspects. What good will it do the public? Will it make the human heart softer or make it harder? If your Honor does what they expect you to do, what influence would it have on the children who would devour its details? Will it make them better?

"The question needs no answer. You can answer it from the human heart. What influence will it have on unborn babes? What influence will it have on the psychology of fathers and mothers? Must I need argue that cruelty only breeds cruelty, that hatred only breeds hatred? If there is any way to kill evil and hatred, it is through cherity and love and understanding.

"Childish, purposeless and without the slightest analysis, these boys committed this crime, and yet Christian men in a Christian community want to hang them.

"Every precedent, every bit of logic, urges this Court to have mercy. I am not pleading so much for these boys as I am for the infinite number of others, those who may go down in the storm without aid.

Nursed Like Hot-House Plants.

"Now, your Honor, who are these two boys? Leopold has a wonderful, brilliant mind, no doubt about it. Loeb was of unusual intelligence, no question about that. Nursed from their youths like hothouse plants and urged to learn more and more and more. Dr. Krohn says that they are intelligent. But it takes something besides brains to make a human being function normally in the world. The emotional life keeps organisms in action until death. Intellect does not count so much."

Darrow illustrated this point by citing a mental prodigy who graduated a few years ago from Harvard with honors at the age of 14.

"Today he is looking for a job," he added, "burned out; a nonentity.

"Without the emotional life, the brain means nothing.

"How was it with these two boys? All teaching and training appeals not only to the intellectual but the emotional life. A child is born with no ideas of right and wrong. Gradually the parents and teacher tell him things.

"We build up habits so they will make inhibitions again conduct when the emotions come in conflict with the duties of life. Doctors Singer and Church admitted exactly what I am saying now. If the instinct is strong enough and the habit weakens, the former rules.

Habit and Training.

"Suppose one sees a $1000 bill and there is no one present. He may have the impulse to take. If he does not, it will be because his emotional nature revolts at it, through habit and training. That is why people do not commit what we call crime. All education means is the building up of habit, so that certain conduct revolts you.

"Without emotional life, you cannot do it. Some have tried and failed.

"How about this case? The State put on three experts and Dr. Krohn—I mean three alienists and Dr. Krohn," and Darrow went on, to describe the June 1 conference in the State's Attorney's office when the State experts met the defendants.

"The only thing they noted, which all seemed to agree upon, was that they noticed a lack of emotion on the part of either boy," said Darrow. "That was their testimony, not ours.

"Now, why haven't they? I don't know. I know what causes the emotional life, that it comes from the nerves, muscles, the endocrine glands; that it is the most important part of life. And I know that without it men cannot live. They cannot feel what you and I feel when we get moral shocks.

"Poor Dickie Loeb felt influences existing ages before he was born. Is he to blame if his machine is imperfect? Who is to blame? I don't know. I know that somewhere in the past, something slipped. It may be a defective nerve, a defective heart or endocrine glands, but something happened, and nothing happens in this world without a cause.

"Do I need to argue? Does anybody need to more than glance at it? Does any man with a fair intellect and decent regard for human life find it hard to understand this situation?

"Yet we are forced to fight, for what? Forced to plead that one boy 18 and another 19 may be permitted to live in solitude, in disgrace and spend all their years in the penitentiary.

"Forced to ask this court and the State's Attorney to be merciful enough to let these two boys be locked up in prison until they die.

"I sometimes wonder if I am dreaming; if in the first quarter of the twentieth century there has come back into the heart of man the taste and feeling for the lust of blood that permeated the primitive man. What do they want? Tell me is the lifetime for the young, spent behind prison bars, is that enough for this mad act?

"Why not read something? Why not study something? Why not think, instead of blindly calling for death?" he asked.

Two Theories of Responsibility.

"There are at least two theories of responsibility. One is that one purposefully and malignantly designs and commits it or that he is possessed of the devil. But why was he possessed with the devil? Could he help it? Very few people believe that doctrine any more.

"Intelligent people now know that a man is the result of the heredity that is back of him. Take a normal boy, do you suppose he could have taken another boy into the auto and without any reason hit him over the head and killed him?

Darrow again referred to the June 1 meeting in the State's Attorney's office and "guessed" that Crowe had arranged it because he wished to forestall a defense on grounds of legal insanity.

"Am I right," he asked turning to the prosecutor, and added as the latter nodded:

"I thought so."

"On that Sunday afternoon," he went on, "before we got a chance the State called in some alienists and they sat around and heard these boys tell of their crime. These alienists were not holding an examination for insanity, it was an inquest.

"What is the truth about it? Dr. Church said it was not a good opportunity for an examination, so did another. What did Dr. Krohn say: 'Fine, fine opportunity, the best one ever had.' Because as he put it, they were 'stripped naked, their souls were naked.' Dr. Church and Singer said the boys lacked emotion. Dr. Krohn said they had it.

Watermelon Days.

"But for 16 years Dr. Krohn has been peddling perjury. The man on the street knows it, Mr. Crowe knows it, this Court knows it, and I will stake the lives of these two boys on that statement and throw in my own for good measure.

"Dr. Krohn told the story of the interview and told almost twice as much as the two who preceded him. And how he told it. When he testified, it carried me back to the time when I was a boy and used to eat watermelons and delight in getting wet from ear to ear. When I heard him ask for the blood of the life of these two boys I could see his mouth water.

"If Dr. Krohn was a real physician, with ideals of the highest, his duty would be to save life, regardless of whose it was, to administer to the saving of life.

"But I can never imagine a real physician, gloating over his testimony and actuated only by cash, as Dr Krohn did."

Darrow heard the noon whistle, paused, and Court adjourned until Monday morning.

POEM QUOTED BY DARROW IN PLEA TO SAVE YOUNG SLAYERS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.

THE poem by A. E. Housman, quoted by Clarence S. Darrow, in his plea to save Loeb from the gallows, was as follows:

THE CULPRIT.

The night my father got me,
His mind was not on me,
He did not plague his fancy,
To know if I should be
The man you see.

The day my mother bore me
She was a fool and glad
For all the pain I caused her
Because she bore the lad
That borne she had.

My father and my mother
Out of the light they lie,
The warrant could not find them
So here am only I—
Must hang so high.

Oh, let not man remember,
The soul that God forgot
But fetch the county 'kerchief
And noose me in its knot.
And I will rot.

And so the game is ended.
That should not have begun
My father and my mother
They had a likely son,
And I have none.

Houseman is the author of "A Shropshire Lad," and "Last Poems." Both volumes contain poems of great beauty, but frequently of a gloomy tone.

HERRIOT WINS CONFIDENCE VOTE ON THE LONDON PACT

French Chamber Acts Following His Reply to Critics on Reparations Agreement.

RATIFICATION IN REICHSTAG LIKELY

Prospect for Getting Decisive Vote Next Week Is Said to Be Considered Highly Favorable.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The Chamber of Deputies early this morning voted confidence in the Herriot government by 336 to 204, following the long debate in the chamber on the government's action at the London conference.

Premier Herriot interrupted a three days' debate in the Chamber over the approval of the Dawes plan last night and turned on his critics who had been assailing "American greed" and "British imperialism" and praised Poincare's policy.

The French Premier presented again his defense of the agreement reached at the London international conference as the best possible under the circumstances. His first applause came from the entire chamber when he said:

'In the new functioning of the Reparations Commission, we put in an American. We put in an American everywhere we could in the committees operating under the Dawes plan—a neutral, yes, indeed—a neutral, one of those neutrals who, when the war was half over, came and joined us because we had the right on our side."

The Premier, excoriating the critics of America and the Allies, declared that 'the material and moral forces of the Americans, their sense of right and justice will assure France obtaining her due. "The London conference marks an epochal date in the history of the reparations question."

What He Found in U. S.

The Premier added: 'I went to the United States last year and in liberal circles, among church people, in universities—among all these good people who aided us during the war—I found the belief that France had the right to be paid. But I could see that the question of taking over territory disturbed them and with what anguish they asked when France would leave the Ruhr."

Herriot took much the same stand on interallied debts as Deputy Louis Martin, who had previously advocated that the debts were contributions to a common cause.

"Money itself is ammunition," declared the Premier. "It was lent by rich nations to those not so rich for the common cause. I have always maintained it is impossible that we cannot get satisfaction."

The Government head scored by an appeal to all parties to aid in disarming Germany. In this respect he declared: "That is the center of Europe must first be disarmed. It is the nation of which it has been said that war is its principal industry. But we must let it live—that is just—we must let her resume her place in Europe in the interests of everybody".

Herriot concluded: "We must reconstruct a solid financial armature for our country. We must regularize, simplify and stabilize throughout. Failure of the London accords would mean for you a resumption of the policy of force. We do not bring complete peace, but we bring to you the first fruits of hope."

The Premier was acclaimed when he finished his speech.

Herriot's most striking comments on the Dawes plan in his speech include the following:

"The only way to halt the exodus of German capital abroad is to establish the stability of German money. No law can make the return of capital obligatory; therefore the only way to realize the conclusions of the second experts' committee is to put the report of the first Dawes committee into operation.

"We demand eventual collective action by the allies in the case of Germany defying the Dawes plan, but we intend to maintain the possibility of France's isolated action in case her interests, or to safeguard our rights, obliges us to resort to such action.'

"We have introduced an American citizen into the Reparation Commission. But is that not elementary prudence if we wish to achieve the large operation that the Dawes plan represents? That citizen must be authorized by his Government. Thus, if German failures occur, they will occur under his control and he will then bring us great material and moral forces.

Money for Germany.

"The critics of the Dawes plan say that we are going to give

"In the new functioning of the Reparations Commission, we put in an American. We put in an American everywhere we could in the committees operating under the Dawes plan—a neutral, yes, indeed—a neutral, one of those neutrals who, when the war was half over, came and joined us because we had the right on our side."

The Premier, excoriating the critics of America and the Allies, declared that 'the material and moral forces of the Americans, their sense of right and justice will assure France obtaining her due. The London conference marks an epochal date in the history of the reparations question."

What He Found in U. S.

The Premier added: 'I went to the United States last year and in liberal circles, among church people, in universities—among all these good people who aided us during the war—I found the belief that France had the right to be paid. But I could see that the question of taking over territory disturbed them and with what anguish they asked when France would leave the Ruhr."

Herriot took much the same stand on interallied debts as Deputy Louis Martin, who had previously advocated that the debts were contributions to a common cause.

"Money itself is ammunition," declared the Premier. "It was lent by rich nations to those not so rich for the common cause. I have always maintained it is impossible that we cannot get satisfaction."

The Government head scored by an appeal to all parties to aid in disarming Germany. In this respect he declared: "That is the center of Europe must first be disarmed. It is the nation of which it has been said that war is its principal industry. But we must let it live—that is just—we must let her resume her place in Europe in the interests of everybody".

Herriot concluded: "We must reconstruct a solid financial armature for our country. We must regularize, simplify and stabilize throughout. Failure of the London accords would mean for you a resumption of the policy of force. We do not bring complete peace, but we bring to you the first fruits of hope."

The Premier was acclaimed when he finished his speech.

Herriot's most striking comments on the Dawes plan in his speech include the following:

"The only way to halt the exodus of German capital abroad is to establish the stability of German money. No law can make the return of capital obligatory; therefore the only way to realize the conclusions of the second experts' committee is to put the report of the first Dawes committee into operation.

"We demand eventual collective action by the allies in the case of Germany defying the Dawes plan, but we intend to maintain the possibility of France's isolated action in case her interests, or to safeguard our rights, obliges us to resort to such action.

"We have introduced an American citizen into the Reparation Commission. But is that not elementary prudence if we wish to achieve the large operation that the Dawes plan represents? That citizen must be authorized by his Government. Thus, if German failures occur, they will occur under his control and he will then bring us great material and moral force."

Money for Germany.

"The critics of the Dawes plan say that we are going to give money to Germany. Certainly the sums of 800,000,000 gold marks will enable her to stabilize her money, but also immediately to begin payments to the allies.

"The Dawes plan brings us considerable advantages for deliveries in kind. It is not making a present to Germany to impose a body of controllers upon her.

"Must Do What Is Right."

Herriot, defending the Dawes plan and the London agreement during debate over parliamentary approval necessary to final signature of the accords next Saturday, provided Germany is ready to sign, took as his theme, "Francemust do what is right."

Frankly admitting that "we bring you the first fruits of hopeful," not 'complete peace," he told the chamber that any of the deputies would have done as he did under the circumstances. The Premier tried to show that he could not use the Ruhr as a club at the London conference, because M. Poincare in behalf of France had given his word that it was not a military occupation, but merely protection for the economic mission. So, when the mission was withdrawn, why should the soldiers stay?

"France," continued the Premier, "whether represented by you or by me, could not say: 'I will keep my promise if I am paid.' I did all I could at London, even supporting a thesis in which I did not believe. But you also would have revolted and recognized that it was impossible to bargain in a question that was simply a matter of what was right."

Marshal Foch became an issue for a moment when Deputy Schmidt averred that the Marshal had said publicly: "The policy of isolation is detestable." The Deputy added that Foch had always favored M. Herriot's views.

German Action at London Defended by Ministers.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther, the three German delegates to the London international conference, today gave the Reichstag a formal accounting on their stewardship of German interest in the settlement of the reparations problem. That the Government made out a strong case for itself was the concurring opinion of the ranks of the middle parties and the Socialists, while the official declaration is believed to have had a decisively sobering effect upon the Nationalists.

Ludendorff's Fascisti party and the Communists were the only heckling factors at today's session. The foreign minister's spirited defense of the German procedure at London netted him frequent outbursts of vociferous applause, not only because of his effective recapitulation of the negotiations with Premier Herriot but also for the caustic manner in which he disposed of the heckling interruptions.

Tonight the Government's prospects of obtaining a decisive majority for the ratification of the London pact are viewed as highly favorable, especially as the Hergt-Von Tirpitz party has not yet succeeded in uniting its Reichstag delegation on a definite attitude.

Ruhr Demands Action.

Meanwhile scores of telegrams from the occupied areas and delegations from the Ruhr representing political, civic, social, industrial and labor organizations, regardless of partisan affiliations, are bombarding the Reichstag with petitions demanding an unequivocal ratification of the agreement on the Dawes plan reached in London.

The industrialists and "big business" generally also are impressing upon the Nationalists the imperative necessity of accepting the Government's drafts on the Dawes bills and the London protocol. In addition, effective pressure is being brought to bear on the recalcitrant oppositionists by Dr. Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, who is warning them of the financial, currency and credit perils involved in nonratification.

All the Reichstag parties will debate the measures necessary for putting the Dawes plan into effect, Monday and Tuesday, after which a vote on ratification will be taken. If the Government fails to obtain the needed majority, it is proposed to dissolve the Reichstag. If this is done, President Ebert, by virtue of article 48 of the Constitution, will empower the Marx-Stresemann ministry to ratify the London pact. The latter expedient, however, is now viewed as an extreme eventuality as the parliamentary situation is expected to take a turn favorable to the Government before Tuesday.

Stresemann Fighting.

Foreign Minister Stresemann, in a fighting speech, defended the German delegation's work at London and severely criticised the attitude of the Nationalists. He pointed out the difficulty the German representatives had in inducing Premier Herriot even to discuss the Ruhr question. The speaker emphatically insisted the London negotiations clearly proved that Germany could not obtain the evacuation of the Ruhr by merely asking for it.

The existence of any secret agreement connected with the forthcoming Franco-German commercial negotiation, Herr Stresemann denied. He claimed that the immediate evacuation of Offenbourg and Appenweier and the impending evacuation of other areas of the Rhineland constituted a great success for the German delegation and were proof of M. Herriot's good will. The German Government, he continued, would do its utmost to endeavor to induce France to realize that the fulfillment of the Dawes report required an early evacuation of the Ruhr.

The Foreign Minister, in conclusion, expressed the conviction that the Powers interested in Germany's economic recovery would never again permit any one to seize pledges by means of sanctions. He said that the road from Versailles to London had been a chain of humiliation and threats. The London conference was not the final goal, he explained, and it might prove to be the beginning of a movement resulting in the collaboration of all the nations:

"The Government," he declared, "therefore asks the Reichstag to give Germany this opportunity to anticipate a prosperous future."

Finance Minister's Views.

Minister of Finance Luther, who addressed the Reichstag after the Chancellor, asserted that the consequences would be grave if the Reichstag rejected the London pact. He pointed to the continually increasing number of unemployed and said that in the Ruhr alone 80,000 miners were idle.

He declared that if the pact were rejected the Reichsbank's credit policy would have to be restricted, agriculturalists would be unable to obtain credits, foreign loans would be withdrawn and the time would come when the Reich Federal States and Communes would be unable to fulfill their obligations. The entire economic situation forced the Government to accept the pact, he continued. The burdens imposed were certainly heavy, but it was also certain that an improvement in Germany's position could be expected only if the pact were accepted.

The Finance Minister stated his belief that the loan of 800,000,000 gold marks would be the forerunner of other foreign credits and he expressed the hope that on the basis of the London pact the German people, by tenacious labor and thrift, would be able to begin the work of achieving their economic recovery under bearable conditions.

Earth Defeats Mars In Race Past the Sun

Noses Into 128,000,000 Mile Gap at Speed of 200 Miles per Minute at Finish.

By ROWLAND THOMAS.
Staff Correspondent New York World and Post-Dispatch.

MARS and the earth, speeding round the sun in the same relative direction as a home-run hitter circling the bases, counter-clockwise, are coming down the home stretch in a celestial sweepstake race. Earth on the rail, and traveling 66,600 miles an hour to Mars' 53,928, is the sure-thing winner. The precise instant of her victorious finish can even be predicted.

At 7 o'clock Friday night, Eastern standard time, the earth nosed up into a 128,000,000-mile gap between the sun and Mars. For just a moment she was like a bead strung on an imaginary thread stretched between the other two bodies. Then, with her excess speed of 211.2 miles a minute, 3.52 miles a second, earth began to forge ahead. The long awaited and widely heralded "perihelion opposition" of Mars was over.

Such oppositions, when the sun and Mars as seen from the earth are 180 degrees apart and exactly opposite each other in the heavens, occur periodically at intervals of about 15 years. But this one is notable for occurring when Mars is within a week of being in perihelion—at that point in its egg-shaped orbit closest to the sun—while the earth in only seven weeks past its own aphelion, or point of greatest remoteness for the solar furnace.

Closer Than in 120 Years.

In consequence, the planets came within 34,630,000 miles of each other, closer than they have been for 120 years past or will be again for as may years more.

Because of its extreme closeness to both earth and sun, Mars at present is one of the most conspicuous objects in the heavens, shining with a brightness four and a half times as great as that displayed during an aphelion opposition, and more than fiftyfold its brilliancy at remoter parts of its orbit.

It was below the horizon and invisible here at the moment when the speeding earth was closest to it. At midnight it was directly in the south, on the meridian, a few hours later setting as the morning star.

For some time astronomers all over the world have been preparing to get close-ups of Mars with their telescopes. The observers at Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., where the late Percival Lowell carried on his lifelong study of the planet which confirmed his belief that intelligent life exists on it, reported that on the southern hemisphere of Mars, where the polar ice cap is now melting under the rays of what is there a springtide sun, vast areas of what may be continents, marshland, prairies and the beds of dried-up oceans are constantly changing in appearance.

ROBBERS TAKE AUTO AND $4000 IN GEMS ON FLOOR

Party Seeking to Outwit Thieves Drop Jewelry, but Highwaymen Flee With Their Machine.

The East St. Louis police are looking for five robbers who did the unexpected thing Friday night. Instead of searching the five members of an automobile party they held up at Fourteenth and State streets, these highwaymen ordered their victims from the machine and drove it away. And the victims, thinking they would be searched, had dropped their jewelry, valued at $4000, to the floor of the car in hope the robbers would overlook it.

The party, composed of Stephen Knowles, a commission broker of 619 North Fourteenth street, his wife and son, James, and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Virgin of 621 North Fourteenth street, was returning from a pleasure trip in Knowles' machine. Mrs. Virgin had left most of her jewelry at home, but Mrs. Knowles was wearing two diamond rings of more than a carat each and her husband had a 3½-carat ring. They had often discussed what to do in case of a hold-up and had decided to take friends' advice, which was "Drop your jewelry to the floor of the car. The robbers may overlook it."

As Knowles turned his machine from State street into Fourteenth street at 8:15 p. m. a touring car ranged alongside. It carried five men. The driver forced Knowles into the curb and all five robbers displayed revolvers. Two got out and ordered the Knowles party out of the car.

"We'll let you search us," said Knowles, thinking to satisfy the holdup men with what money they had.

"We won't search you. We want that car," replied the leader.

The interview occurred while the street corner was busy with pedestrians, but no one seemed to realize what was taking place, and the Knowles party feared to make an outcry. They were obliged to stand on the sidewalk and watch the two robbers drive the Marmon away, diamonds and all, while the other thieves followed in their automobile.

Mrs. Virgin told police that she had left her jewelry at home and had worried throughout the ride lest burglars break in and steal it.

Light Flashes on Mars Described by Scientist

Schaer, Swiss Astronomer, Made Observations From Hut on Glaciers 12,000 Feet Above Sea Level.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT,
Staff Correspondent of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

JUNGFRAUJOCH, Switzerland, Aug. 23.—Here last night, in his observatory on the top of Europe, nearly 12,000 feet above sea level, the famous Swiss astronomer, Schaer, planned to observe Mars during its closest approach to the earth. In the evening when I reached the lofty observatory, he offered to let me pass the night's vigil with him, looking into the thick carpeting of stars reflected from the glacier on top of which his hut is built. A storm, however, obscured vision of the planet last night.

Prof. Schaer installed his observatory just beyond the mouth of the tunnel of the Funicular railway, which leads almost to the top of the Jungfrau. It is surrounded by glaciers and crags, where the wind is forever swirling snow over sheets of eternal ice. Before the storm came, the heavens were filled with handfuls of brilliant stars that looked almost within reach. We seemed hung halfway between two worlds.

Two Miles Nearer Mars.

Prof. Schaer had hoped for two tangible results, signs of water or something analagous, and weather signs denoting atmosphere, both of which might denote the possible existence of life on the neighbor planet. Despite the difficulties and discomforts of life at this altitude in the midst of glaciers and blizzards, he built his observatory here because it put him two miles nearer Mars and gave him that much less atmosphere to look through.

Observations he made at Geneva during June indicated a heavy white cap of ice or snow on the Martian pole and extending down more than a third of the distance to the equator. Since he came up here this cap has dwindled, leading him to believe it is melting or evaporating. He believes he has also noted clouding effects.

On Thursday night, when Mars already had drawn very close to the opposition point, Prof. Schaer had clear observation, and was rewarded with a sight of a new phenomenon. He saw on Mars several distinct flashes of light. They looked pale yellow, showing but an instant on the tiny disc, an inch in diameter, which is all even powerful telescopes can make of earth's brother planet 34,000,000 miles away.

What these flashes may be he does not know or pretend to judge. Twice since he came to this impressive spot he has glimpsed indications of them, and under the scientific surface of the star-gazer I could detect some of the excitement of possible discovery. I asked him to give me an idea what they were like.

"Like electricity," he said, "yellow green, but fugitive, appearing only for the fraction of a second on the disc. It can't be compared to any earthly light. It's too vast, too vague, and the same time too enveloping. Every moment Mars is visible and no snowstorm interferes, Prof. Alfred Kollicker and I have been watching for stronger indications."

"Could you call it a signal from Mars?" I asked.

A Powerful Manifestation.

"I can't explain, but only record what I have seen," he answered. "But it must be a powerful manifestation of energy, whatever it may be, to be visible across such a gulf of space."

I asked him about the chances that Mars might send a radio message.

"That is an infantile idea," he commented. "If there are beings there, what reason to believe they have mentalities like ours? And even if they were like us, what reason to believe they are radio fans?"

He also described as "childish fancifulness" all the talk about throwing light with reflectors on an alpine glacier for the "Martians" to see. He hopes rather to obtain some genuine scientific information including a verification and explanation of the greeny-yellow flashes.

When it becomes colder with autumn, and the air undulations are less distracting, Prof. Schaer hopes to have surer data. The sum of the scientific deductions he gave to me today indicates increasing knowledge of Mars. The flashes he considers one of the two chief fruits of his observations, the other being the apparent cloudiness of the surface of Mars as it approached the sun to its perihelion.

Water on Planet.

"The spectroscope has never made it absolutely certain," he said, "that there is water on Mars, but whatever substance it is which turns into vapor has been very noticeable during the past few days. Large sections of the surface, previously observed with clearness, have become obscured. If the vaporizing substance is water, this means clouds. Many canals known to all students from Flammarion's globe of Mars are invisible.

If the invisibility comes from cloudiness, it would seem to indicate intenser heat as Mars neared the sun, and increased evaporation. The rapid change in the polar caps would bear out such a theory. If there is water on Mars, what we see at the poles is snow. Earlier this summer the caps extended down for thirty or forty degrees from the pole. Now they extend about fifteen degrees.

Among the regions affected in this way he mentioned especially the Salia Lacus, which as seen from the Jungfrau at present shows much smaller than previously, while the four canals uniting it with other landmarks are all much stronger. This is also the region where the indications of flashes were clearest. So when colder nights give better seeing he hopes even with Mars farther away to get something more tangible than what he considers the present strong indications that Mars has an atmosphere, water, and electricity.

Hundreds Gather on Mount Wilson to Take Look at Mars.

CARNEGIE OBSERVATORY, MOUNT WILSON, Cal., Aug. 23.—Inquisitive Southern Californians to the number of 700 gathered at this mountain shrine of science last night to meet Mars, the red planet.

It was a long but patient reception line that former nea rthe high 66-inch telescope where tolerantly smiling astronomers introduced each visitor in turn to the sidereal guest of honor. The latter's acknowledgment of the introduction was but a faint red floe so far as most of the peerlug pilgrims were concerned, though some declared they could see Mars polar caps, moons and even canals in the quarter-inch disc that shone down at them from a distance of some 34,000,000 miles.

Life Seems Intense on Mars, Flammarion Reports.

By the Associated Press.

JUVISY, France, Aug. 23.—Camille Flammarion, octogenarian French astronomer, spent most of last night watching Mars at his observatory here and today he seemed to have all of his old enthusiasm regarding the planet rearoused.

"Life seems quite as intense on Mars as on the earth," he said, "but it seems impossible to divine by what methods the two humanities will some day communicate with each other, doubtless by telegraphic radiation."

MARS OBSERVED AT ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY

The Rev. Father Shannon Discusses Popular Theories Concerning Planet.

The current visit of the planet Mars, at about 35,000,000 miles distance from the earth, its sister planet, was observed at St. Louis University last night by the Rev. James Shannon, S. J., instructor in astronomy, and several students.

"The planet was visible from 7:30 to 8 p. m.," Father Shannon reported later, "but at the latter hour haze and clouds shut it out from view for the rest of the evening. Although the 'seeing' was very poor during the half-hour, the south polar-cap and the regions of reddish orange in the northern hemisphere were plainly visible in the six-inch and three-inch telescopes used." A clearer view came in at 10 p. m., it was announced.

Similar observations will be continued throughout the coming week. Father Shannon announced, as the visitor's departure after call Friday night, is a mere matter of minute mathematics and not terrestrial hospitality. In response to a request for a popular explanation of the planetary reunion, Father Shannon said:

"Mars, like the Earth, circulates around the Sun in an elliptical orbit, which approaches moderately close to the circular form. Mars is farther out from the sun than the earth, and it takes it 687 days to get around, Sometimes Mars and Mother Earth are 234 million miles apart, again as close together as 49,000,000 miles—while their twin rotations on this occassion rave brought them even closer, Hence the great interest of astronomers, Views Not Satisfying.

"And yet it may be confessed that the views, of the ruddy planet we can get, even now, are very far from satisfying. For Mars is a small world, only 4200 miles in diameter, and hence resenting only one-fourth of the surface of the earth. Its surface is, roughly, four times that of our moon, but it is even now 150 times as far away.

"Hence, even in the largest telescope it is not nearly as satisfying an object as the moon, as it has to be magnified about 75 times in comparison, to appear to the eye as large as the moon, viewed by the eye unaided. Nevertheless, astronomers and laymen find much of interest in observing it. Mars rotates on its axis, making one complete revolution in 24 hours, 37 minutes. Hence any markings noticed on the surface can be seen to move across the field of view as the planet turns. So, too, the appearance of the surface is very different according to the time of the Martian day at which it is observed.

"Just now the southern hemisphere (for Mars, rotating as it does on its axis, has north and south poles, equator and northern and southern hemispheres) is tilted toward us and hence toward the sun. Therefore the southern hemisphere of Mars is having its spring tide or early summer. But if we wish to designate the Martian seasons with reference to the planet's northern hemisphere, as we do on earth, we shall have to say that Mars as a whole is having its late fall or winter corresponding to November with us."

Interest in Ice Cap.

Be that as it may, the southern hemisphere, turned toward the sun, is thawing out the ice-cap which during the long and cold Martian winter accumulated round the south pole and for great distances on every side. Yerkes Observatory reports the observation of a great ice-cap whose area is diminishing. Astronomers will be interested in watching the shrinking of this ice-cap and the springing up in its wake of what has been supposed to be vegetation."

"Belief that there is life on Mars," said Father Shannon, "is a supposition, a big supposition. Of course, it is the planet with conditions most nearly similar to those of earth. Belief that beings on Mars might have intelligence superior to that of earth is another supposition, even though Mars is older. My personal opinion is that mankind hasn't gained materially in intelligence in 5000 years; we have applied science, but I think the ancient Greeks were as intelligent as we are.

"How could Mars signal to us? How would the signals get through space? Earth signals (radio) travel around the globe, we think, not away from it.

"Astronomers may gain additional astronomical knowledge by observation of Mars at this opposition. It will take time and study of their observations to determine what is learned. The canals that have been noted on Mars certainly are not like ordinary canals; perhaps they are oceans. The Panama Canal assuredly could not be seen from another planet. Seasons of the year on Mars are similar to those on earth and perhaps the 'canals' are vegetation shooting up."

St. Louis University has received numerous calls from persons wishing information about Mars or a chance to observe it. The university has no permanent observatory.

PLANE STOPS HERE ON 1500-MILE TRIP IN DAY

Army Machine Distributes Posters Advertising Dayton Air Races.

An army De Haviland airplane decorated with flags, bunting and advertising posters announcing the 1924 International Air Races at Dayton, O., Oct. 2, 3 and 4, stopped at Scott Field, near Belleville, for half an honr yesterday in the midst of a 1500-mile flight circling in one day from McCook Field, Dayton.

Withm Lieut. James Doolittle at thethrottle, and Roy Langham, as cbserver, the plane left McCook Field at 4:50 a. m. and circled over Toledo, Detroit and Chicago, dropping literature over each city. At Scott Field, the only scheduled landing place, the flyers left a supply of circulars announcing the air races, and then took off at 11 a. m. to fly over Memphis, Nashville,

The flyers breezed into Dayton at 7:30 p. m., after 15 hours in the air, with the one landing at Scott Field. They reported encounters with a dense fog over Lage Michigan and a heavy thunderstorm over Memphis, but beyond a severe coat of sunburn they were none the worse for their trip. Louisville and Cincinnati.

The International Air Races this year will be held at Wilbur Wright Field at Dayton and preparations are being made to accommodate 200,000 spectators. Last year the event took place at Lambert-St. Louis Field here.

PRINTERS' STRIKE COST ST. LOUIS AT LEAST $1,000,000

Union Paid $550,312 in Benefits and Employers Expended a Like Amount.

40 FIRMS STILL FIGHT SHORT WEEK

Walkout, Which Will End Officially Next Sunday, Called an Almost "Complete Success."

The strike of union printers in the United States and Canada for the 44-hour week, which began May 1, 1921, and has been called off by the International Typographical Union to end officially next Sunday, has cost the strikers and employers a sum estimated by them at $25,000,000.

The international union acknowledges expenditures in strike benefits amounting to $15,829,140.68, out of a total of $17,389,411.17 collected in assessments against working members. These assessments ended July 5. Local employing printers said the employers spent at least $10,000,000 in the United States and Canada to defeat the strike.

Both sides claim victory in the long struggle, which was one of the hardest fought industrial battles ever waged in the United States, and yet both sides acknowledge that they will not soon welcome another such contest.

In St. Louis the strike cost the union $550,312.17, paid in strike benefits. The employers, who organized the Employing Printers' Association here to fight the strike, say they expended and lent close to a half million dollars.

Cost City $1,000,000.

But this does not represent the total losses in St. Louis, for the strike benefits were considerably less than the salaries that would have been drawn by the men, and an employer said it never would be known what the shops that held out lost in reorganization costs. Conservatively speaking, therefore, the strike cost this city in excess of $1,000,000.

St. Lous was one of the pivotal battlegrounds of this strike, and although the union claims victory here, the employers point to about 35 local plants that closed their doors against the union three years ago, and are today operating nonunion shops.

Among the largest of these are the Con P. Curran Printing Co., Blackwell-Wielandy Book and Stationery Co., Buxton & Skinner Printing and Stationery Co., Skinner & Kennedy Stationery Co., Lambert-Deacon-Hull Printing Co., and the Britt Printing and Publishing Co.

The employers started off with more than 50 local firms signed up to fight to a finish, but desertions brought the number down to 40 or less, and these firms are still holding out.

The firms that capitulated are on the 44-hour-a-week basis, as demanded by the union, but the nonunion shops also won their point and 48 hours constitutes the week in their plants.

Union Has More Men.

Concerning the local situation, William J. Gibbons, president of Typographical Local Union No. 8, said that extensive organization work had added more plants to the union ranks and more men to the union rolls than the union had before the strike.

"In May, 1921, when the strike was called," Gibbons said, "our local had 1220 members. Today we have 1292, an increase of 72. Although 760 men answered the strike call, there were but 22 men on the strike benefit list last month, and 15 of these have since applied for age pensions. Thus it can be seen we had but 22 dependents last month, which shows that practically all the men are working. This city is in better shape for the Typographical Union than before the strike."

The employing printers declined to discuss the situation, further than to remark that most of the new plants claimed by the union as having come into the union ranks since the strike are "one man shops started by individual strikers and subsidized by the union." The employers admit it was a costly fight, but say it was worth the struggle.

The annual report of President Charles P. Howard of the International Typographical Union, read Aug. 11, at the international convention at Toronto, claimed an "almost complete" victory for the 44-hour week, but the employers point to St. Louis, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Philadelphia as points where the unions lost large plants that are now being operated with non-union workmen.

Confined to Commercial Houses.

It was President Howard who gave the figures showing what the strike cost the union, and of the total amount paid out, $4,422,251.91 went to members of Canadian unions on strike.

Members of the union at work throughout the United States and Canada during the strike were called upon to pay assessments as high as 10 per cent of their gross earnings at first. This was reduced to 7½ per cent, then to 5, 3 and finally 1 per cent, until July 5 when the assessment was completely eliminated.

The strike was confined almost entirely to commercial houses, and was conducted for the employers by an organization called the Employing Printers of America, with headquarters in Chicago.

MAN BEATS HORSE IN 6-DAY RUNNING RACE

Human Contestant, 59 Years Old, Eight Miles Ahead When "Saucy Lassie" Quits.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A six-day running contest at the Crystal Palace between a man and a horse ended with a decisive victory for the man.

The human contestant was C. W. Hart, 59 years old, and the horse was "Saucy Lassie," ridden by Jockey Arthur Nightingall.

Both the horse and the man ran 10 hours daily, until tonight, when the horse was withdrawn, and Hart won by eight miles. Hart ran 345 and the horse 337 miles.

ERZBERGER 'SLAYER' TAKEN

German Held in Budapest Identified—Extradition May Be Refused.

By the Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Aug. 23.—One of the four German officers recently taken into custody on suspicion of having assassinated Mathias Erzberger, the former German Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance in August, 1921, has been identified as Heinrich Schulz, one of the slayers, by a German criminal expert sent to Budapest by the Berlin authorities.

Extradition of the men has been requested by the German Government, if they are identified as those connected with the murder, but this may be refused on the ground that they are political, instead of common offenders, and particularly as Germany has not delivered any of the refugees wanted by Hungary for crimes committed during the Bolshevik regime.

A dispatch from Berlin in February, 1922, reported that Heinrich Schulz and Heinrich Tillesen, alleged murderers of former Minister Erzberger, were living in Budapest under the full protection of Hungarian officials and monarchist sympathizers and that two German detectives had been prevented from serving warrants for their arrest.

O'NEIL PLANNING 'HOTTEST CAMPAIGN STATE EVER HAD'

Timothy L. O'Neil, Kansas City implement manufacturer, who announced himself as an independent candidate for Governor, last Friday, wired St. Louis friends yesterday that he was "preparing to make the hottest campaign the State ever had."

O'Neil, who hopes to enlist the support of the friends of former Judge Henry S. Priest, who made the primary campaign on an anti-klan, anti-eighteenth amendment platform, also will stress police reform, economy in government, modern schools and deep waterways. He likewise will stand for completion of the Missouri good roads project as quickly as possible.

Headquarters for O'Neil will be maintained at the Baltimore Hotel, Kansas City. E. C. Heaston of Kansas City is O'Neil's campaign manager.

Backed by Experience

SUPERIOR STOVES & RANGES

Experience counts! For nearly 90 years Bridge-Beach has built stoves, ranges and heating appliances known everywhere for long life, low upkeep and excellent service. All the experience gained in this time is back of the Bridge-Beach Furnace—a fact that means everything to you because it assures thorough home-heating satisfaction.

BRIDGE-BEACH Warm Air Furnaces

Doctors and medical authorities agree that heat such as you get from the Bridge-Beach Furnace is the most healthful and desirable of any. Just consider these facts:

With a Bridge-Beach Furnace you are always sure of "live" air. It heats the air, automatically moistens it and maintains the proper humidity at all times. Then it circulates this moist, heated air and helps to prevent air stagnation.

Bridge-Beach heated air is so healthful that even delicate plants live and thrive anywhere in a Bridge-Beach heated home. Naturally, this desirable condition affects your entire family and makes sore throats, colds, nose irritation and other Winter ailments rare.

The Bridge-Beach grate is extra strong and built on an improved principle. It allows the dead ashes from the outer rim of coal (which burns out before the center) to be shaken down without disturbing the live, red coals in the middle. This is another Bridge-Beach economy feature. Ash pit is unusually large and roomy.

Before you buy any furnace investigate the Bridge-Beach. Send for illustrated book, "Bridge-Beach Furnaces." Write, or phone Colfax 300—ask for Furnace Department.

DAWES DENOUNCES KLAN, DISCUSSES LABOR UNIONS

posed to the klan. Take what I say into your hearts and consciences and think it over calmly. However it may be with the mind, there is no acrimony in the conscience."

Begins Prepared Address.

By the Associated Press.

With the klan discussion ended, Dawes launched into the address he had prepared before leaving Evanston for Maine, and the applause became more general, but there were numerous looks of astonishment as he entered upon his discussion on trade unionism

"The benefits of trade union, honestly administered, are recognized not only by me, but good citizens generally, whether in or out of trade unionism," he asserted. "It has elevated, protected and dignified labor and in so doing it has been an element in the progress of our nation."

Ending his prepared address, Dawes launched into an attack on the La Follette candidacy, declaring that the supreme issue of the campaign was the contest between "the progressive conservatism of Calvin Coolidge" and "the dangerous and untried radicalism of Robert M. La Follette."

"Do we stand on the rock of the constitution?" he continue. "That is the issue in this campaign."

"Politicians of Maine, look higher than the ground beneath your feet and lift your eyes above petty politics to the flag of your country," he concluded.

Discussing the klan, Dawes said:

"I first desire to speak, as Mr. Davis did yesterday, relative to the Ku Klux Klan. I agree with him that it has no proper part in this or any other campaign. But whether proper or not, unfortunately in this campaign a mobilization of radicalism under La Follette, the largest section of which, the Socialists, fly the red flag, is attacking the Constitution of the United States. I cannot agree, therefore, with his inference that its discussion distorts attention from those issues the people must settle in November by their votes. It only emphasizes the greatest issue.

"The question of Mr. Pattangall, which appears in the press this morning is the familiar trick question of the ordinary politician. They are not the cause of the statement I am about to make.

Grouping for Leadership.

"Let me say at once that I recognize that the Ku Klux Klan in many localities and among many people represents only an instinctive grouping for leadership, moving in the interest of law enforcement, which they do not find in many cowardly politicians and office holders.

"But it is not the right way to forward law enforcement. Let us consider for a minute what happened in the State of Oklahoma. Gov. Walton was sometime ago elected Governor of the State. In his campaign he had not preached the doctrine, so it seemed to me at least, which was the proper one to be preached under the American flag. When he was elected, one of his early acts was to remove the president of the University of Agriculture of Oklahoma, a man who believed in the old-fashioned doctrines of the Constitution, to establish which our forebears fought. He placed in that position a Socialist, who was likely to teach the young men of that State some new fashioned doctrines which, to say the least, are not those of constitutional Americanism. He then loosed upon the State of Oklahoma a horde of hardened criminals from the penitentiary. Lax law enforcement prevailed in many places in the State.

Excuse for Secret Organization.

"If there could be an excuse for law-abiding citizens to band themselves together in secret organizations for law enforcement, it existed in Oklahoma and the klan became a powerful organization.

"What happened then? Then back stepped Gov. Walton to the American flag—to which, it seems to me, he had not kept very close up to that time—and called out the militia of the State. Then it was that those who had joined the klan, in the interest of law and order, found themselves arrayed against their flag and the laws of Oklahoma. A situation like that of the Civil War existed and it was averted only by a few clear-headed men.

"And then what happened? There was the application of the only method by which our people can properly settle such differences—the procedure outlined in the Constitution and laws of the State of Oklahoma. Walton was removed from the governorship by the vote of the people and quiet was restored under the orderly process provided by the Constitution and the law.

Lawlessness at Herrin.

"Consider what happened in Williamson County, Illinois, where the town of Herrin is situated. A reign of lawlessness existed. It was marked by the terrible Herrin massacre. It was marked by a general breakdown in respect for law, which indicated that the officers of the county, including the Sheriff, had been intimidated by lawbreakers into inaction. A thousand members of the Ku Klux Klan, without disguise—they were brave men—marched to the office of the Sheriff of Williamson County to protest against the lawlessness in that section. If a secret organization to uphold law and order is justifiable anywhere in our country, it was justifiable there.

"But what happened? Immediately the lawless element formed the Knights of the Flaming Circle and then both sides were afraid to go out at night and a condition was created which actually culminated in civil war and the loss of life. And how, again, was peace established? By the only proper way, in the sending of the militia of the State of Illinois to the scene of the trouble, as provided by law in such cases. The critical situation was settled by it without shedding a drop of blood and the troops were quickly removed.

Appeals to the Adventurers.

"There is much in the Ku Klux Klan which appeals to the adventurous youth.. I remember once whe ntraveling over Illinois, speaking for law enforcement, the Constitution and the American flag some of the American Legion men with me talked to other legion men who had joined the Ku Klux Klan at one of the towns visited. These latter young men believed that they were acting in the interests of law enforcement. They told those who were with me what they were planning to do. They said:

"'There is a bootlegger in our county who is in cahoots with the Sheriff and everybody knows it. Now we are not going to hurt the man, but some night we are going for him and his still. We are going to gag him, carry him and the still up to the courthouse yard and tie him to it so that the Sheriff and the whole town will see them when they come down to their work in the morning.'

"This may appeal to adventureous youth, but, my friends, government cannot last if that is the right way to enforce law in this country. Lawlessness cannot be met with lawlessness, and civilization must be maintained. What will happen if law is not enforced by Government but taken in hand by individuals and by minority organizations, is what happened some years ago on Bloody Corner, in Chicago. Over one hundred murders were committed there in one year and not one single murderer was brought to justice. The Black Hand was at work and the witnesses to the murders refused to testify against the murderers because they felt their own lives were in danger if they did.

"Now society contains within itself the elements of its own self-purification. It has always been so, or civilization, which is an evolution, would not now exist.

"After a time, in connection with these continuing murders, two new words crept into the press of the city of Chicago—the words 'White Hand.' In other words, the brothers, fathers and friends of the murdered men sawed off their own shotguns and killed the murderers from behind the same corner and thus peace was finally established at the cost of bloodshed and misery through that entire section of Chicago.

Hits Appeals to Prejudice.

"The same thing happens when minority organizations, whatever the high purpose they claim, whatever they may be called, take the law into their own hands. Force rises to meet force: lawlessness rises to meet lawlessness and civilization commences to disintegrate into the savagery from which through the ages it has evolved.

"Appeals to racial, religious or class prejudicet by minority organizations are opposed to the welfare of all peaceful and civilized communities. Our Constitution stands for religious tolerance and freedom. This happy country has never been through a religious war such as those which devastated Europe in the centuries past and brought untold misery to millions of its inhabitants. We have progressed in civilization far beyond that possibility, but to inject religious and racial issues into politics is contrary to the welfare of all the people and to the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States.

"Josiah Quincy was right when he said:

"'Society is never more certainly in the path of destruction than when it trusts itself to the guidance of secret societies.'

"I have told you why I am opposed to the klan. Take what I say into your hearts and conscience and think it over calmly. However it may be with the mind, there is no acrimony in conscience."

Answers Davis' Honesty Plea.

The portion of Dawes' speech referring to the acceptance speech of John W. Davis, is as follows:

"The speech of Mr. Davis is indicative of personal high purpose, but an example of that kind of oratorical presentation of general principles designed to put to sleep practical thinking as to the actual results involved at this time by a change of national administration.

"It is unfair to maintain that individual dereliction in the operation of a great organization alone justifies the demand that an administration should be thrown to one side.

"Every honest man is as indignant as Mr. Davis at a betrayal by anyone of the high trust of public office, but they also expect that in discussing a matter of such importance, our political orators seek to present facts in their proper and correct relation to the welfare of the people. Common sense and fairness, alike, revolt at the suggestion that these individual derelictions, which the administration has set out to punish, should outweigh in the judgment of American citizens, the honesty and the accomplishments of the most successful business administration of government our people have ever had.

"If, in an honest and successful private business organization, an individual grafter and thief is discovered, he is thrown out and punished. If it is shown that the delinquency is individual, penalties are made individual, as they should be. A successful private organization is dismantled or abandoned only when it is shown that delinquency is an organization delinquency.

"An automobile salesman, on commission, sometimes advises a man who has a satisfactory machine which has developed a defective part, not to replace the defective part, but to junk the machine and try another make. When the man addressed is familiar with the machine recommended, and in which his destination has generally proved the ditch, he does not bite.

"An Oratorical Appeal.'

"The Democratic candidate makes an oratorical appeal that our people abandon the present administration and install with him in power, a party which has demonstrated in the past business incapacity. In this connection, I quote five sentences from President Coolidge's acceptance address, relative to the business accomplishments of the present administration:

"'In the domain of finance a budget system was promptly enacted and put into operation, resulting in tremendous savings. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, our expenditures were $5,538,000,000, and our surplus was $86,000,000. For the year just closed, our expenditures were $3,497,000,000, and our surplus exceeded $500,000,000. This was a reduction in the annual cost of government of $2,041,000,000. The public debt now stands at about $21,250,000,000, which is a reduction in three years of about $2,750,000,000.' Let Americans think this over.

"I find in Mr. Davis' speech some general remarks about the Fordney-McCumber tariff act. I wish I could find lessaffirmation and more supporting data in the tariff portion of his speech. Take this general assertion: 'For every dollar that this statute has drawn into the Treasury of the United States it has diverted five from the pocket of the consumer into the pocket of the favored few.' Specific representations, with facts in support of them, would seem more in order, for upon them could be demanded action under the Fordney-McCumber tariff act, which provides the President with power to reduce individual tariffs by executive action. The expression 'favored few' should not divert attention from the fact that the benefits of the tariff, as everyone knows, go chiefly to labor, in properly sustaining an American wage as compared with the European wage.

"The Fordney-McCumber tariff act raised tariff rates because it was absolutely necessary for the protection of American labor and industry. The degradation of the German mark had reduced German wages so low that for long intervals they were below the actual cost of existence itself, and starvation, undernourishment, and misery were the lot of the laboring man in Germany. Manufactured products for export to America from Germany were produced at this low labor cost to be sold in competition with goods made with American labor.

"Had it not been for the Fordney-McCumber act, the German industrialists would have enriched themselves at the expense of American labor and industry at the same time that they prospered at the expense of German labor. I personally went into the laboring districts of the City of Berlin last winter and I know the depths of suffering which existed at that time.

"Labor Must Be Protected."

"I talked to some of the representatives of German labor who had been before our Expert Committee, which was trying to find some way to help the allies and Germany to a Christian peace and prosperity. In their talks with me they referred to the American tariff, not as oppressing them, but as showing that the great American Republic recognized that for all its people to prosper, labor must be protected in that fair return from which alone national happiness and progress is possible.

"American labor knows that its interests are subserved by the position of the Republican party on the tariff. It knows that its welfare depends upon the protective tariff policy sponsored by the Republican party, and that the reversal of that policy, demanded by the Democratic party, means lower wages and a lower standard of living. It knows that the success of La Follette means chaos, out of which can only come lower wages and lower standards of living for all our people.

"General phrases are all very well, but American labor is too intelligent to be fooled as to where its interests lie in the tariff question. They are too intelligent to be fooled, also, by a certain brand of nebulous clap-trap preached to them by a few leaders who want to use them as a political asset, in a combination with Socialists, flying the red flag.

"The benefits of trades unions, honestly administered, are recognized not only by me, but by good citizens generally, whether in or out of trades unionism. It has elevated, protected and dignified labor, and in so doing, it has been an element in the progress of our nation.

"But why do so many politicians of both parties continue to regard the great, intelligent, honest and conservative body of trades unionism as if it were a puppet in the hands of a few Socialist labor leaders and political demagogues?

"Labor Will Not Be Misled."

"Trades unionism stands loyally and solidly behind its good leadership, concerned with the real interests of the crafts and the real progress of labor, but it has never followed and will never follow the demagogue! When it selects labor leaders it selects them for leaders of labor in the interest of labor, not as proprietors of its conscience or politics.

"Let me state a great truth which no one understands better than those fine citizens, the upright labor leaders of the country and the great body of union labor—the worst enemies to unionism and the progress of labor are the small number of radical labor leaders who attack law enforcing judges, and who, to the injury of law-abiding trades unionism, misrepresented the patriotic citizens belonging to it.

"In Illinois and elsewhere I have been denounced because I have opposed the kind of union tactics that have made building operations in Chicago dangerous to human life, where corrupt men have used their influence to extort vast sums from the contractors, and where the gunmen and the bombmaker have been actively at work. Every laboring man knows of this condition in Chicago during the last four years—that there have been murders and bombing by the wholesale—that there has been extortion and jury-fixing, and that certain labor leaders have gone into politics in order to defeat law-enforcing Judges. These leaders are a thorn in the side of honest unionism. Trades unionism, with a preponderant majority, does not approve these conditions. It abhors them as much as I do.

"When illegal violence is condoned and indifference to law is preached, what is the part of good citizenship, whether in or out of trades unionism? Nobody knows better what that duty is than the patriotic membership of trades unionism. It is not to supinely lay down under the whip of the labor demagogues, as so many political leaders and officeholders do, when law and order are attacked. It is to stand fearlessly against them. That is where the patriotic mass of union labor stands. It knows that its welfare, like the welfare of all our people, is bound up in the Constitution of the United States, in law enforcement and the American flag.

"I undertake to say that the few labor leaders who, in this campaign, are attempting to influence patriotic, law-abiding union men into a political combination with Socialists, flying the red flag, more than they endanger anything else, are endangering their own leadership. Common American citizenship marches not behind the red flag, but under the Stars and Stripes, upholding the Constitution of the United States, to found which our forebears fought and died.

"A Pitiful Spectacle."

"There is no more pitiful political spectacle today, and none more significant of the danger of the times, than to see politicians cringing before the whip of a few bluffing labor leaders, undertaking to play politics in the name of patriotic men whose convictions on law enforcement and the Constitution they do not control, and who resent the idea that anyone should believe that they would let their honest opinions on elemental things be used as a political asset.

"What pretext, except personal political advantage, have any labor leaders in attempting to bring the question of the open shop into politics? The Supreme Court of the United States has held that the right of employes in a body to bargain with their employers for the closed shop is one of the inalienable rights of the individual under our Constitution. If a political party should place an open-shop plank in their platform, with a view to its crystallization into law, it would be striking at the Constitution just as much as the lawless labor leader who, in the interest of the closed shop, would order an American citizen assaulted as he went peacefully to his work. Questions like that of the open shop will always be at issue among good citizens, but these differences are not political. They are economic and must be adjusted between employer and employe—not by political parties.

"The more I have studied Mr. Davis' speech, the less am I interested with it. If its intimations as to the monopoly of virtue by the Democratic Party needed no proof, I would be more impressed by its eloquence. 'The Washington Conference alone aside,' says he, 'and that of more than doubtful value, what single contribution has the United States of America, as an organized nation among nations, made to world peace in the last four years? Individual Americans have gone abroad but they went without the blessing of their Government.' Whose fault was this? It was the fault of the United States Senate. We must look at things as they are.

To Escape Disgrace.

"It sounds well to say, as Mr. Davis does—'If I become President of the United States, America will sit as an equal among equals, whenever she sits at all.' This has been true, of course at all times, but the inference seems to be that had Mr. Davis been President of the United States, and his nominee Secretary of State, there would not have been any American participation in the Expert Committee—that if the matter had come up at all, it would have been thrown into an eternal and futile debate in the United States Senate, where American participation would have perished because the Senate would not have allowed the word 'official' to attach to it. Success, and success alone, has prevented the work of the Expert Committee from being dragged in the mire of political demogoguery.

"The President and the Secretary of State fearlessly faced facts as they were and the situation as it was. The Americans invited by the Raparation Commission to serve on the Expert Committee were named by President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes. In thus naming them, they placed behind these men, in the eyes of humanity, the Stars and Stripes, and took the only step which could have been taken to save the United States the unspeakable disgrace of not having assisted the Allies and Germany in the world toward the happiness and prosperity which comes from the final settlement of a Christian peace.

"Again, he is an honest and conscientious believer in the League of Nations and its competency to be an agency for peace. But is he practically constructive? The platform of the Democratic party, on which he stands, invites the nation back into the fog bank of debate on the league, and into a referendum for which there is neither law nor procedure, to ascertain whether the people have changed their minds about it, as this action would indicate that the Democratic party believes possible. With him 'I would welcome the day when this great question would be entirely lifted above the plane of partisan politics, when men will cease to take counsel solely of their passions, their pride and their fears.' But this is only what President Coolidge hopes, and what our whole people hope.

Performance Needed.

"What the situation demands is some consideration of the practical question of how things are going to be done, along with statements of things everyone wants to do. Eloquence in stating generalities must not detract our attention from the practical things. Progress depends upon performance, not alone upon hope.

"As I said in my speech of acceptance: 'The Democratic party asks the American people to turn back with it into the morass of the debate on the League of Nations, through a public referendum, thereby paralyzing the hope of constructive action and policy in this time of an existing world crisis.'

"The Republican platform on foreign relations outlines a policy which, carried out with the common sense, clear vision and courage of Calvin Coolidge, offers the American people a constructive course of honor, safety and progress, for its own and the world's good. It offers the only policy which, at the present time, means the possibility of accomplishment."

LOCAL BROKER MUST EXPLAIN STOCK SALES

William T. Comstock Notified to Appear at Prosecutor's Office as Result of Complaints.

William T. Comstock, stock and bond broker, with offices at 217-218 Victoria Building, has been notified to appear tomorrow at the prosecuting attorney's office to answer complaints that he has violated the blue sky statute by selling stock in William T. Comstock & Co., although it has neither a dealer's permit nor a license to sel stock in Missouri.

Miss Emma H. Rose, 3930 Page biulevard, has reported to the Better Business Bureau and the State Finance Department that Comstock interviewed her last November about purchasing stock in the Comstock Co., stating the company was organized to engage in a general brokerage business and great profits were expected. After discussions in Comstock's office and by telephone, Miss Rose purchased two shares of preferred stock a: $100 a share, the certificates being signed by W. T. Comstock as president and Fred L. Naumer, an attorney, as secretary. As a bonus, Miss Rose was given a share of common stock.

In january Miss Rose inquired about dividends, and Comstock told her he had mailed a check for $8, representing a semiannual dividend of 8 per cent on her preferred stock. This check was never received, but later Comstock called at her home and paid the $8 to her.

Additional Affidavits.

Several other deals with St. Louis men and women, in which stock of the Comstock company figured, usually as collateral, are related in affidavits laid before the Prosecuting Attorney. Those who signed affidavits include: Miss Caroline L. Lache, 4006 Laclede avenue; Henry Rybarczyk, 5321A Page boulevard, and Bernard Brockmeier, 3101 South Seventh street.

The William T. Comstock Co. was incorporated June 26, 1923, in Missouri, with a capitalization of 250 shares of preferred stock, par value $100, and 250 shares of common, no par value. It was then claimed that 149 shares of preferred and 199 shares of common were paid in.

The application for articles of incorporation showed Comstock the largest stockholder, the others being Louis Powell, St. Louis; Arthur J. Klanke, St. Louis; George H. Comstock, Lawrence, Kan.; Albert J. Comstock, Topeka, Kan., and J. E Dow, Olathe, Kan.

William T. Comstock, when interviewed on several occasions by Manager Harry W. Riehl of the Better Business Bureau, said he was raising the finances to promote the company from his relatives in Kansas and Illinois. Klanke has since resigned from the company.

Formerly Sold Oil Shares.

Comstock formerly was St. Louis manager for Bagby & Co., brokers. Bagby was the promoter of the International Aerial Navigation Co. which proposed to operate a fleet of passenger airplanes between St. Louis and Kansas City This company was denied permission to sell stock in Missouri and subsequently went into bankruptcy proceedings.

In the fall of 1922, Comstock was active in the promotion of an oil company, the Dow Syndicate No. 3, in which James E. Dow was associated with him. "A great deal of these syndicate interests were sold in this community, but nothing was ever realized by the investors, the majority of them receiving nothing for their money, except a mere receipt," says a statement by the Better Business Bureau.

Comstock, who is about 30 years old, resides at 3902 Connecticut street. At his offices yesterday it was said he has been in Kansas for the last month and the date of his return is not known.

SLEEP IN CANOE FATAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

READING, Pa., Aug. 23.—William Way, 25, of Spring City, and Miss Mildred Shade, 24, of Reading, went to sleep in a canoe on the Schuylkill early this morning while a small phonograph played.

Thus unguided, the canoe went over the Haines Locks Dam, 15 feet high. Screams from the girl aroused the summer colony. Way, he says, tried to rescue the girl, but she was drowned. Way nearly lost his life when the girl locked her arms about him. Both went down several times. Rescuers found Way on the wall at the lock. The girl's body was not recovered until nearly half an hour later. The two, according to Police Captain McKinney, had been motoring earlier in the evening before going canoeing. Way is married. He is a salesman with an office in Reading.

1252 SOLDIER BONUS CHECKS ARE UNCLAIMED IN MISSOURI

Claimants, Who Failed to Receive Checks, Should Communicate With Adjutant-General.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 23.—The Adjutant-General's department today announced a list of 1252 unclaimed checks for the Missouri soldier bonus, which were returned to the department because of changes of address, or inability of the postoffice department to find the persons to whom the checks were addressed. Of this number, 163 are for St. Louisans.

The department urged that claimants of the bonus who have not received their checks communicate with the department, sending a memorandum of their claim number, serial number under which they served in the military forces, present address and personal signature. Several thousand claims for the bonus are being held up in the department because of some error in the proof of claim, which the applicant has failed to correct. In many instances the applicants have changed their residence and notices of the error in claims have been returned to the department.

PLANNED TO SACRIFICE BABY TO FAMILY PRIDE

Young Missouri Couple, Wed Three Months, Admit Attempt to Smother and Bury Infant.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 23.—Mr. and Mrs. Loren Peerson, each 19 years old, are in the county jail tonight, held without bail, on a charge of assault with intent to kill. Their two weeks' old baby boy, the intended victim of a sacrifice for family pride, sleeps peacefully in a crib at General Hospital.

Arrested today, the couple confessed that they had planned to smother the infant and bury it to save their families from the disgrace that would follow should the birth of the baby become known.

Mr. and Mrs. Peerson were married three months ago at the home of the bride at Bates City, Mo. Both were members of well-known Bates City families. Following the wedding the couple came to Kansas City.

Scuffles With Officers.

Peerson, last night, on a lonely road near Kansas City, was preparing to bury the baby in a grave he had dug, when officers went to investigate his actions. Peerson ran, after a scuffle with the officers, leaving the baby, a motor car and his spade behind.

The name "Johnson" on the baby's clothing led to discovery of its parents. Officers were informed that a Mrs. "Johnson" had left a local hospital yesterday with her new-born baby, and she was traced to the Peerson apartment.

"We decided to kill the baby to save ourselves and our families from disgrace," the parents told officials.

But now that the secret of its birth is known, the young moother wants her baby. "When will I get my baby?" she asks. The father has no feeling for the infant. "Why should I have?" he answered in reply to a question.

"Prayer Was Answered."

"I couldn't stand it after Loren left with the baby," Mrs. Peerson said. "I prayed all night long that something might happen that would prevent him carrying out our plan to kill the baby. When I read the papers this morning, I knew my prayer had been answered.

Peerson lived on the farm of his father, E. C. Peerson, near Bates City. He was graduated from the Bates Ciity High School last year. He met Mary Constance Bainbridge, now his wife, who is the daughter of a retired farmer living near Bates Ciity. She was graduated from Bates City High School last May.

Will Not Plead Guilty.

Mr. and Mrs. Peerson will not plead guilty, as they first told authorities they would do, they said tonight. The couple said they could not see their act in the light of attempted murder. Rather, they regarded it as an act of mercy and for the benefit of the baby as well as themselves.

At first, before the birth of the baby, Mrs. Peerson said, they had considered giving the baby to someone but decided against this because of the danger of their secret becoming known.

The wedding had been planned last Christmas, Peerson related, but an attack of illness prevented the ceremonies at that time. Then she had to return to school and they decided to postpone it until spring, when they would move to Kansas City and dispose of the baby.

HOOVER SAYS WEST WILL BE FOR COOLIDGE IF ALL VOTE

Includes California in His Prediction—"All a Question of Getting Out the Vote.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Emerging from a conference with William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, Herbert Hoover, Secretaary of Commerce, declared today "It is all a question of getting out the vote."

"We shall elect Mr. Coolidge and carry every State west of the Rockies," he averred quietly, "if we all put our shoulders to the wheel and work hard—and if everybody gets out to vote."

Hoover made it clear that he included California in this prediction, irrespective of any possibility that Democrats who were enthusiastic followers of McAdoo might not support the Democratic ticket. "They will vote the Democratic ticket, I assume," he said. 'Some of them, anyway. As to whether La Follette or Davis will run more strongly, it is too soon to determine. The national campaign, which I helped open two weeks ago with an address at Los Angeles, waited for the State campaign with which California had been busy theretofore.

"My part in this campaign? Well, I'm on my way to Washington now to earn my salary at my regular job."

SMOKE IN LOEW'S THEATER

Smoke caused by friction upon a broken leather belt caught around a pulley in the engine room entered the auditorium of the new Loew's State Theater, Eighth street and Washington avnue, through ventilators at 7:30 o'clock last night, causing uneasiness to many in the audience, which filled the house.

The smoke was not dense enough to affect vision, and no one left the theater because of it, the management announced. The belt, which operated the cooling plant, was speedily repaired.

WRIT BLOCKS RETURN OF SHOWGIRL WANTED HERE

Sheriff Willman Back From New York Without Mrs. Bessie Weir-Goldsmith.

Sheriff Willman of St. Louis County, who went to New York early in the week to bring back Mrs. Bessie Harvey Weir-Goldsmith, to answer charges of "suspicion of bigamy," returned yesterday without the 21-year-olds showgirl. Her attorneys obtained a writ of habeas corpus after the Sheriff had her in his custody. He expects to return to New York Sept 8, when the hearing on the writ will be held.

Mrs. Weir-Goldsmith was held at the instigation of Millard Goldsmith, 44, sales manager for Barnes-Crosby Co., engravers, who married her here 10 days after he met her in 1923. She asserted in New York that Berl Weir, whom she married when she was 14, was killed later while in the Navy, but Goldsmith disputes this. He will seek an annulment of his marriage.

How Doctors Know That Nuxated Iron Helps Bring Health and Strength

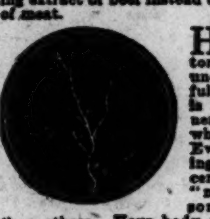
THIS little picture shows you what the Doctor sees through his microscope when he looks at a drop of your blood when you are tired and run-down.

This is thin, pale, watery blood which keeps you weak, nervous and run-down. If you tire easily; if you look pale, haggard and worn it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under the Doctor's powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill, lack iron in their blood, are ill for no other reason than for lack of iron.

Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, therefore, nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good, you don't get the strength out of it. As the result of this blood starvation people become generally weakened, nervous and all run-down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance.

HERE is a picture of the way a drop of your blood will look under the microscope when you have plenty of good rich red blood. Blood like this is always rich with iron, but be sure that the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic or mineral iron which people usually take, as metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings.

Organic iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. It may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.



HERE is another thing the Doctor could show you under his wonderful microscope. It is a thin, delicate nerve of a person who is all run-down. Every human being is born with a certain quantity of "nerve force"—some with more than others. Your body normally makes or generates nerve force only about so fast, and if through over-work, worry, constant nervous strain or other excesses, you use up your nerve force faster than your body makes new nerve force, then your nerve power becomes weakened, and as a consequence, your blood may become thin, pale, and watery, and you become feeble, cross, and irritable. In such a state you may not only suffer terrible tortures from a multitude of alarming symptoms, but in your greatly weakened condition you are an easy prey for the multitude of dangerous germs with which you must come in almost daily contact, and you may therefore easily contract some dangerous or even fatal disease.

HERE is a a picture of a nerve which belongs to a strong virile man, a man of blood and iron. If you are weak, nervous and run-down your nerve probably looks like the previous picture and not like this one. In such cases you should immediately take something to revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves and create new nerve force. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product quickly aids in enriching the blood and thereby helps it to furnish an additional supply of new nerve force with which to revitalize and regenerate the brain and nerve cells. It also contains a product which represents the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form most nearly allied to that in the nerve and brain cells of man. Nuxated Iron may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food as it furnishes strength-giving organic iron to the blood and the most important element of the nerve-vital fluid to the nerves. The effect of Nuxated Iron in cases of exhausted nerve force and impoverished blood is so remarkable and surprising that it often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" men and women in two weeks' time. In fact, the manufacturers guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money.

THIS picture shows you the Nuxated Iron tablet with the letters N. I. on every tablet, and below, the bottle you must be sure to get because it contains the genuine Nuxated Iron. The tremendous success of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood-builder has led to the offering of numerous substitutes and imitations. Investigation shows that many of these instead of being organic iron may be nothing more than a metallic iron compound which may in some instances produce more harm than good. Such instances have led physicians to emphasize that health officials and doctors everywhere should caution the public against accepting substitutes for Nuxated Iron.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, help revitalize your wornout exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. It costs about eighteen times as much to make organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, as it does to make metallic iron, though it costs you but little more. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark start taking Nuxated Iron today. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

Get Back Your Grip on Health!

- You can tell which people have a firm grip on health—strong vigorous folks with plenty of iron in their blood who enjoy life every minute. They are the happy mothers of healthy children, the men who dominate in business, the athletes who win in every competition. You say they are lucky, but your doctor will tell you that it is not a matter of luck, it is a matter of rich red blood full of health-giving iron—the kind you get from organic iron—Nuxated Iron—as you can easily prove to yourself in two weeks' time.

Decide today that you will be well and strong. The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have educated the public to the value of genuine organic iron, hence all the advertising you read about iron containing foods. Remember, however, that there is as much iron in one dose of Nuxated Iron as there is in a quart of vegetables and as much iron in a single bottle of Nuxated Iron as there is in $50 worth of raisins. The same is true of other foods in varying degrees. Your doctor will tell you that the quickest and surest way to get health-giving iron into your blood is to use Nuxated Iron.

Millions of people take Nuxated Iron each year!

POLICE BAND CONCERT SWELLS ICE FUND

600 Persons Enjoy Benefit Concert at Orpheum Theater in Behalf of Babies.

The St. Louis Police Band, the St. Louis Quartet, and the Moran Sisters, dancers, deserve the thanks of the hundreds of babies who are beneficiaries of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund. Despite the warm weather last evening which influenced many persons who had purchased tickets to remain away, the concert at the Orpheum Theater under the auspices of the band, proved pleasing to the 600 persons who attended. Although final returns are not yet available, it is estimated that the concert will add approximately $1000 to the Ice Fund.

The band played 11 programmed selections and several extra numbers, ranging from the more pretentious selections from "Faust" through a miscellany of popular music to "Why Did I Kiss That Girl?" demonstrating the versatility of the musicians and the finesse with which they perform all the shadings of expression.

Song and Dance.

Following the first group of selections by the band the St. Louis Quartet sang a cycle of numbers including their familiar "Tallyho," "Rosie O'Reilly," "Officer Kelly, Don't You Think It's Time to Get Up," "When the Rainbow Shines Bright at Morn" and "California, Here I come." Charles E. Flesh, Chester Mertons, James W. Porteous and Robert X. Stark compose the quartet, which has been active for several years in the work for the babies.

Gladys and Jane Moran appeared in a song and dance number of dainty comedy and rhythmic style. Miss Jane danced a solo toe number and Miss Gladys sang a character song, appearing as "Bowery Lil." They are the daughters of James J. Moran, 4905 Lotus avenue, and have played for several seasons on professional vaudeville circuits.

Members of Band.

The band, which was under the direction of Fred Windmueller, included the following members: Cornets—E. Ross Stones, Philip Klepp, Henry Renish, Charles Loepker, Fred Windmueller, Elias Stark, Lawson White. Clarinets—Walter Heitz, Ed Seckmann, Harry Antrein. Drums—Henry Heidbreiter, Harry Tiegler, Red Kimball, Michael Josias. Saxophones—Ralph Whitworth, James Kiernan, Fred Friedewald, John Craggett. Alto horns—Edward Moellring, Henry Striker, William Fipps, Thomas Klecka. Color bearers—Edward Schlewing, Henry Bruns. Drum major—James Moran. Baritone horns—John Schaffner, Bernard Wills. Tubas—Earl Rawlings, William L. Henry, Marble Sands. Trombones—George Gallagher, Edward Schnitker.

"KNIGHTS OF THENDARD" FORMED TO OPPOSE K. K. K.

U. S. District Attorney Potter One of Those Heading New Organization.

An organization called "The Knights of Thendard" was incorpor ted at Springfield, Ill., yesterday by a froup of East St. Louisans, headed by United States District Attorney W. O. Potter and Joseph B. McGlynn, an attorney.

The stated purpose is to "promote social friendship, civil rights, political liberty and religious toleration."

Neither Potter nor McGlynn could be reached for a statement last night, but it was learned from other sources that the organization plans opposition to the Ku Klux Klan because of its religious policies. Religion will not be considered in qualifications for membership in the new organization, it was said.

Approximately 2000 persons are said to have signified intention of joining the Knights of Thendard. Plans for its future activities have not been developed, it was said.

ARKANSAS LEADS IN ARMY PHYSICAL EFFICIENCY TEST

Recruits Roll up Score of 67 at Civilian Military Training Camps in 1923.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Arkansas recruits led all states in physical efficiency in tests carried out by the War Department at the Civilian Military Training Camps in 1923. Rolling up a score of 67 out of a possible 100, Arkansas was two points ahead of Kansas, in second place, and three over Arizona. New England states as a whole scored 50 points, the Southeastern states, 51, east-central states, 47½ and Eastern states, 45½.

The test comprised four events—the 100-yard dash, the running high jump, the running broad jump and the pole vault. The scores were competed from relative allotments based on record performances for these events.

3 INJURED IN SHAM BATTLE OF KENTUCKY GUARDSMEN

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 23.—Three casualties, one serious, resulted from a 36-hour sham battle of 18,000 National Guardsmen at Camp Knox. The mimic warfare ended shortly before noon today with all big guns in action for 15 minutes and thousands of rounds of ammunition consumed in rifle and machine-gun fire.

PADDOCK

Mark 36 Years Old Is Broken

"Fastest Human" Sprints 250 Yards Distance in 25 2-5 Seconds at Metropolitan Meet.

TIME CLIPS STANDARD ESTABLISHED IN 1888

Race Probably the Last in Which Paddock Will Appear on Eastern Athletic Fields.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Charles Paddock, the flying Californian, making his first appearance here since the Olympic games, broke a 36-year-old world's record when he ran 250 yards in the unprecedented time of 25 2-5 seconds in a special event of that distance at the senior Metropolitan track and field championships at Travers Island this afternoon.

When it was announced that he had shattered one of the oldest records on the books the crowd gave him a wonderful ovation.

The runner who established the old record was Charles Sherrill, then a student at Yale, but now a Brigadier-General in Uncle Sam's army. Paddock's time is two-fifths of a second faster than Sherrill's.

The feat of Paddock, far overshadowed the championships. He appeared in the best of condition, as he toed the mark for the special event against a field of local runners. He kept his eyes on Johnny McHugh, and as the starter fired Paddock was away. He fairly bounded from his mark. Down the cinder path he traveled, his knees moving like pistons, until he threw himself against the tape.

He was several yards ahead of G. R. Thompson of the N. Y. A. C. Edward Andrus of the Newark A. C. was third.

Murchison Wins Two Titles.

Six title holders successfully defended seven championships, Loren Murchison of the Newark A. C. retaining his titles in the century and furlong. In winning the furlong, Murchison showed sensational speed and, without being pressed, equaled the track record of 21 4-5 seconds. The century was just a walk for Murchison, for he won as he pleased by a good margin in the fast time of 10 1-5 seconds. Eric Dawkins, Salem Crescent runner, formerly of Stuyvesant, was his nearest competitor, finishing about six yards behind the Olympic performer.

Herb Meyer, former Rutgers College star now representing the Newark A. C., was the only other athlete to gain two titles. He captured the 120-yard high hurdles and the 220-yard low hurdles, winning both by good margins.

Richard Landon, former Olympic champion, successfully retained his laurels in the high jump, with a leap of 6 feet 2⅜ inches. He just failed in an attempt to raise his own Metropolitan record of 6 feet 3 inches when the bar was set at 6 feet 4 inches.

Bob Legendre Defeated.

William Goodwin, N. Y. A. C. miler, ran a great race in annexing the title at that distance. He started right out and took the lead on the first turn and gradually increased it till on the back stretch he was 10 yards ahead of Kirby, former Cornell star, of the Newark A. C. Coming into the home stretch, Kirby made a bid for the title, but was held off by Goodwin, who won by about five yards in the fast time of 4 minutes 23 seconds.

Scholpp of the New York A. C., also a 1923 champion, established the only new meet record in winning the pole vault with 12 feet 5 inches.

The other title holders who repeated were Willie Plant, New York A. C., who took the three-mile walk easily; K. Giest, who won the hop, step and jump with a distance of 47 feet, and R. R. Cram of the New York A. C., who won the 440-yard hurdles in :54 4-5.

A surprise was uncovered in the broad jump when Edwin Wooley, former De la Salle jumper, defeated Robert Le Gendre, world's record holder, in that event. Wooley, representing the Winged Foot, won the title with a leap of 23 feet ⅝ inch, with Le Gendre in second place with a leap of 22 feet 3⅝ inches.

The New York A. C. won the team championship.

Vance Wins His 22d Game; Fans 15 Cub Batters

Dazzy Sets New N. L. Strikeout Record — Chicago Turns Triple Play.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Brooklyn held to third place today by beating the Cubs 6 to 5. Errors figured in all but one of the Dodger tallies.

Vance fanned fifteen and set a new National League record. He allowed only two hits after the third inning. It was his 22nd., victory of the year. The Cubs made a triple play in the second round when DeBerry lined to Barrett who threw to Grantham and he relayed to Cotter. Stock and Griffith were on bases at the time. Bush was taken out in the sixth when hits followed a pair of errors. In the eighth Barrett made a two-base muff of Griffith's fly and High singled off Keen to send in the winning run.

Giblon Is Victor in Rich Stake

Beats Princess Doreen a Nose in Record Time, in the $15,000 Chicago Special.

VICTOR APPEARS TO FALTER IN STRETCH

Even Money Favorite Rallies, However, and Just Gets Up in Time to Beat the Princess.

By Joe Foley,
Sports Editor Chicago Journal.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23. — While 30,000 cheering racegoers looked on, Giblon, 3-year-old colt by The Manager, owned by C. W. Riedinger, this afternoon won the first running of the $15,000 Chicago Special. This feature race, at a mile and three-sixteenths, saw Giblon, hard driven, beat the Audley farm stable's Princess Doreen, breaking the track record for a mile and three-sixteenths by 1 and 3-5 seconds, Giblon's time being 1:57 1-5. Hopeless was third.

Giblon got his nose in front at the start and held sway throughout the long route. The Runt raced in closest pursuit for a half mile, but the track proved too fast and he gave way on the second turn.

Giblon Falters.

Princess Doreen moved up at this point and nearly caught Giblon at the three-quarter pole. Lilley shook up his mount on the far turn and came fast, Princess Doreen falling back.

Giblon saved much ground on the last turn but appeared to tire from the killing early pace, permitting Princess Doreen to race alongside of him at the eighth post.

Lilley, on Giblon, resorted to the whip at this point and punished his mount to a final effort. Princess Doreen appeared to gain at every stride until the last 70 yards when Giblon came through with a great rush and just outlasted the game filly in a hair-raising finish by a neck.

Giblon closed at even money, with Princess Doreen second choice at 13 to 10.

Owner Reidinger was presented with a handsome silver and gold trophy and an immense blanket of roses in adition to the prize money. The crowd was still cheering as Giblin was blanketed and led back to the stable.

Brilliant Proves an Upset.

Upsetting the favorite, Brilliant, the 2-year-old Delhi colt, Louis Rubenstein, owned by the Cincinnati stables and ridden by A. Pickens, won the first race at five and a half furlongs in 1:07 4-5, with Brilliant second and Mark Master third. Rubenstein proved much the best and led all the way, under a hustling ride. The winner was third choice at 7 to 1.

The second race brought about the undoing of the last minute "good thing," Whirling Dun, quoted at 12 to 1 and heavily backed, when the 6-year-old Voter stallion, Citizen, owned by J. N. McFadden, won at a mile and one-eighth in 1:54 4-5. Royal Duck was second and Glentilt third. The winner paid 5 to 1. Royal Duel was favorite at 5 to 2.

The third race for the Lexington Hotel purse at a mile and one-sixteenth went to the 4-year-old Vulcain filly, Belphrisonia, in a gruelling strength drive with Billy Starr. The latter finished second and Plucky third, in 1:47 1-5.

Stutts rated the winner along finely in the early running, keeping its nose in front and then brought it up with a great rush of reserve speed through the stretch. The winner was a strong favorite at 11 to 20.

Bill O'Flynn Given Weak Ride.

Coming down the stretch with a great rush, the 3-year-old Everest colt, Everglade, owned by Mrs. A. Swenke, and ridden by L. McDermott, won the fifth race at five and one-half furlongs in 1:07 with the favorite, Bill O'Flynn second and Marionette third.

Kinsey Brothers Win National Doubles Tennis Title, Beating Patterson and Wood in 5 Sets Californians Make Long Stride Toward a Place on American Davis Cup Team by Defeating Australians, 7—5, 5—7, 7—9, 6—3, 6—4—Patterson's Errors Are Costly.

By Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 23.—Veteran tennis invaders were beaten back and veteran champions were dethroned when the Kinsey brothers of San Francisco, defeated Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood of Australia, for the national doubles championship today, and Miss Helen Wills and Vincent Richards won a stirring match from Mrs. Molla B. Mallory and W. T. Tilden, II, national mixed doubles titleists for two years. It was a triumph for America's younger school of players.

The Kinseys—Robert G. and Howard O.—defeated the Australian Davis Cup stars, 7—5, 5—7, 7—9, 6—3, 6—4, by winning six straight games in the fourth set after the Antipodeans had established a three-game lead toward their third winning set.

The success of Miss Wills and Richards, which brings to the California college girl every major tennis title involving women in the world this year, was even more sensational in strokes. The scores were 6—8, 7—5, 6—0. Angle shots flipped from backhand gets by Richard, sweeping strokes, forehand and backhand by Miss Wills combined to make the result, which included defeat of Tilden's cannon-ball service by the youngsters again and again, and rallies between Miss Wills and Tilden in which the girl held her own through several exchanges.

Miss Wills Proves Star.

Final success came after Tilden and Mrs. Mallory had won the first set and led 5—4, needing only two points to win the second set and match.

"Isn't Miss Wills great? She plays like a man," was Richards' tribute to his modest partner after the game.

The Kinsey brothers' victory came first and carried honors held more highly both because of the standing of men's doubles play and because of Australia's attempt to carry off the title again.

It establishes them also as candidates to be seriously considered for the doubles defense of the Davis cup.

They went into the match with the knowledge that their lobbing tactics had been beaten twice by the Australians this year. They came out of it, champions because they lobbed so artfully that they robbed the speed of Patterson and Wood of much of its sting, and because they mixed swift strokes with slow ones to disconcert their opponents.

Lobbing Tactics Win.

The Kinseys captured the first set 7—5, standing back on the base

Bill Tilden and Johnston Norton's Pick for Doubles

By Brian I. C. Norton,
National Doubles Champion of the U. S. for 1923 with W. T. Tilden II.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 23.—There has been a great deal of discussion as to who are going to be the American doubles team to defend the Davis Cup against Australia or France in the challenger round at Philadelphia next month.

Everybody seems to have a different opinion as to who the final selection will be, and nobody really knows, but we are all entitled to an opinion, and as far as I personally can gather I feel pretty confident it will be Tilden and Johnston in both the singles and the doubles.

I have good reason for naming this team, but of course four players will be nominated, and I think the four will be the same as last year, R. N. Williams II, William T. Tilden II, William Johnston and Vincent Richards. Of course Tilden and Williams or Johnston and Williams may be the team; but when the final selection is officially given out I think it will be Tilden and Johnston.

I personally think that if the committee considers that two singles and a double are too much for Johnston, then they ought to give Harvey Snodgrass a chance in the doubles, partnered either with Tilden or Johnston.

I discussed this with several players and critics, including Johnston, and they agreed that Snodgrass is a very fine doubles player. Snodgrass is second only to Bill Johnston at volleying, and his service is exceptionally good, also his smashing. If Snodgrass has a weakness, it is his return of service, but that department of his game is no weaker than that of Wood or Patterson.

Snodgrass made his first appearance in the East last season.

WOMEN SWIMMERS SET TWO RECORDS IN NATIONAL TITLE MEET

By the Associated Press.

PITTMAN, N. J., Aug. 23.—Two championship records for women swimmers, one of them a national title, were broken at the meet of the Pittman Swimming Club at Alcyon Park today.

Eugene Bolden of the Illinois A. C., last year's mile champion, did not defend his title. Robert Hosie, of the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., won the national junior back stroke championship for men.

Sothoron Turns in A Four-Hit Game; Rickeymen Slug Ball

Dean, Ryan and Jonnard Batted Hard—Jack Smith Leads in Attack That Nets 16 Safeties—Score Is 8 to 3.

By Herman Wecke,

Allan Sothoron's sensational pitching and sequential hitting against three of McGraw's hurlers, Dean, Ryan and Jonnard, gave the Cardinals an 8 to 3 victory over the Giants in the final game of the series yesterday It was the Giants' last appearance here this year.

Sothoron after a poor start, came through with a great exhibition. He held McGraw's men, who in the first three contests had pounded out 37 hits, to four safeties, two of them the scratchiest kind of scratches. These came in the first round and with a hit batsman and base on balls thrown in, gave the McGrawmen their three markers.

After that opening round, however, there were only two swats for the National League leaders. Snyder pounded out a double in the fifth and Kelly a single in the sixth. These two men were the only New Yorkers to reach first base after the first round.

Sothoron's exhibition was quite a recoverey as in the first round, the Giants had put five men on the sacks.

Cardinals Make 16 Hits.

The Cards started their assault against McGraw's hurlers in the third. In this round four safeties and a hit batsman put over three tallies against Dean. Then in the fourth, five hits against Dean and Ryan gave three more runs. Then in the seventh, four solid smashes against Jonnard gave another pair of markers. In all, the locals had 16 safeties against the three flingers. This total included five doubles and a triple.

Hornsby continued his great hitting with a single and a double in five attempts. Frisch had one out of four.

Hornsby contributed a great fielding play at the expense of Frisch in the third, when he handled the Giants' star's slow bounder and pushed the ball to Bottomley for the out. Frisch also made a sensational fielding play in stopping Sothoron's hard smash behind first in the fourth. However, he was in no position to make a throw and the pitcher had to be credited with a safety.

How Giants Scored.

Sothoron's wildness and two pop hits started the Giants on their way to three tallies in the first round. Groh stopped a pitch with his back and Frisch dropped a fly over second which no one could reach and it went for a single.

Then Young walked and the bases were packed. Meusel dropped one in short right for two sacks and Groh and Frisch tallied. Kelly smashed a long fly to Holm in the shadow of the flagpole and Young went over with the third run of the round. On Wilson's high bounder to Toporcer Meusel was cut down at the plate.

Sothoron Contributes Hit.

A real swat attack tied it for the Cardinals in the third. Toporcer and Sothorn started with singles and Smith crashed a double to right, scoring Toporcer. Holm was hit by a pitched ball to fill the bases. This brought up Hornsby. The 8000 persons in the park were pulling for Rog to knock it out of the lot, but Hornsby, who had singled his first time up, hit into a double play, while Sothorn scored. Bottomley came through with an ace to right, putting Smith over with the knotting marker.

The Cardinal assault continued in the fourth. Blades hit between Wilson and Young for three bases and Dean was on his way, Ryan going in. Cooney singled and Blades scored. Gonzales rolled out, but Toporcer doubled, scoring Cooney. Frisch made a sensational stop of Sothoron's smash but was in no position to throw and Allan was credited with a hit. Smith singled through Frisch and Toporcer scored. The rally ended when Frisch went over second, picked up Holm's grounder, stepped on the bag and tossed to Kelly for a double play.

Hornsby Poles Double.

Some more real hitting gave the locals two more against Claud Jonnard, McGraw's official "life saver," in the seventh. Hornsby started with a smash that hit the screen in right center for two bases and rode home on Bottomley's ace to left. Blades sacrificed and Cooney rolled out, but Gonzales' single put Bottomley across. Toporcer also hit safely, but Sothoron popped out.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 23.—Winning the final game of the series today, Pittsburg made it three out of four from Boston. The score was three to two.

Yeargin and Kremer pitched well but the breaks favored the latter. Some fast fielding pulled him out of a couple of holes.

Cuyler scored the first Pirate run with a drive to center field on which he circled the bases. Carey's double and Cuyler's single in the third added another while two singles and a sacrifice fly netted the final Pirate run in the sixth.

Cunningham's double and R. Smith's single gave Boston one in the fourth and singles by Stengel and Cunningham with Tierney's sacrifice fly added the other in the eighth.

DOAK AND DICKERMAN DUEL MAY FEATURE IN DOUBLE HEADER TODAY

A duel between Leo Dickerman and Bill Doak, the pitchers who figured in the trade between the Cardinals and Dodgers some time ago, may be one of the features of the double-header between the two clubs this afternoon. Dickerman has been hurling great ball for the locals, while Doak recently gained a decision in 11 innings over the Pirates.

The series with the Dodgers, which will end Tuesday, will be the final for the Rickeymen on the present at home stand.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—The Browns waved their bats at the curves of Stanwood Baumgartner, left-handed comeback, this afternoon, and waved in vain. Playing their last game in Philadelphia this season, the men of Sisler were unable to beat four runs and lost for the third time in the four-game series. The defeat was the Browns' twelfth in 19 games with Connie Mack's men this year.

Two runs were all the Browns could get off Baumgartner, who was returned winner over St. Louis for the third time in 1924. The Browns have failed to register a victory over this left-hander, although they have batted him out of the box on a couple of occasions. Baumgartner had the visiting batters completely buffaloed when men got on bases and was himself to blame for one of the scores against him, forcing in a run. This was in the fourth inning, when Baumgartner walked Gerber with the bases filled.

Baumgartner's Tenth Victory.

Baumgartner's performance was one of the best of the season and his triumph was the tenth of the year. A decade ago this tall southpaw was a failure in the big leagues, but today he occupies No. 1 seat in Connie Mack's pitching class.

It wasn't that the Browns couldn't hit Baumgartner. They totaled 10 safeties, as many as were made by the Athletics off Danforth and Vangilder, against whom they made all their scores.

But when the Browns got men on bases, Baumgartner put on steam and made the boys from St. Louis behave.

In the same fourth inning in which Baumgartner presented the Browns with a marker, he did his best pinch pitching. After McManus had crossed the plate, "Stan" made Dave Danforth hit a grounder to Dykes, whose throw to Perkins nailed Jacobson at the plate. Then Baumgartner made Tobin hit another grounder to Dykes, and Danforth was forced at second.

Again in the eighth, the Browns were helpless after getting the bases filled. Jacobson started this round with a single and McMillan struck out. Severeid singled and Gerber flied to Simmons. Pat Collins, up for Vangilder, walked, packing the sacks. Baumgartner then forced Tobin to roll to the box.

Tobin and Sisler Hitless.

Baumgartner had held Tobin and Sisler hitless in five trips to bat for each. Baumgartner was lucky on Sisler in the seventh, when Lamar made a circus catch of what looked like a three-bagger.

On the other side, Dave Danforth pitched good and bad ball.

One run was scored off him in the first inning, which Hale opened with a double. Lamar beat out a bunt and Miller scored Hale with a sacrifice fly to Tobin.

Except for Dykes' double at the start of the second, Danforth pitched fine ball from the first to the fifth. Dykes opened the fifth with a home run. Perkins' single, Baumgartner's safe bunt, a force-out and Lamar's single gave the Macks another.

The sixth saw the last of Danforth. With one out, Hauser drew a pass and Simmons bounced a single off Dave's glove. Sisler then waved Danforth out and Vangilder went in. Vangilder got Simmons out at second on Dykes' tap to the box, but a moment later Hauser got home on a double steal when Severeid made a wide throw to second.

The Browns departed after the game for Cleveland, where they play tomorrow, after which they jump back to Washington for a series opening Monday.

No Left Turns.

RACE track traffic rules in France, where there are "no left turns," have resulted in a serious misadvantage to the great French horse Epinard, in the three international races to be held in the United States, the first of which is set for one week from Monday at Belmont course. In France horse races are run the REVERSE way of the track to the practice prevailing in the United States.

To be perfectly fair with Epinard, who is laboring under countless other handicaps in facing the pick of United States thoroughbreds, these three races should have been arranged under alternating conditions. That is to say, the first race should have been run with the pole to the thoroughbred's left, (the American way), the second race with the pole to the racers' right, (the European way), and the third run according to the toss of a coin.

AS it is now, the burden of overcoming this handicap is ALL upon Epinard. That it is a real burden is evident from statements made by Epinard's jockey, Everett Haynes, now in this country to ride the French champion.

Haynes says the only track in France with turns to the LEFT as in America, is at St. Cloud, where the match race between Sir Galahad III and Epinard was run. Epinard was beaten by a nose, Haynes said, because the French horse lost his lead going around the turn the reverse way.

Belmont Tried It.

EPINARD is now being schooled to the American way. He was taken to a private track last week and given some practice in "propping" against his RIGHT foot on turns whereas in his past, his LEFT foot has been developed and made accustomed to the task of overcoming a tendency to bear out on the turns.

The question still remains unanswered as to the extent to which the difficulty can be met. One would think that the right legs of the American horse and the left legs of the foreign horses might become better developed from habit. If this should be a fact, then Epinard will not be able to overcome the handicap.

Belmont track inaugurated the English system of right hand turns; but that track had to abandon its system as horses did not take to it readily.

Greb vs. Tunney.

THE middleweight champion and the light heavyweight title wrangler are billed to meet in a 10-round, no-decision bout. This fight jabs the imagination into life. One can visualize the thrilling encounter in advance. Nothing as savage has been planned since Jock Malone and Frank Carbone had their furious air-shattering setto at the Coliseum.

For sheer ferocity the Greb-Tunney event should compare favorably with a battle between toothless, three-legged lap dogs.

The no-decision bout is an enormity that should be haled into court and sentenced to death.

It is a cloak to hide the malingerer, a smoke-screen for the staller and a haven for the ill-conditioned champion who wants to pick up some easy change without working.

A no-decision bout is in violation of all competitive precedents, since it ends without a result. But aside from the fact that it renders performance inocuous by not determining a winner, it is objectionable because it promotes connivance and conspiracy to prevent REAL contests.

Counting the Cost.

IT may well be that the frenzied finance has gone out of baseball. One look at the averages of the year should convince magnates of the futility of paying Aladdin's lamp prices for minor league talent.

Willie Kamm, $100,000 coast leaguer, is batting .245. Jimmy O'Connell, price tag $75,000, is batting .290 but has only been at bat 58 times or about 15 full games.

Paul Strand, the Athletics $50,000 star, has been sent back by Connie Mack to the American Association.

A few more assaults on the Organized Baseball bankroll and even the spenders of the league will have to pull in their horns, or else trim the $45,000 annual salaries enjoyed by the McGraws and Stonehams.

You have one guess to decide whether the purchase price or the officers' salaries will suffer the cut.

Beating Back.

TOM CAHILL, builder of the United States Football Association, who was deposed as secretary and discredited (most unfairly, his friends think) by a clique that had been seeking Tom's head, is coming back.

Cahill has forced the body that humiliated him to retreat on all fronts, as follows:

1. It was admitted in the U. S. F. A. meeting that NO charges had been preferred against Cahill and that he had been let out "for cause," same not being specified.

2. Cahill's efficiency, which had been denied, was affirmed and he was given a $2000 testimonial for his efforts.

3. His withdrawal with the American Soccer League and the St. Louis Soccer League forced the calling of yesterday's meeting at New York to consider ways and means to get the Cahill forces back into the cup competition.

Attack Was Personal.

THE present U. S. F. A. officials deserve little of Cahill, who is now in command of the situation. They tricked him and trumped up charges that, to judge by their withdrawal later, were not justified by facts. They combined to oust him for PERSONAL grievances, not for the good of the game.

If now the leaders find themselves groping wildly to save the sinking ship, they can attribute their dilemma to their own short-sightedness.

Cahill Needed.

CAHILL is a rough rider, undiplomatic, uncouth at times; but he is resolute, faithful and tireless. He is a fighter every inch and it was this that put the U. S. F. A. on its feet and $24,000 in the treasury of the organization. He fought for American ideas and control in the U. S. F. A.

Now those who attacked him see the revenues of the body cut almost 90 per cent, because Cahill is able to swing the important clubs of the organization with him and away from the cup competition.

It may be said, however, that this plan was determined upon prior to the last annual meeting and without reference to what action the U. S. F. A. might take regarding Cahill's personal troubles which had not materialized, at that time.

Cup Race Doomed?

THE national challenge cup race as organized in the past, seems doomed. It was not grounded on the right principle and did not deserve to exist, in its old form, as a national championship.

It placed the burden of financing the organization and the race on the St. Louis league and the American League. And now these teams refuse longer to pay tribute and to be the financial support of all the United States soccer.

The solution of the soccer problem is to be found by following the lines of organized baseball, with division of the country into major and minor leagues. The major clubs should not be asked to support the minors nor should their championship be clogged with games scheduled against unknown and hopelessly inferior elevens.

Wills Works Hard, Eats Cream Cheese and Gains Weight

Negro at Point in His Training for Bout With Firpo Where He Has to Slow Down in Work.

By Burris Jenkins Jr.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—At Harry Wills' camp at Rose Point, a beautiful spot on Peconic Bay, Southampton, L. I., we learned that Wills' training methods are almost totally opposite from Luis Firpo's. Whereas Luis takes his steak and meat daily, Harry's special training dish is cream cheese of his own making. Harry eats little meat and no steaks or beef until the day of a fight.

Firpo is taking his training fairly easy just now, working gradually more and more up to the fight, he says. Wills has done five weeks of hard work and has got himself in shape to enter a ring today, so has let up in order not to go stale.

Wills eats only two meals a day. Firpo the regulation three. Wills jogs eight miles a day through heavy sand along the beach. Firpo does but five miles of road work and not much running to it. Instead of punching a heavy bag, Wills pulls a rowing machine.

Wills Gains, Despite Work.

And while Firpo is losing weight Wills finds the harder he works the more he gains! Luis has lost eight pounds, Harry has gained 14, now weighing 224, one pound more than Firpo says he weighs.

In one respect only do Wills' training ideas agree with Firpo's. Harry thinks that every man should train himself according to his own individual requirements. (This is the idea which the Finnish athletes who proved so redoubtable in the Olympics have given to our own Olympic athletes.) Therefore, both Wills and Firpo are their own trainers.

"Of course these big professional trainers know their business and more about training athletes than I do," Wills admitted. "But I figure I've been in the game long enough now to know just what it takes to get me in condition. I don't think they could help me any. While a trainer can tell a man's condition on the outside by looking at him, he don't know how the man feels on the inside. Some days that eight miles along the beach doesn't bother me at all and I can box five or six rounds and work all afternoon and never feel it. But other times I know that I'm just wearing out my energy inside, and nobody but me knows it."

Wills' Training Quarters.

Wills' boxing arena is indoors, on the former dance floor of Jones' Casino, a hotel restaurant owned and operated by a well-known Southampton character, William H. Jones. Wills lives in a cottage furnished by Jones, a few feet down the beach from the Casino, with his wife, two sparring partners and a cook. Harry says he chose this place to train in order to avoid big crowds of spectators. He says he can't train playing to the gallery. And yet from 20 to 30 persons a day, many of them fashionable and wealthy people from the Southampton summer resort, visit him daily.

When we dropped in at Wills' cottage we found him and two negro sparring partners, Jeff Clark, the "Joplin Ghost," and "Battling" Owens, sitting idle at a time of the afternoon when we expected they'd be working in the ring.

"First afternoon off in 33 days," Wills explained with a contented look. "I'm trained down now to the point where I'm liable to go stale. So I'm giving myself a vacation for a few days. I mean, I'm trained up so fine, for I weigh more now than I did when I started."

Wills looked in better condition than we ever saw him, much better than before the Madden fight.

Mother Supplies Cheese Mold.

He said he gets up at 6 every morning for his road work, and doesn't eat till 10. Then it's fruit, hominy or cereal of some kind, ham and eggs and whole wheat bread without butter most of the time, accompanied by his favorite dish, cream cheese with sugar and sweet cream over it.

His work in the ring comes from 3 to 4 shadow boxing, rope jumping, five or six rounds with his two sparring partners, and gymnastic exercises afterward on the mat. At 5:30 p. m. he eats his big meal, lamb or pork with plenty of vegetables and whole wheat bread.

We asked him about this cream cheese dish.

"It's the best training stuff in the world. I learned that from my mother in New Orleans. She sends me the cheese mold and I make my own. I get the best cream from Mr. Jones; let it stand until it gets thick, then pour it in the perforated mold so that the whey runs off and leaves the cheese. Let me show you," and Harry got up to get the mold.

At this point his wife came in and nothing would do but she should prepare a dish of it to prove its merits. And it was good! But we made a mistake by saying so, for in their good-natured hospitality we almost had to fight Wills and the whole camp to keep from eating three or four more platefuls.

A Happy Camp.

There is an air of good-natured jollity about Wills' camp that we missed in the Argentine outfit. When "Battling" Owens—he insisted on the "Battling"—gave his weight as 240, Wills and Clark laughed him down. "Two hundred and sixty, you mean."

To settle the argument they insisted on taking the barrel-chested giant to the scales, though he didn't want to go. Behind his back Harry put his foot on the scales, so that the weight went up to 284. "Battling" let out a roar, declaring that the scales were wrong, or else he'd never eat again. The rafters shook for 10 minutes as they laughed at "Battling's" bewildered expression, but they didn't tell him what was the matter.

Yanks Finally Beat Whitehill

Ten New Yorkers Go to Bat in Sixth Inning — Score Is 8 to 1.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Yankees evened up the series with the Detroit Tigers this afternoon through the fine pitching of Pennock, who held the Cobbmen scoreless till the ninth, and would not have been scored on except for an error by Scott. The score was 8 to 1. In the sixth inning 10 Yankees went to bat. Ruth started with a single and five more hits came afterward, grouped around two bad plays by the Tiger infield giving six runs to the New Yorkers. It was the first time the Yanks have beaten Whitehill. He beat them once last year and four times this season. Off Cole, the Yankees got two runs in the eighth when Scott hit a home run to deep center following a single by Ward. The attendance was 35,000.

SUNSARD

Sun Briar Colt Beats Pas Seul In Grand Union

Stable Companion, Sunny Man, Also by Sun Briar, Beaten Two Noses.

EPINARD ON EXHIBITION

French Four-Year-Old Put on Parade for Half an Hour.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Sunsini, the Lilane Stable's crawney little gelding, demonstrated all the qualities of a great horse in the Merchants and Citizens' Handicap, today, which he won by a nod from My Play, a full brother to Man O'War.

Hindered by an overeager rider, who permitted him to swerve and follow a zigzag course at the most critical time in the race, the gallant little gelding nevertheless held tenaciously to his task until the end of the mile and three-sixteenths event.

Kelsey, who rode Sunsini, made his move much too soon and he had his mount fully extended some distance before the top of the stretch. Schuttinger, on the other hand, gave My Play an excellent ride and consequently the latter was comparatively fresh when that bitter stretch duel began.

Sunsini beat his own rider as well as My Play in the last furlong. Perhaps he broke his heart doing so, but he certainly ran the greatest race of his career.

Diogenes finished third. Neither he nor little Chieftain, the only other starter, ever had a chance after running six furlongs. They were quite content to quit and call it a day.

Sunsard Winner.

The Willis Sharpe Kilmer entry was made favorite in the famous Grand Union Hotel Stakes for 2-year-olds. But it was really Sunny Man who drew the support of a majority of the 25,000 spectators who witnessed today's remarkable racing program. Sunsard, the other half of the entry, was deemed little more than a pacemaker. But Sunsard proved to be the only horse in the big field of youngsters which could run at all in the heavy going. Under the light impost of 112 pounds, he spattered through the mud to a four-length victory over Pas Seul, Sunny Man, the winner's stable mate, laboring under the crushing weight of 130 pounds, finished third. The remainder of the big field was strung out at the end for nearly a sixteenth of a mile.

It was a great day for the Kilmer stallion, Sun Briar. He is the sire of Sunsini as well as of Sunsard and Sunny Man. Sunsard's victory was worth $10,000 to Kilmer.

Today's card at the Spa was the finest in many months. Besides the two major stake events, there was the celebrated Beveryck Steeplechase. Houdini beat the favorite Sans Peche without great difficulty in the chase.

Epinard Exhibited.

Epinard, through the courtesy of his owner, Pierre Wertheimer, was introduced to the crowd between fifth and sixth races this afternoon. The colt looks every inch a champion. Everett Haynes was on his back wearing the Wertheimer silks.

His introduction, however, took on the nature of an endurance parade. With "Red Coat" Murray on his lead pony, heading the parade, it passed back and forth in monotonous regularity for about a half hour. Even the docile Epinard showed some annoyance.

Gov. Al. Smith visited the track this afternoon. He watched the racing from R. T. Wilson's box. While there, the track band played the "Sidewalks of New York" for him seven times. The Governor said that made it an even million times he had heard the tune.

120 BICYCLE RIDERS HAVE ENTERED RACES TO BE HELD SEPT. 1

The first event on the program is a ten-mile handicap, the next race gives the girls a chance, it being a one and one-quarter mile race. Lieb Establishes New Discus Mark In Chicago Meet

Illinois A. C. Stars Win With 120 Points—Three Firsts for Riley.

Joie Ray Races to Track From Train To Win Mile Event

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.

"CHESTY" Joie Ray of the I. A. C. pulled a regular Frank Merriwell here today.

Returning from the Paris Olympic games, his train into Chicago arrived 15 minutes before the mile run in the C. A. A. U. games at Stagg Field.

Joie, knowing the connection would be close, dressed in the smoking compartment, jumped into a taxi and was whisked to Stagg Field. He hardly had time to catch his breath before he was sent on his way by the starter's pistol, and he won.

Ray's time was 4:23 3-5. He ran just fast enough to beat Ray Watson, a teammate, and also an Olympic hero. Hall of the C. A. A. was third.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Featured by the record-breaking performance of Tom Lieb in the discus throw and appearance of other members of the victorious American Olympic Team, athletes representing the Illinois Athletic Club today won the annual outdoor track and field championships of the Central A. A. U. on Stagg Field, with a total of 120 points. The Chicago A. A. was second with 65 points and unattached athletes third with 18 points.

Lieb tossed the discus 152 feet, which shattered the old mark of 143 feet, 3½ inches, made by Arlie Mucks, of the C. A. A. in 1915.

Ivan Riley of the I. A. C. was the individual star with 15 points. He won the 120, 440 and 220 yard hurdles.

Table of points:

Illinois A. C.	120
Chicago A. A.	65
University of Chicago	11
Norwegian American A. A.	1

Ivan Riley of the I. A. C., a member of the victorious American Olympic Team, had the honor of winning the first event. The Tri-Color athlete took the 120-yard high hurdles by three yards from his team mate, Werner, while Croft of the C. A. A. was third. Riley's time for the event was :15 1-5.

Hermanson Wins Dash.

Cherry Circle colors flashed to the front in the 100-yard dash which Hermanson won in a blanket finish with Ottor of the I. A. C. and Doe, who ran unattached. The winner's time was :10 1-5.

In one of the closest finishes seen on a cinder path in years, Stevenson of the I. A. C. defeated Fitch of the C. A. A. in the 440-yard run. For the last 50 yards they raced stride for stride but Stevenson won by inches and then fell exhausted on the track. Calhoun, former Northwestern runner, was third and Ascher of the C. A. A. fourth. Stevenson's time was :50 3-5.

Vardon a Great Golfer Because He Never Presses, Sarazen Writes

Always Chooses the Longer Club When in Doubt — Strives for Direction First, Power Last — Putting Only Department of Game in Which He Is Weak.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Champion.
(Copyright, 1924).

Harry Vardon, one of the greatest golfers of all time is probably the smoothest and easiest swinging golfer who has ever played the game. Bobby Jones has been his only rival in this respect. Vardon at 52 years of age was still one of England's leading golfers. He is now 56 years old and is still capable of playing a strong game. His easy style enabled him to keep pace with the others.

Vardon had two mottoes which all of us could well afford always to keep in mind. "Never press." "When in doubt use the longer club."

How often have we all been short, way short, because we failed to use the longer club.

Vardon used his spoon more than any club in his bag, I daresay. He could play all kinds of shots with that club. He found it easier to get the ball into the air and he did not have to struggle as hard to get home as he would have had to with an iron. He could play the ball up to the green with his spoon and cut in such manner it would stop dead on landing. He could play a low shot into the wind or he could use it in the ordinary way.

A Graceful Style.

Vardon's style was very easy and also very graceful. His swing was very upright. He used the square stance on all shots and stood well over the ball. He took the club back almost in a straight line, then up, pivoting easily, but not noticeably so, at the same time. He never hurried his swing either backward or forward. Yet on occasion he could get quite as much distance as the other fellow.

I have seen Vardon outdriven fully 50 yards by others. But when the players came onto the green Harry was always there in the same number of strokes as the other fellow.

Up to the greens he had no superior. One reason Vardon won the British Open Championship so often was because of his uncanny direction. He was never off the fairway and generally he was right on the line to the flag. He believed in control first, power last.

A Poor Putter.

He never carried his shot, always kept his head and always swung the club at the same, even rythmical manner. No wonder he was hard to beat. Even when tired there was ease to Vardon's swing.

Peculiarly enough Vardon was a poor putter for the reason he hurried the stroke and failed to take the club back in a straight line all the time. Putting was the only department of the game in which Vardon was weak.

He was one of the greatest mashie players the game has ever seen, principally because he used a short back-swink and took plenty of time in swinging the club.

The next time you play a round of golf keep in mind Vardon's saying "Never press; when in doubt use the longer club" and notice how much your game will improve.

St. Andrews Club Against Including Golf in Olympics

LONDON, AUG. 23.

THE Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews is opposed to participation in the Olympic Games. Mr. A. C. M. Croome, the golf expert, says: "The attitude of Royal and Ancient Golf Club has by some critics been described as Olympian, but the club is nowise Olympic, and none of its varied activities can be said to be even remotely concerned with Olympiads. If any competent authority is minded to institute a competition at golf St. Andrews has no power to veto the scheme. • • • •

"Except in this country and in the United States, there are not enough courses to provide a sufficient number of players from whom teams worthy of the occasion could be selected. For this reason, and also because an adequate course cannot be provided in every country where the games have been and may be held. The inclusion of golf in an Olympic program is to be utterly cried down."

Senators Defeat White Sox, 2-1

Mogridge Has Better of Hurling Duel With Hollis Thurston.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23.—The Nationals took their second straight verdict from the White Sox, 2 to 1, today. Mogridge had the better of Hollis Thurston in a pitching duel that was replete with sensational plays, one of the features of which was Archdeacon's attempt to score from first base in the final round on Kamm's single. He was flagged on Harris' relay to the plate, but the play was close.

Errors by Barrett and Kamm gave the Griffmen their first run, while safeties by McNeely and Rice accounted for the second.

The lone tally registered by the visitors developed in round 2 when Barrett doubled after Kamm drew the only pass issued by Mogridge.

FIRPO SLIGHT CHOICE OVER WILLS, WITH BOUT ONLY 18 DAYS DISTANT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—With the Wills-Firpo heavyweight bout little more than two weeks away, betting interest over the event is becoming livelier in Wall Street and substantial sums are being put up on both sides.

According to J. S. Fried & Co., No. 20 Broad street, who handled several hundred thousand dollars on the Dempsey-Firpo fight last September, the bulk of the money at present offering is on the South American and in consequence he has a slight edge in the betting over his opponent, some wagers having been made at odds of 11 to 10 on Firpo.

Most of the bets placed, however, have been at even money and the firm named reported at the close of business yesterday that they had plenty of cash to lay on those terms.

Tea Served at Casa Firpo.

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Luis Angel Firpo has borrowed the tea habit from the English. Visitors calling at "Casa Firpo" in the hour before the Argentine starts his daily training, see the wild bull sipping tea from a tumbler.

Manuel, the valet-chef-comedian, will have glasses of tea for the visitors. Luis Angel says the tea strengthens muscles and makes the work feel like nothing at all.

This afternoon Firpo decreased the training program, boxing four rounds instead of the usual six. But the four were slashing affairs, Tate and Ferrara being the absorbers. Firpo's improving left was much in evidence and his wallops were unusually hard.

Golf in the Rain.

AN advocate of a change in golf rules to provide for postponement of tournament play in case of rain, cites a ruling by the late Crafts Higgins which is pertinent. Higgins was nationally known as an authority on golf and was much in demand as an official at tournaments.

During the qualifying round of a tournament one of the greens was mowed, after half or more of the contestants had played on that green. Thus the players who putted on the green after it was cut played under different conditions. The case was placed before Higgins with a question as to whether the mowing of the green was sufficient reason for declaring that qualifying round null and void.

Higgins answered tersely, without comment or qualification. His answer was, "It certainly is."

Object Is Fairness.

EVEN if the green was a bit sluggish for the early qualifiers and fats for the last half of the field, it is not likely that the changed conditions made any great difference in the scores. Perhaps the cut green made the difference of one stroke in one score out of twenty. But there was the chance for a difference and because of the changed conditions the round was declared null and void.

And yet the change in the condition of that green was negligible, compared to the change in the course that occurs when it rains. Every green becomes heavy. There is casual water in the fairways and the bunkers become small lakes. A man who can make a 75 on a dry course, is lucky to turn in an 80 in the rain. A cut green, which is not likely to change more than one score in twenty, nullifies a qualifying round, but a rainstorm, which adds strokes to 19 out of 20 scores, is just a tough break and it's up to the players to do the best they can.

Best in the District.

JIMMY MANION, trans-Mississippi golf champion, picks No. 10 at Normandie as the best golf hole in the St. Louis district, and while other stars of the links may pick more picturesque bits of terrain, they won't pick a more difficult layout than the first on Normandie's inward nine.

"It takes a perfect 225-yard drive, to the left side of the course, which puts you in position where the green opens up for your second shoot," writes Manion. "The second would be a tremendous long iron or a perfect spoon shot to the green, which is guarded by a ravine in front, extending around the right side.

"If there is a slight breeze blowing from the West, it takes a tremendous drive and a brassie. If the wind is from the East, a long drive and a good mashie will put you on."

The hole is blind and it takes a tremendous wallop to put you within sight of the green. The ditch in front of the green usually has a foot of water in it. There is trouble on both sides of the green and the second shot MUST be straight. Usually the second is a blind shot. If a man shoots consistently for five, one over par, he will collect cash in the long run. No. 10 at Normandie is one of the toughest par four holes in the district.

Epinard Will Be Hard to Beat in First U. S. Trial

French Champion Believed by Stable to Have Regained His Best Form.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Epinard, the great French thoroughbred, who has been preparing here for the past month for his three international races against the pick of American thoroughbreds, will be almost at the top of his form when he is shipped to Belmont track, next Tuesday, his trainer, Gene Leigh, declares.

Since his arrival here Epinard has shown in his appearance and in his workouts that he is near the top of his performance. He is bigger and stronger than when he arrived, and he takes kindly to his work, fighting for his head in his recent half-mile spins.

Epinard will be shipped with Ladkin and another Belmont horse for companionship. The remaining days before Monday, Sept. 1, will be spent in tuning up this wonderful piece of equine machinery for his first trial.

Epinard's first event will be a six-furlong sprint against Snob II, Wise Counsellor, Zev and a small field of good ones. It is probable that only half a dozen stars will go to the post for the $25,000 prize.

Sprinters Prepped for First Race.

Wise Counsellor, Sarazen and Snob II have received especial preparation for this race. They will have a big advantage over Epinard in that they will go to the post having been tuned up in actual races at the six-furlong distance.

Epinard will meet this field without having the advantage of a preceding race, except such as may be arranged privately. Perhaps nothing more than a public trial with a pacemaker will be asked of him.

The six-furlong race is only one of three distances at which Epinard must make good.

The other races are at one mile, Sept. 27, and one and a quarter miles, Oct. 11. Wet or dry, near or far, Epinard will have to go to the post against mudders if it rains, pasteboard track flyers if the track is fast, sprinters in the six-furlong race and distance specialists in the mile and one-quarter.

If he should win all three events the world would hail him as the greatest performer of all time.

JOHN BLACK WILL PLAY IN WESTERN OPEN EVENT

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—John Black of Wichita, Kan., the "old master" who competed from California in the national open meet three years ago, today entered the Western open golf championship at Calumet Country Club, Sept. 4, 5 and 6.

William Creavy, Oklahoma City, William Braid of Upper Montclair, N. J., Robert Craigs and Craig Wood of Louisville also entered.

HORNSBY GREATEST BATTER OF ALL TIME, HEYDLER ASSERTS

League Head Says Cards Slugger Is Better Than Ruth

For Sheer Straight-Away Hitting He Thinks Rogers Is Without Parallel.

IMPROVES WITH YEARS

Also His Effectiveness Has Grown Steadily as the Season Progresses.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis Cardinal star, whose hitting has been a major league sensation during the past week, is a greater batsman than Babe Ruth in the opinion of John A. Heydler, president of the National League.

"I am convinced that Hornsby is the greatest batsman of all time," declared Heydler, who has just returned from a tour of his league's Western circuit.

Comparing the two kings of clout, the executive said:

"Ruth is a marvelous batsman. He is the longest hitter the game has ever known. There is no argument there. But it is the greatest batsman of whom I speak, as an all-round, day-by-day, year-after-year performer, taking into account the cold averages, as well as the heat of the fray, hard hitting, regular hitting, it is my firm belief that the crown should go to the Texas boy—Hornsby."

Rogers' Great Average.

Heydler admitted he may be contradicted by partisans of the famous batters of old days as well as the present time, but pointed to the facts to bear out his claim.

"While I was in the West Hornsby spurted from his big hitting average of .407 to the amazing figure of .420. During two days in St. Louis this week, he made 13 hits in 14 trips to the plate. He batted 1000 against the Giants in a double-header Thursday and .500 yesterday. He is driving the ball out across the diamond like a projectile from a field gun.

"Hornsby started out this year to excel the record set by Wagner, who led the league in batting four consecutive years, and he has held the lead without a slump or a break. Instead of giving in under the strain he is soaring higher. Only one other major league batter has excelled Hornsby's present unofficial .424 mark, after midseason, and that was Hugh Duffy with .438 in 1894."

Asked about the pennant race, Heydler declared it had developed into a "great contest with several teams up close enough to win." Staying powers and steadiness under the strain, he added, should decide the issue.

Eight Tennis Tournaments In a Day, Record for City

Play All in Club Championships—Joe Smith Wins Forest Park Title—250-Pound Player in Tower Grove Park Meet.

By Davison Obear.

All local records for tennis tournament play in a single day were broken yesterday when contests were held by eight different clubs in the city and county. All of the events were for members of the various clubs except the St. Louis county doubles championship at the Kirkwood Country Club.

The interest in tennis at this time is a further evidence of the growth of the game since last year. One of the principal reasons is the holding of the National Clay Court tennis championship at the Triple A Club in July. This served as a stimulus and with the aid of the St. Louis District Tennis Association and various officials a greater interest has been shown by the local tennis enthusiasts.

There has been more tennis played in St. Louis during the last two months than in any previous year. This statement is substantiated by reports of the local sporting goods stores which show a far greater sale of tennis balls than last season.

Joe Smith Wins a Title.

The annual tournament for the singles championship of the Forest Park Tennis Club was completed yesterday afternoon. Joe Smith, local junior champion, defeated George Pasmore, former Soldan High and city interscholastic titleholder, in the final round. The score was 6-1, 6-4, 6-4.

Both players hit the ball hard in the first set. Smith won it owing to accuracy in placements. Pasmore ran up a lead of 3 to 0 in the second set but was not steady enough to win it. He gained a lead of 4 to 2 in the third set but again failed to win. Smith showed very good judgment at critical times, winning needed points.

Forest Park Results.

Men's singles—Semi final round—Joe Smith defeated George Reid, 6-3, 6-1. George Pasmore defeated Jim Murphy, 6-3, 6-3.

Kinseys Defeat Australians For National Doubles Title

line much of the time to maintain their occasional lobbing game, while the Australians presented a tandem formation. Wood's service was broken on the fifth game, when these tactics led him into errors, and after Patterson had turned the lob against its exponents to defeat Robert Kinney's service, the brothers got themselves in hand again and beat Patterson in the same way, to make their victory in the set possible.

The second set was another story, again a 12-game session of close contention, but with the Australians forcing the issue after Wood had been beaten in the first game. Wood, a great doubles player, developed first from mediocrity in the early game to greatness, and beat down Robert Kinsey's delivery for the deciding game.

Patterson rose to approach Wood's stroking standards on the third set, when, by winning 9—7, the Australians gained the lead. The Kinseys struggled manfully, but Wood alone scored 13 placement shots and Patterson had 12. Patterson's service broke down to give the American an early advantage, but a double fault called on Howard Kinsey, gave his service game to Australia to tie it again, and although Patterson lost on service once more, the Australians came back with smashing strokes to upset Robert Kinsey and take the set.

Mix Lobs With Drives.

It looked like an American doubles title for Australia, when the Antipodeans ran away with the first three games of the fourth set. But the Kinseys were not beaten. Instead, they marshalled their forces again, one more mixed lob with drive, and ran through six straight games when the Australians yielded to errors under pressure. Of the American's 29 points, 26 were on nets and outs by Patterson and Wood.

The match was now tied. The players went at it hammer and tongs. It resulted in victory for the Kinseys, 6—4, because they were steadier under the strain, Robert Kinsey sending 10 shots across for points, to break through Woods' service three times, and again compelling the Antipodeans to roll up a score on errors.

The Australians were fighting—the fifth game, which Howard served, going 26 points—and rallies were prolonged by remarkable recoveries and returns. The deadly lob again was called on by the Kinseys, and it brought them the championship.

An Impressive Exhibition.

National mixed doubles play, running back 36 years, has been no more impressive exhibition than that of Miss Wills in her nineteenth year, and of Richards, only a year or two past his majority, in the second and third sets of their match with Tilden and Mrs. Mallory, in the opinion of veteran observers. Tilden in the first set was the controlling figure, although Miss Wills' returns of his drives to her backhand were astonishing for a woman player.

In the second set, Richards took the center of the stage and held it thereafter, but with his girl partner sharing it with him, as she neutralized the force of Tilden's volleys, and assisted Richards in turning back Tilden's redoubtable service. Richards' faith in the girl was shown when he had her begin service in the second set, although it went against her.

The playing through champions won the first set, 8—6, although Richards scored 11 placements to Tilden's seven. The errors that Tilden forced were the result of play that saw him at his best, except in one game which he served and lost.

Mrs. Mallory Falters.

Through nine games of the second set, Tilden stroked placement after placement, to gain a lead of 5—4 in games for his team, and with two points of victory on the tenth game. Then Miss Wills sent a service ace spinning across on her service, the attack was directed against Mrs. Mallory and she failed, the three additional points coming on her nets. The next game was captured by the youngsters on Mrs. Mallory's service, and the set went to them 7—5, when Richards made his service good.

These last three games, with the six that they ran off consecutively to win the third set at love, made a total of nine straight games by Miss Wills and Richards against the champions. This last set was a succession of super-shots by Richards. Miss Wills and Tilden contributed plays that brought applause occasionally, but the method in which Richards tossed off shots from all angles, was applauded by Tilden himself afterward as little short of marvelous.

FIGHT AGAINST NEW ROAD LOST

Court Upholds Condemnation for Belleville-Freeburg Highway.

An injunction was denied in the Belleville Circuit Court yesterday to Mrs. Mary Wuest and others, in which it was sought to restrain the prosecution of condemnation suits for the acquirement of land for a new roadway between Belleville and Freeburg. The Court held that the Illinois Commerce Commission was within its rights in ordering condemnation proceedings for the acquiring of the necessary land for a highway which will eliminate two dangerous grade crossings on the Illinois Central Railroad.

The petitioners contended that the commission exceeded its authority in ordering the construction of a new roadway four miles long and that it did not abolish the two dangerous grade crossings, because the old road will remain. The fight of persons living in the territory against the relocation of the highway has held up State-aid road work for the last two weeks. Condemnation suits to acquire 10 acres of land will be started Monday in Belleville.

No More Curfew in Belleville.

Curfew will not ring in Belleville in the future. The reason for this is the removal from the two Belleville Fire Department houses of the old-time fire bells. The bell was taken from the belfry of the Jackson street department has served for fire calls and for curfew alarm for 52 years, and the bell in the belfry of the West End engine house has been in use 30 years.

WALES SLIPS OUT OF GAY FAREWELL

Quietly Boards Liner for America After Leaving London by Auto.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

ON BOARD STEAMER BERENGARIA, Aug. 23. — (By Wireless.) — The American liner Leviathan, passing the Berengaria, on which the Prince of Wales is traveling to the United States, signaled him a cordial greeting shortly after this vessel sailed from England today. During the afternoon, the Prince was promenading the decks in public and this evening he dined in the main dining salon with Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, who are accompanying him, and Capt. W. R. D. Irvine, Commander of the Berengaria. The Prince was in a cheery mood and high spirits in contemplation of his American visit.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Aug. 23.—The Prince of Wales, who sailed for the United States on the Berengaria at 2:30 this afternoon, outwitted those intending to give him a ceremonious sendoff by slipping quietly aboard the vessel early this morning.

Determined that there should be as little ceremony as possible in connection with his semiofficial visit to America, his royal highness late last night sped quietly out of London by automobile, spent a few hours at the Isle of Wight, about 20 miles from here, boarded the Berengaria almost without being noticed, and immediately went to bed.

As the Prince intended traveling in the guise of an ordinary passenger it had been arranged that he should come here on the regular boat train leaving the Waterloo station, London, at 11 o'clock this morning. He was assured of a hearty sendoff there by the crowds who always surge around him to witness his comings and goings.

The last-minute change in his plans caused much disappointment among his admirers who wanted to catch a last glimpse of "Our Prince" before American society claims him.

On the Isle of Wight the Prince spent a few hours with Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, who are to accompany him on the voyage. He left in a motor launch during the small hours of the morning and boarded the Berengaria at 4 o'clock. There he went straight to bed, leaving orders to be called at 10 o'clock.

The great liner was dressed in her best array to receive the Prince, gaily colored flags flying from the stem to stern and from starboard to port. Outwardly the liner looked like a brand new ship, for she had been painted all over and up to the last minute workmen were busy putting finishing touches to her hull.

When the Prince came aboard he expressed himself as pleased with his self-contained floating flat of five rooms. During the voyage his cuisine will not be any different from that of the ordinary saloon passenger, inasmuch as he will be able to order whatever dishes suit his palate. The menu will be varied, including many American dishes, among which are seven different kinds of melons. There also is on board a quantity of grouse from the Scottish moors which arrived by airplane yesterday.

The ship's chef has prepared several decorative features for the cold buffet. The centerpiece, carved in wax, represent Neptune raising aloft a trident in his right hand and driving four sea horses with his left hand. Neptune stands in a chariot and is rising from the sea.

WHITE PLAINS, N. TWO POLICEMEN AND ROBBER SLAIN IN FIGHT

Son of Marquette (Mich.) Chief Wounded by Slayer of Father.

By the Associated Press.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 23.—Marquette's Chief of Police, Martin Ford, and Patrolman Thomas Thornton, met death early today with their revolvers clutched in their hands. In the revolver fight that cost them their lives, and which began here and ended at Chocolay, four miles away, John Lempi, slayer of Ford and Thornton, was shot to death, and Lloyd seriously wounded.

Thornton came upon Lempi attempting to break into the Boucher Drug Store. At his command to "Throw up your hands," Thornton Ford, son of the police chief, was said, Lempi began firing, one of the bullets mortally wounding the officer.

Despite his wound, Thornton pursued Lempi, the two exchanging shots until Thornton collapsed. He was found under a clump of bushes by Patrolman Walter Tippett.

Pursuit of Lempi was renewed by the police chief, his son and Tippitt. They came on their man concealed by the high banks of the Chocolay River. Lempi, crouched behind the bank, killed the police chief with his first shot. Lloyd, standing near his father, opened fire, but fell a moment later with a bullet in the abdomen, and a deep gash in the head from another.

Lempi was in the river when Tippett reached the bank. He sank at the patrolman's first shot. His body was recovered half an hour later. A bullet in the head caused his death.

Getting down to brass tacks

What do we mean by Cumulative Economy in a Kewanee Boiler? Thank you for the question. It's easy to answer. We mean long-life to begin with, because the boiler is made of steel plate-riveted. It won't and can't wear out. Its down-draught device (built in) compels entire consumption of all the gases, hence none of your hard-earned cash goes up the chimney in smoke.

COAL

You can burn any kind or grade of fuel in the Kewanee All-steel Smokeless Firebox boiler and you don't need a figure-wizard to tell you how much you save over the high-priced smokeless coal. You don't have to spend any money to speak of in repairs. If we were to set an average, it would be about $1.50 a year, and maybe not even that.

Put all these facts together, add 'em up, look at the result and then write us one good, sane, sensible, reasonable reason why you should use any other type of boiler in the world. Education by Automobile

There is always something fresh and stimulating in Nature during the Summer. She literally "speaks a varied language" to all who come into close touch with her during the time of birds and blossoms.

There's really only one easy way to find nature at her best, and learn most effectively the lesson she teaches—and that is by means of an automobile.

Get a car. Go out into the country for a day, and at the end tabulate the things you've seen and heard like this:

Varied shades of green foliage seen, 5
Blossoms in forest and gardens 11
Cloud forms observed 2
Specimen wild flowers collected 6
The birds seen and heard 7
Growing grains noted 4

Add them: 5+11+2+6+7+4=Education.

You do not measure these things by a money standard. They are intellectual values.

And the means of obtaining them are well within the reach of every Post-Dispatch reader.

They are to be found in the classified "Automobiles" columns of the Post-Dispatch. Good values at moderate prices prevail.

If you haven't a car, investigate carefully. It means health for the body and education for the mind.

By leased wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Coincident with further indications of some improvement in business has come selling in stocks, bonds and commodities, so that on the whole speculative markets have lost their buoyancy and the week has brought recessions in prices. While confidence has increased among business men, stock market sentiment is less optimistic than it was a week ago. However, it takes very little in the way of a market movement to swing sentiment one way or the other, and stocks have by no means been uniformly weak. Selling in virtually all markets has been of a profit-taking character. No immediate pronounced hardening in money rates is looked for at this time by the best quarters. Business improvement still is largely a matter of hope rather than an actuality, and those in control of large amounts of capital have no incentive to withdraw their funds from the securities market. Professional and small traders, however, perhaps have become somewhat uneasy over the possibility of firmer money.

Money Slightly Firmer.

"Although call money has held persistently at 2 per cent, as the week closed, the socalled outside market disappeared as a factor. Meanwhile time funds for short maturities are no longer available at less than 2¾ per cent, as against 2½ per cent a week ago. Commercial paper rates are virtually unchanged, but the tone is firmer. Bankers' acceptances have been more numerous and the rates have advanced one-eighth of 1 per cent. Money shifts about seeking the most profitable employment, and since commercial demands in this market have not increased, according to the banks, and since the movement of crops is getting into full swing, this alone doubtless furnishes the explanation for the moderately harder money. The Federal Reserve statement for the week, showing a shifting credit to the West, should appear to confirm this view.

"Meanwhile, the upward movement in bonds has slowed down to the point where it has virtually come to a halt. New issues during the week were only moderate, but the market looks for a considerable increase in foreign borrowing along with the German loan, which may come, according to good quarters, some time in October. It is possible that large flotations may be held back for this major operation, but with it out of the way American investors undoubtedly will be offered opportunities to send their capital abroad at attractive yields. This eventually will have an effect on the money market.

"Little change in the industrial situation has occurred, but the trend is on the side of improvement, although conditions are mixed. Steel buying continues to pick up slowly, though prices, as is usually the case following a period of dullness, are still unsteady. Scrap and pig iron, however, good indicators of the trend of industry, are firmer. The oil industry, on the other hand, has lost ground, if anything. Production still mounts and prices are weaker. Car loading reports are beginning to show the effect of the crop movement.

Commodity Price Trend.

"An encouraging feature in the industrial situation is the increased activity among the cotton textile mills. It is now quite evident that this year's cotton crop will be approximately 300,000 bales larger than last year's. This means that spinners will be able to get ample supplies of raw material and offer their cloth at prices which will attract consumption. Corn and wheat have suffered sharp reactions, but these markets plainly had discounted the situation and speculation, as usual, had carried prices too high.

"Foreign exchanges have failed to hold all of their recent gains. Reaction in sterling and French francs, while it may suggest some uncertainty regarding the remaining steps to be taken before a German loan can be floated and the Dawes plan given a tryout, has not been severe enough to indicate actual lack of confidence. Further opposition is bound to develop before ratification of the agreement reached at London comes, but the prospects for success remain reasonably bright. Moreover, this is the season of the year when Europe buys American cotton and food stuffs, and seasonal factors alone are usually sufficient to bring some reaction in the exchange rates."

"There was scattered liquidation today in the stock market in which comparatively few spots in the list escaped. Comparing the prices to which some of the more active securities fell, there were rather heavy declines from the best quotations of the week, but this was held to be the result of profit-taking rather than any change in the general outlook. The usual weekly reviews of trade were optimistic and portended further improvement in the various lines covered. Before the short session had been brought to a close a rallying movement came into being with timely effect. Bonds were somewhat irregular.

Reaction in Foreign Exchanges.

"A reactionary movement came into foreign exchanges chiefly attributable to selling from continental Europe on account of a slight delay in ratification by Germany of the reparations agreement. Bankers who had bought exchanges two days ago were among today's sellers, although the amount of business transacted on the decline was regarded as no more than moderate. Sterling, which was fractionally down in the early dealings, lost further ground in a slight decline which extended to more than one cent to the pound. Francs dropped to 5.34½ from their previous closing price of 5.38¼; Italian lire fell from 4.41½ to 4.41. The remaining foreign currencies also very largely presented a weakening tendency. Running counter to the general trend of foreign exchanges the Canadian dollar slightly stiffened and again touched the dollar mark. It was the second time this week that this currency touched par, the first occurrence being Wednesday, following which attainment it reacted yesterday only to come back this morning. The flow of American dollars into the Dominion as a result of recent financing was the accredited basis for current strength.

Cotton Waits on Government.

"The cotton market assumed a waiting attitude because of the Government report due at noon in which the indicated crop will be estimated. The trade had its own ideas as to what this would show and these predictions closely clung to around 13,000,000 bales. The cotton exchange took an unprecedented step in closing its trading activities 15 minutes before the noon hour in order to avoid confusion as the crop figures were announced. Further liquidation occurred in the grain markets, both wheat and corn settling back from their previous closing levels. Wheat is now down about 10 cents a bushel from the high for the week and corn is about 12 cents below the top earlier established.

"The statement of the New York clearing house as of the close of business Aug. 23, revealed the following changes in condition: Loans, discounts, investments, increased $44,417,000; net demand deposits, increased $41,058,000; time deposits, decreased $17,542,000; circulation, increased $33,000, and excess reserves decreased $17,215,250.

PETROLEUM STOCKS MIXED IN WEEK'S MOVEMENTS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—A decided reactionary tendency developed on the curb exchange today. A sharp break occurred in American Light and Traction, which dropped 8 points on comparatively small sales. There were several recessions of about one point each in the recent speculative favorites. Lehigh Valley Coal was one of the few to maintain its recent trading position.

Petroleum shares were in supply today following the announcement of a reduction in the wholesale price for gasoline in this district. South Pennsylvania yielded 2 points. Vacuum Oil became strong after an early period of pressure and the minor oils held fairly steady.

The depression was of short duration, however, and subsequent dealings were in reduced volume with partial recoveries being registered in the more prominent securities.

Several groups of stocks were active and strong during the week, but business was not evenly distributed and there were many of the usually active issues which failed to share in either advances or declines. Public utilities continued the chief features of the market. Coal stocks were strong early in the week.

Petroleum stocks were mixed in their movements all through the week. South Penn was a strong feature, advancing to 137, while New England Fuel dropped from 40 to 33.

Mining stocks were again active with large trading in many issues.

BETTER WEATHER WEAKENS CORN MARKET; MOVEMENT OF NEW SPRING WHEAT BEGINS

Wide Downward Range to the Coarse Grain During Week—Oats Are Weaker With Corn and Wheat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A decline of 10c per bushel in corn prices was the outstanding feature of the grain market during the week ending Aug. 23, according to the weekly review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Better weather throughout the corn belt was a weakening factor in the market and caused rather heavy selling in the future market, which had apparently advanced to a point beyond that warranted by the general market and crop conditions. Cash prices generally followed the decline in futures as the demand was limited. Since corn prices have reached their present high level, buyers have taken only sufficient corn for their immediate needs, which has resulted in an accumulation of stocks in the terminal markets. These stocks now total more than 3,000,000 bushels, which is more than twice as much as was in store at the corresponding time last year.

Southern and Southwestern buying was more active as crop prospects are fairly good in that section. Northern buyers, however, became more active at Kansas City and other southwestern markets where prices have been relatively lower than at Chicago.

Further importations of Argentine corn were reported at Atlantic Coast ports and the total importations into the United States and Canada are now estimated at between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 bushels. According to recent estimates possibly 25,000,000 bushels of corn are still available for export from Argentina, but only a small percentage of this is likely to come to the United States. Rigid quarantine restrictions against the importation of this corn into the United States are in effect, and the Canadian Government issued regulations effective Aug. 1, which it is understood prohibits the importation of grain into that country except from the United States. The corn market is still in an unsettled condition and will be greatly affected by weather changes during the next few weeks.

The wheat market was weaker in sympathy with corn and prices at the close of the week were 5 cents to 6 cents below those prevailing a week ago. Continued heavy receipts of wheat, which have resulted in large accumulations at the markets, together with a falling off in the demand, particularly from local mills, were also weakening factors in the market. The visible supply is now about 10,000,000 bushels larger than last year and stocks at Wichita and Kansas City were near the largest on record. Receipts of hard winter wheat have fallen off materially, but the demand for the wheat is also of smaller volume, as the Southwestern mills have their needs well supplied and Northwestern mills have withdrawn from the hard winter wheat markets because of the beginning of the movement of the new spring wheat. Elevator interests have also become more cautious buyers as their stocks are becoming heavier. The movement of new spring wheat increased materially during the week and receipts showed an excellent demand. Threshing returns also show a larger yield than has been generally expected, and reports from trade sources indicate that the spring wheat crop will probably be at least 50,000,000 bushels larger than the Government report Aug. 1. Premiums for spring wheat held fairly steady and No. 1 new dark Northern sold at 4c to 16c over the September price at Minneapolis. Mills were active buyers of the new wheat, feeling that later arrivals would show weather damage because of the rainy weather which prevailed in the spring wheat belt. Durum wheat receipts were fairly liberal and practically all new wheat. No. 1 amber durum was quoted at Minneapolis at 6c to 7c over the Duluth September price, which closed Friday at $1.21½.

The oats market was weaker with corn and wheat and prices declined 3c to 4c during the week. The harvesting of oats is practically completed in the United States and a larger movement was generally expected by the trade. Receipts during the week were materially larger than last week, but with the high price of corn there are indications that the heavy after-harvest movement will not be as large as usual. There was an active demand for the arrivals at practically all the markets, and receipts generally were well absorbed. At the decline on Friday, however, sellers were reluctant to dispose of their grain and at Omaha, particularly, considerable grain was carried over unsold.

ENORMOUS SELLING OF LONG WHEAT ON CHICAGO MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Enormous selling of long wheat flooded the pit immediately after the opening today and carried prices off 4 cents. A fair rally on short covering followed near the close, but the market looked groggy. No particular news accounted for the wave of liquidation aside from the fact that the wheat yields in North America have increased materially over the prospects of two months ago and the load of cash grain on the market and in sight have flaunted bullish hopes for the present.

One of the biggest commission houses in the trade was said to have sold heavily of wheat early. This was regarded as the selling out principally by a party who for months has been a bull on wheat, not to say all grains. General liquidation followed. On the break there was heavy buying of September, credited to exporters. Locals said that there were at least 2,000,000 bushels domestic wheat sold abroad on the break.

Crop condition over the American and Canadian Northwest are becoming ideal for maturing and harvesting of spring wheat. The trade looks for an early heavy run of spring wheat from the farms on both sides of the international line. Wheat closed 2⅝c to 2⅞c lower.

Longs in corn stampeded to sell out as the grain continued its toboggan. On the break heavy short covering developed, but the close was near the bottom. Weather conditions over the corn belt have improved materially the past week. At the last corn was off 1¾c to 5c lower.

It was the same story in oats and rye. Liquidation carried the market down rapidly, overwhelming the feeble buying power. Covering by shorts was the steadying influence finally. Country offerings of new crop oats are increasing. Oats closed 1⅛c to 2⅝c lower.

Provisions slumped under belated liquidation. Commission house selling flooded the pit. Packers and cash interests were the best buyers on the break. The weakness in corn and hogs at the yards which the depression influence in the product. Lard closed 37½c to 42½c lower. Ribs were off 20c and clear bellies 30c to 50c.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 23.—Grain futures slumped at the week-end session on the local market.

Increased estimate of domestic wheat crop as compared with two months ago was a bearish factor in the wheat market, where the range during the day extended to 3c or more. Corn was a weather market. The range exceeded 4c during the day. Both markets at week-end were largely under the prevailing levels at start of period.

Both wheat and corn opened lower and in the first hour wheat had a lower range of 2 cents and corn to as much as 3 cents. Liverpool wheat closed 1⅜d lower.

Continued warm sun shiny conditions in the corn belt brought about the break in corn and influenced wheat prices despite recent report of export business.

September wheat opened at $1.22¼, December wheat $1.28⅝, May wheat $1.34¼. September corn $1.12, December corn $1.05⅝ and May corn $1.06¼.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 348 cars of wheat, compared with 516 a week ago and 664 last year. Minneapolis received 236 cars, Duluth 93 and Winnipeg 19.

Local wheat receipts, which were 237,492 bushels, compared with 261,778 a week ago and 183,376 last year, included 127 cars local and 54 through. Corn receipts, which were 105,000 bushels, compared with 50,400 a week ago and 74,100 last year, included 68 cars local and 7 through. Oats receipts, which were 132,000 bushels, compared with 312,000 a week ago, and 98,000 last year, included 53 cars local and 13 through. Hay receipts were 5 cars local and 7 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were lighter than a week ago, and heavier than a year ago, being 2,881,000 bushels. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 481,000 bushels. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 1,303,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 2,196,000 bushels. Corn shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 277,000 bushels. Oats shipments were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 562,000 bushels.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 3,438,542 bushels of wheat, 264,321 bushels of corn, 116,064 bushels of oats. Grain stocks comprised 23,027 bushels of No. 1 red winter wheat, 363,792 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 700,766 bushels of No. 1 hard winter wheat, 833,284 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 8522 bushels of No. 2 corn, 77,900 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 99,601 bushels of No. 2 white corn, 47,206 bushels of No. 2 white oats, 4593 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 18,496 bushels of No. 2 rye, 75,217 bushels of kaffir corn.

There was fair milling demand for good No. 2 red wheat in the local cash grain market Saturday, the best wheat being selected and there also was a slow accumulative inquiry. Prices, however were down, No. 2 red being 2c to 3c off and No. 3s and No. 4s from 1c to 3c lower. Inside prices went for the common qualities of each grade. All of day's offerings were not cleaned up. There was limited milling demand for the better grades of hard wheat with prices 2c to 3½c lower on general hard wheat market. Elevators bought No. 4s at 3c under St. Louis September basis. Some Kansas wheats testing 11.37 to 11.88 protein sold at $1.21 to $1.23. The corn market was sluggish and not all offerings were taken on the limited mill and shipping order demand for yellow and the inquiry from glucose people for mixed and white. Yellow corn declined 1c to 2½c and other grades 3c to 4c. Large receipts and liquidation of futures depressed oats. There was limited local and shipping demand at 1½c to 2c off for mixed and 2½c to 4c decline for white. The wheatfeed market was dull and only business reported being the sale of 1 car of soft bran at Southern Illinois point (for shipment South) at $25.50 and one split car (on direct order) bran at $27.00 and middling at $32. Hard bran to arrive from West was quoted $26 and gray shorts $31.75 to $32.00. White hominy feed was quoted $40 to $41 and oatfeed $14. In the alfalfa meal market 100 tons of No. 2 sold at $22.90. September shipment, two cars of same in second hand sacks at $23.00 and two cars No. 1 in second hand sacks at $26.50. Choice was quoted $29.00.

Hogs and some classes of cattle closed lower for the week at the St. Louis National Stockyards, while fat lambs recorded a slight gain in price. Sheep closed barely steady for the period. Combined receipts were of fair volume, totaling 136,000 head. Cattle and calves alone aggregated 33,571 head, and while the offering again ran largely to plain grassy offerings, there was also a fair representation of well-fed consignments included in the run. Buyers bore down in beef steers, reducing prices for native offerings 25c and in some cases 50c, the plainer kinds, as a rule, showing the heavy end of the loss. Texas and Oklahoma steers broke 40c to 50c. The top for native beef steers was $11.25 per cwt., paid for a drove of prime 1016-pound yearlings fed in Boone County, Mo. Weighty steers topped in this class at $10.75. The majority of all native steers of killer flesh brought $8 to $9.75 per cwt., with some of the commoner kinds appearing around $6 and $7. Of the Texas and Oklahoma steers there were approximately 230 cars on sale, another generous run. Most of the run embraced Oklahoma grassers. Grass steers from both Texas and Oklahoma were included in a range of $3.75 to $7.65. Two cars of fed Texans topped the Western trade at $9. Light steers and heifers of the better kind ruled steady, spots strong, while the common end of the run came in for a 15c to 25c break. The top in this class was $10.15, paid for a car of mixed and several other droves of good yearlings were noted at $9 to $9.50. Other sales graduated down the line, topping in the $2 column for canners. Butcher cows closed about 25c lower. The bulk during the week made $3.75 to $5, best up to $6 and $7. Canners and cutters finished strong, cutters late being quotable at $2.50 to $3.25, and canners at $1.75 to $2.25. Bulls finished steady to strong with the previous week's close, medium to good bolognas bringing $3.75 to $4.50, common to medium bolognas $3 to $3.75, and heavy beef bulls $4.50 to $4.75. Under a generally slow demand, stocker and feeder steers varied from steady to 15c to 25c lower. Sales ranged from $3 for a common grade of stocker to $6.75 fo fair qualitied feeders. There was a moderate demand for stock cows, heifers and bulls at unchanged prices. Veal calves closed 75c to $1 higher, top for a few choice Friday reaching $12, and the bulk of desirable kinds bringing $11 to $11.50. This compared with a top of $11 and a bulk of $10 to $10.75 at the close of the previous week.

Generous Hog Run.

Receipts of hogs the past week were generous in volume, the total six-day offering aggregating 80,967 head compared with a moderate offering of 66,624 for the previous weekly period and 72,658 for the corresponding time a year ago. There has been a plentiful supply of the lighter kinds of hogs received here during the past week, this fact bringing the quality of the runs somewhat lower than usual recently. These offerings are poor sellers, buyers discriminating greatly against them. The better quality butcher hogs have been good sellers throughout the week, although due to the generous supply on hands buyers were bearish throughout the six days and proceeded to hammer prices at every opportunity. As a result the market for the week closes lower, sales ranging from 15c to 30 off on the killing and shipping grade of swine above 160 pounds. Closing sales on the offerings averaging from 190 pounds and upward show a loss of 15c to 25c mostly, these weights clearing in a spread of $9.90 to $10.00 largely, the latter figure representing the high sale for the last session. Lighter hogs and shippers from 160 to 180 pounds bore the large end of the decline, losses on these weights ranging from 15c to 30c, at $9.75 to $9.90 largely. The demand on these classes throughout the week was only fair with prospects at the close indicating a holdover of some. Pigs, too, show a lower trend for the week in sympathy with the better weight grades of swine. Offerings carrying some weight from 130 to 160 pounds at $9.00 to $9.75 show a loss of 25c from the previous week with the medium weight kinds from 110 to 130 pounds showing the same degree of loss at $8.50 to $9.00 mainly. There is a wider spread in the prices on light pigs and pee wees from 110 pounds and down, sales at $7.50 to $8.50, depending on the weight and quality displayed by the individuals. Packer sows for the week closed 10c to 20c lower with sales ranging from $8.00 to $8.15 largely. Stags show practically no change in price at $6.00 to $7.00. Closing quotations for the week are as follows: Best butcher hogs, 190 pounds and up, $9.90 to $10.00; lighter hogs, 160 to 180 pounds average at $9.75 to $9.90; pigs, 130 to 150 pounds, at $9.00 to $9.75; 110 to 130 pounds at $8.50 to $9.00, and lighter pigs and pee wees at $7.50 to $8.50; packer sows at $8.00 to $8.15, with stags at $6.00 to $7.00.

Lamb Prices Up.

Receipts the past week in sheep and lambs proved generous in volume, running somewhat greater than for the previous six-day period. The total supply received totaled approximately 20,602 head, compared with 16,381 for the previous week's offering and 13,367 for the corresponding period a year ago. There was a right good display of quality made during the week, with a generous proportion of fat native lambs on sale. There was also a number of the half fat Southwest kinds here, buyers discriminating greatly against these classes. Prices on some of these offerings were little better than for culls. Prices for the week show a higher trend, closing generally 25c above the previous week's finish. Top for the week was $13.50, packers paying up to this price towards the close. Good to choice lambs are quotable in a spread of $12.75 to $13.75 largely, with the medium to good quality offerings clearing in a spread of $11.50 to $12.75 and the plain to medium grades at $9.50 to $11.50 largely, some of the off quality kinds lower, according to weight and quality displayed by the individuals. Culls show practically no variation in price from last week, closing full steady at $7. Skins are quotable at $3.50 to $5, depending on weight and quality. The week's latest sessions in the aged classes witnessed a weaker feeling in this department, especially on mutton ewes. As yet no material decline has been shown in prices, buyers continuing to take the larger part of the light fat mutton ewes in a spread of $5.50 to $6, only the very best quality offerings up to the latter figure. Medium and heavy weights are selling generally at $4 to $5, with some sales, however, noted down to $3.50. Choppers and bucks are quotable at $2 to $3, with canners at $1 to $1.50 largely.

Horses and Mules.

The horse and mule trade was fairly active at St. Louis the past week under the influence of a reasonably broad Southern and a moderate local demand. There was also purchase of supplies for export.

Trade ruled steady to strong, with the best results noted on fat Southern mares, well broke geldings, fat cotton mules and feeders. Values were about steady in wagon horses, Cuban riding horses, big mules and miners. Plain, thin stock and plugs continued slow at cheap prices.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The anxious wait for the Government crop report sufficed to check trading in cotton cloths today until the short half day's business usual on Saturday was ended. The 64x60 print cloths dropped ⅛c to 9⅛c, but 68x72 remained at 10⅛c.

The raw silk market was firm and with evidences of activity both here and in Yokohama. Prices were unchanged except for extra, which fell off 5c a pound, to $6.25

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The signing of the agreement between Germany and the allied nations, which was announced before the beginning of business on Monday, was a signal for liquidation of speculative holding of European exchange and closing out of these contracts caused a sharply declining market in the first three days of the week. Sterling, which had sold as high as $4.57 in the preceding week, dropped to $4.47¾ while this selling was in progress and French from a high of 5.72c in the preceding week yielded to 5.33½c. There were proportionate declines in other leading continental rates, one of the features being special pressure against exchange on Holland, bringing the guilder down from 39.08 a week ago to 38.84. Earlier in the preceding week guilders made a new high for the year at 39.15. These declines were followed by a sharp upturn in the market on Thursday and it was then thought that the speculative liquidation had run its course. New York was the chief force in causing this change, local institutions buying sterling and French exchange in large volume on Thursday. Although grain exports were heavy in the last 10 days it was insisted that these shipment did not enter into the declining movement to any extent and that they were provided for by drafts on credits which are carried in this city for foreign account. There were some strong features to the market, Czecho-Slovakia moving up to above 3 cents and Canadian exchange selling at par for the first time this year."

"A reactionary movement came into foreign exchanges chiefly attributable to selling from continental Europe on account of a slight delay in ratification by Germany of the reparations agreement. Bankers who had bought exchanges two days ago were among today's sellers, although the amount of business transacted on the decline was regarded as no more than moderate. Sterling, which was fractionally down in the early dealings, lost further ground in a slight decline which extended to more than one cent to the pound. Francs dropped to 5.34¼ from their previous closing price of 5.38¼. Italian lire fell from 4.41½ to 4.41. The remaining foreign currencies also very largely presented a weakening tendency. Running counter to the general trend of foreign exchanges the Canadian dollar slightly stiffene dand again touche dthe dollar mark. It was the second time this week that this currency touched par, the first occurrence being Wednesday, following which attainment it reacted yesterday only to come back this morning. The flow of American dollars into the Dominion as a result of recent financing was the accredited basis for current strength.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—This year's American cotton crop, the size of which has been engaging the attention of the textile world since it was planted because of the scarcity of raw cotton, responding to better growing conditions in the first part of August resulting in a forecast of 12,956,000 equivalent 500-pound bales, or 605,000 bales more than indicated a fortnight ago.

The forecast was based on the condition of the crop on Aug. 16 which was 64.9 per cent of a normal. A forecast of 12,351,000 bales was issued Aug. 8 on the condition of the crop as of Aug. 1 which was 67.4 per cent of a normal, indicating an acre yield of 146.3 pounds. Last year's crop was 10,128,478 bales and the condition of the crop on Aug. 25 was 54.1 per cent.

Cotton of this year's crop ginned prior to Aug. 16 amounted to 148,645 running bales, counting round as half bales, the Census Bureau announced in the joint report with the Department of Agriculture.

The cotton of the crop on Aug. 16 and the forecast of production (in thousands of bales) by States, follows: Virginia, condition 62 and production 38; North Carolina, 50 and 793; South Carolina, 59 and 803; Georgia, 70 and 1185; Florida, 72 and 25; Alabama, 70 and 980; Mississippi, 63 and 1039; Louisiana, 50 and 360; Texas, 61 and 4433; Arkansas, 71 and 1112; Tennessee, 72 and 436; Missouri, 70 and 222; Oklahoma, 75 and 1255; California 90 and 71; Arizona, 85 and 106; New Mexico, 92 and 71; all other States, 75 and 16. About 79,000 bales additional to California are being grown in Lower California, Old Mexico.

The Department of Agriculture's summary of conditions follows:

"The forecast of 12,956,000 bales of cotton made for the date of Aug. 16 on a condition of 60.5 per cent of normal represents an improvement of prospects over Aug. 1 by 605,000 bales. August is a critical month of the cotton crop and the first half of the month has been met with some degree of success.

"The boll weevil has so far done no great amount of damage to the crop as a whole although destructive in some regions. It has not yet become important in North Carolina nor serious in South Carolina. Not much damage has been done by it in Georgia except in the southern third of the State. In Florida plants are still blooming but there will be no crop from these blooms on account of the weevil. In some sections of Alabama it has developed to damaging stages. It is not so numerous as it was last year in Louisiana and Texas but increase of weevil is reported from Texas and many regions where rain has fallen since Aug. 1. Increased damage by insects is reported in North and West Texas. Boll weevil damage is slight in Oklahoma and Arkansas and grasshoppers practically ceased. For the cotton belt as a whole the crop is late, the weevil is increasing and there is time for considerable damage by it to bolls that have not become safe.

"Small abandonment of cotton acreage since June 25 is reported from some of the states and considerable from others and there is some acreage that will produce a low yield. Conditions in Georgia are samples of causes of abandonment. A considerable acreage has been lost in Texas since June 25 from excessive heat, lack of moisture on the late planted."

In a summary of foreign cotton crops the department states that in upper Egypt the outlook for a good yield is being fully maintained; In lower Egypt conditions are generally satisfactory.

The first official estimate of the Indian cotton acreage shows an increase of nearly 3 per cent over the estimate of last year with 12,173,000 acres against 12,373,000 last year at the same time.

Indications are that Argentine's crop will be two or three times as large as last year.

Growing conditions in lower California, Mexico, are promising and a record crop is expected there while the crop in Acapulco is quite abundant

Some Financial London Views On Working Out of Dawes Plan

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"Recent reaction in sterling probably has been accentuated by the season of the year and the extent of your cotton crop. Moreover reaction, also has been increased by uncertainties about ratifications of the conference agreement on the Dawes plan.

"It looks as though political developments would go in sections, the first stage being ratifications, the second the signing of the agreement in London, and the third the flotation of the German loan. It is believed that the first and second stages will be successfully accomplished, and also the third stage, so far as underwriting is concerned. However, the reception of the German loan here will be mixed. Probably the terms of the security offered will be such as actually to command large subscriptions, especially as German balances likely will be largey applied. Thousands, however, will abstain from principle or sentiment. Immediately it is learned that the American banks have approved the loan, we shall regard the security as probably adequate, inasmuch as it is believed that your bankers are even more watchful in that respect than the English.

Effects of Payments.

"Some banks, however, on close examination of Dawes report are propounding an ingenious and interesting theory, namely, that the report contains ingredients tending to restrain German energies in exporting. Their argument is that heavy exports mean favorable exchange which in turn means that reparation payments must be paid whereas per contra the Dawes report makes provision that when exchange rates are unfavorable reparations payments need not be made but may accumulate internally and even further provisions are calculated to benefit Germany when accumulations become exceptionally great.

"Present stagnation in business is fully explained by the holidays. The general belief is that, if reparations developments go smoothly, active business will begin in mid-September. It is considered that the first effect of the new agreement must be a general stimulus to trade with the devotion of a considerable portion of the proceeds of the German loan to purchases in America and Britain. Later will come the effect of world-wide demands for capital, especially from Germany, and the effect of such demands on money rates largely depends on your monetary and gold policy.

"We are likely steadily to aim in the direction of an effective gold standard and the resumption of a free gold market, and if you keep a tight hand on your gold and do not lend abroad proportionately to your big gold holdings, a rise in money rates here is inevitable.

Autumn Outlook.

"The autumn outlook also is obscured by the fact that your real activities and tendencies will be difficult to discern owing to probable concentration of attention on the presidential election. Meanwhile during the holiday season we are likely to keep money rates steady, though unless an actual rise in the bank rate becomes imminent securities probably will be well maintained."

EVENING UP TRADE IN COTTON AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The Government's cotton crop report placing the condition at 64.9 and the indicated yield at 12,958,000 bales, was not published until after the close of the futures market here today. These figures were about in line with expectations, but uncertainty as to their showing had restricted fresh business and led to further evening up of accounts. As a result of these operations December sold off to 25.07 under a comparatively small volume of liquidation and closed at 25.15, compared with 25.32 at the close of the previous day. The general market closed irregular at net declines of 15 to 24 points.

The market opened barely steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 10 points. Prices stiffened up a few points during the first few minutes on covering promoted by the reiteration of encouraging trade reports from Lancashire and possibility that the tropical storm reported east of Florida might cause rain on open cotton along the Atlantic Coast. This demand was readily supplied around 25.75c for October and 25.35c for January, however, and the market worked off later under renewed liquidation and a little hedge selling accompanied by reports of light showers in the Southwest.

October sold down to 25.52c and January to 25.15c, or 20 to 25 points net lower. The close was within a few points of these quotations.

The market was closed 15 minutes early to avoid confusion which might have resulted from the publication of the condition figures coincidentally with the making of final quotations. There were various conjectures as to Liverpool's action on Monday. The condition figures were slightly under the average of recent private reports, but the report was most generally commented upon as tending to confirm 13,000,000-bale estimates of the crop.

The selling movement started by the increased private crop estimates of last week, appeared to culminate on the break to 24.68c for December contracts in the cotton market here on Monday. Since then there has been no apparent tendency to revise ideas of the crop, but the market has rallied from the lowest on covering by traders who were evidently inclined to even up their commitments before the publication of the Government's mid-August figures. Perhaps there was a feeling that the decline of over 3 cents a pound from recent high levels had discounted quite as large a crop indication as the Government was likely to show and that if the official figures should fall short of expectations the market might be influenced by the possibilities of a setback to the crop before it is finally harvested. The average of all the private midmonth reports published showed a condition of 65.9 and a crop indication of 12,998,000 bales. It was supposed that the market was looking for a Government report about in line with these figures as to condition, with a crop indication of a little over rather than under 13,000,000 bales. Rather more numerous reports concerning the activities of boll weevil or other insects have been reaching the trade during the week and there have been further drouth complaints from Central Texas, but except for these features, local traders have interpreted the news as indicating generally favorable crop progress.

Cable advices from Manchester indicated a broadening inquiry for cotton goods in that market, with prospects for a large business, but trade in the domestic goods markets has remained quiet, with reports that buyers were still inclined to hold off for a more definite view of coming crop and the effect on raw material prices of the early new crop movements. Reports reaching here from the Southwest have indicated that shippers were finding it difficult to cover their August commitments and that considerable cotton has been sold for September shipment. New crop receipts are now said to be increasing, however, and the attention of traders here at the end of the week was divided between the possible effects of the expanding movement on the one hand and the possibilities of damage still before the crop on the other.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The check noticeable in the market of the two previous days was apparent again today. There were, however, enough strong points among individual stocks to keep the list comparatively steady. Losses of the ½-point to a point occurred during the first hour. Steel common got below 108 and Chandler Motors under 47 was off over four points from Friday's high. American Can, Baldwin Locomotive, General Electric and other leaders all bore their share in the reaction.

Toward the close, selling in the general list was resumed and the final tone was heavy.

The Bond Market.

Liberty bonds hardened at the close today following a further decline at the start. There was particularly heavy selling in the first 4¼s and in the fourth 4¼s and this selling carried prices to the lowest of the week. It was once more traceable to banking sources, it was said. United States Treasury 4¼s were comparatively steady.

The real feature of the week in the bond market has been the selling of liberties with the consequent decline in price. Part of this selling came from the banks and part of it came from traders, both proceeding on the theory that higher money was in sight. Both of these authorities have been wrong on similar occasions in the recent past. They may be right now but it is not at all certain. However, that may be the individual investor is practically out of the market for Government securities.

CRIPPLED BARGE SERVICE TIES UP BUYING OF GRAIN

St. Louis Dealers Stop Purchases on Western Market Because of Goltra Controversy With Government.

TRADE DIVERTED THROUGH CHICAGO

Judge Faris Likely to Pass Next Week on Suit Involving 17 Barges and Four Towboats.

Crippling of the Federal barge line by withdrawal from service of 17 barges and four towboats concerned in the Goltra-Government legal fight has forced St. Louis grain dealers to stop buying Western grain and caused a depression of grain prices throughout this section.

"The elevators are full," Marshall Hall, former president of the Merchants' Exchange, said yesterday. "We had to stop buying Western grain 10 days ago, with the result that it is diverted through the Chicago market to Montreal for export."

Canada is the most dangerous national competitor in export wheat, and her power in the foreign market has been felt most particularly in this section. Export wheat from the St. Louis market goes by way of New Orleans.

Barge Outlet Closed.

"With the outlet afforded by the barge line now closed to us, we simply have to sit tight," Hall continued. "The barge line formerly handled many thousands of bushels weekly. Now it cannot accept grain in sufficient quantities to maintain the price level. The grain on hand was bought on the basis of the 3.9 cents a bushel which river rates clip from rail rates, and we cannot afford to ship it by rail and lose the difference in rates. This saving was reflected in the prices to the producer, and, by competition, in the prices offered from Omaha. Conversely, the present depression is as far-reaching."

Other grain men, as well as Charles Rippin, traffic commissioner of the Exchange and president of a national organization of traffic experts, were emphatic in describing the gravity of the situation. Nor are grain men the only ones affected. J. P. Higgins, operating manager of Federal barge lines on the Mississippi, said the sisal and ore for a local aluminum plant, two upstream staples, had to be refused at New Orleans, and three sugar refineries, which ship by the barge-load, were seriously embarrassed by inability to obtain Government barges.

Possibly the withdrawal of equipment and consequent hamstringing of river traffic is temporary. The barges and tugs are tied up here pending decision in Federal Court on Edward F. Goltra's suit to enjoin the Government from seizing them for violation of contract. The case is to be taken up by Judge Faris upon his return from vacation, and possibly will be heard on its merits next week.

Shippers Alarmed.

Goltra declined yesterday to say what he would do with the equipment if he obtained possession. Although he declared that Secretary of War Weeks acted upon insufficient information in abrogating his lease because of failure to act as a common carrier, men interested in river development assert that he has handled only two shipments, never announced a sailing date and never made a move toward forming any organization for obtaining and moving freight.

The alarm with which local shippers regard the possibility of continued throttling of the river as a cheap outlet for their products endows with fresh interest the events which led up to this peculiar situation. It is not strange that the grain dealers, most obviously affected now, were the first to demand that Goltra's line be put in operation, by Goltra himself, or, if he failed, by the Government.

This was in August, 1922, when the Government service was hampered by low water above Cairo. The channel was impassable by the power boats then in service, but would have have been navigable by the light draft Goltra towboats. President Powell of the exchange telegraphed to the Secretary of War, calling attention to the car shortage caused by a railroad strike, and asking if he could not compel Goltra to carry grain.

Secretary Weeks replied that he could not. Goltra had told members of the exchange that he would have to spend $50,000 to equip the barges to carry grain, and was subject to a limitation against competition with the Government line.

Two days later a part of his fleet, in his possession since the previous July 15, made its first trip. The fleet had been built as a war measure, to carry coal and ore on the upper river. The war-time emergency did not exist when the boats were completed, and Goltra put off accepting the equipment until the Chamber of Commerce protested at letting it remain idle and the War Department set July 15 as the last day of grace before his lease would be canceled.

It was generally understood that the line was to be operated on the Upper river, supplementary to the Government-operated line below St. Louis. But Goltra produced an agreement, signed on Secretary Baker's last day as head of the War Department, permitting him to operate anywhere on the Mississippi or its tributaries.

Restrictions were laid down to prevent competition dangerous to the existing Federal line. But it soon became evident that fears excited by the last-day agreement were unfounded. There was no competition.

On Dec. 15, 1922, a week after the Merchants' Exchange asked that Goltra's lease be canceled, the restriction against carrying grain without permission of the War Department was lifted, in an effort to have Goltra operate the line. On Dec. 24 the Government made an unsuccessful attempt to rent it. Then, on March 3, 1923, upon a legal opinion from the Department of Justice, the contract was abrogated.

The boats were seized on March 26, 1923. A court order held them inactive until the following June 15, when the Supreme Court permitted their use pending decision on a motion in that court. They were woven into the service, improving it 60 per cent, the management estimated, and making it possible last October to set regular schedules and maintain them until the fleet was again tied up by order of the local court last month.

Judge Garis has suggested that the contestants enter a stipulation to operate the fleet, but Goltra's attorney refused. Another attempt was made to lease the fleet, but it was announced that "It has not as yet been possible to agree upon terms which would permit the Federal barge line to operate this fleet without loss."

GEN. PERSHING AT CHEYENNE

By the Associated Press.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 23.—General John J. Pershing, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, was greeted at the train by 1500 citizens when he came to his "home town," Cheyenne, last night. Today, he made an inspection of Fort D. A. Russell, adjacent to the city. Tonight he was a guest of Gen. John A. Jenkins, commander of Fort Russell, at dinner and later attended a military reception and ball.

General Pershing was met here by his son, Warren, who had preceded him to Cheyenne, for a visit with Senator Francis Warren, father of the late Mrs. Pershing. It is anticipated that while they are here, General Pershing and his son will visit Lakeview Cemetery, where lie the bodies of Mrs. Pershing and two daughters, who died in San Francisco nine years ago, and also the Francis Pershing Warren Hospital, the largest in Wyoming, which is a memorial to Mrs. Pershing. Although General Pershing has not resided in Cheyenne, he calls it "home" for sentimental reasons.

One fact, however, stands out so conspicuously, that any observer may see it; that agreement would never have been reached without the brusque and brutal intervention of international finance.

The protocol, which was signed on Saturday last, between the allied and associated Powers and Germany, is the triumph of the international financier. He swept statesmen, politicians, jurists and journalists all on one side, and issued his orders with the imperiousness of an absolute monarch who knew that there was no appeal from his ruthless decrees. This settlement is the joint ukase of "King Dollar" and "King Sterling."

The Dawes report was theirs. They inspired and fashioned it. The Reparations Commission had mixed politics and finance, and had mixed them so badly that its decisions were never good finance nor good politics. The Dawes company of high financiers would have none of this absurd mixture. They examined the whole problem solely and exclusively from the point of view of finance. They left the politics of it to politicians and the military aspect of it to soldiers. The Dawes report represents the considered judgment of Bourse and bank upon the German liability to pay reparations, and the best way to liquidate that heavy obligation.

"Financier Shouldered High."

As soon as the report was issued, the politician and the publicists began to work upon it. At first, they gave it the benediction of simple acceptance. There was no apparent qualification or reservation. The financier was shouldered high by the motley throng of American, British, French, Belgian, Italian and German politicians and journalists. They all hailed him as the savior of a distracted world. But, gradually, it became apparent that their applause was intended, not for the report as a whole, but for a certain paragraph, and that none of them acclaimed the same paragraph.

The British, Americans and Italians were, in the main, interested in securing a settlement on any terms, so as to release Europe from the menace that disturbed its equanimity and kept it from attending to business. The British and the Italians have an interest in reparations, but they have a deeper interest in peace on honorable terms. They were therefore prepared to accept any rational interpretation of the report without any "arriere pensee" (mental reservation). So was Belgium, but she dares not say so, for fear of the French.

The settlement, however, depended on the spirit in which the real protagonists of the Ruhr conflict accepted the report. What would France and Germany say to it? And here it became evident that the affection shown for the Dawes pronouncement was sectional in its character. The French liked the £50,000,000 payment, swelling year by year into a broader and broader stream of gold, which would sweep away their deficits, restore their devastated areas and carry their franc on its flood to safety. The source of the loans did not concern them. That was for the Americans and British to arrange. France assumes that her portion

INTERNATIONAL FINANCIERS FORCED ADOPTION OF DAWES PLAN, LLOYD GEORGE WRITES

Former British Premier Questions Whether Settlement of London Conference Will Last.

AFTER wandering for four weeks through the jungle of multifarious disagreements that had grown around an agreement, that agreement has at last been accepted by all parties.

Who is responsible for this triumph of diplomacy?

Only those who were present at the conference can write an authentic appreciation of the qualities displayed by the chief engineers of the new bridge. One fact, however, stands out so conspicuously, that any observer may see it; that agreement would never have been reached without the brusque and brutal intervention of international finance.

The protocol, which was signed on Saturday last, between the allied and associated Powers and Germany, is the triumph of the international financier. He swept statesmen, politicians, jurists and journalists all on one side, and issued his orders with the imperiousness of an absolute monarch who knew that there was no appeal from his ruthless decrees. This settlement is the joint ukase of "King Dollar" and "King Sterling."

The Dawes report was theirs. They inspired and fashioned it. The Reparations Commission had mixed politics and finance, and had mixed them so badly that its decisions were never good finance nor good politics. The Dawes company of high financiers would have none of this absurd mixture. They examined the whole problem solely and exclusively from the point of view of finance. They left the politics of it to politicians and the military aspect of it to soldiers. The Dawes report represents the considered judgment of finance and bank upon the German liability to pay reparations, and the best way to liquidate that heavy obligation.

"Financier Shouldered High."

As soon as the report was issued, the politician and the publicists began to work upon it. At first, they gave it the benediction of simple acceptance. There was no apparent qualification or reservation. The financier was shouldered high by the motley throng of American, British, French, Belgian, Italian and German politicians and journalists. They all hailed him as the savior of a distracted world. But, gradually, it became apparent that their applause was intended, not for the report as a whole, but for a certain paragraph, and that none of them acclaimed the same paragraph.

The British, Americans and Italians were, in the main, interested in securing a settlement on any terms, so as to release Europe from the menace that disturbed its equanimity and kept it from attending to business. The British and the Italians have an interest in reparations, but they have a deeper interest in peace on honorable terms. They were therefore prepared to accept any rational interpretation of the report without any "arriere pensee" (mental reservation). So was Belgium, but she dares not say so, for fear of the French.

The settlement, however, depended on the spirit in which the two protagonists of the Ruhr conflict accepted the report. What would France and Germany say to it? And here it became evident that the affection shown for the [illegible] pronouncement was sectional in its character. The French liked the £50,000,000 payment, swelling year by year into a broader and broader stream of gold, which would sweep away their deficits, restore their devastated areas and carry their franc on its flood to safety. The source of the loans did not concern them. That was for the Americans and British to arrange. France assumes that her portion in the loan is that of the receiver, and not the lender. France would receive 52 per cent of its flow into her wide irrigation channel, and the country of its origin was of no consequence.

Germans Needed Loans.

On the other hand, the Germans had their eyes fixed on two recommendations. First, of course, was the succession of huge foreign loans, which were indicated in the report, and which they needed so badly to lave their thrifty land. Everything was ready to receive these fertilizing showers. Their land was plowed, sown and harrowed by the years of feverish industry that followed the war. A gold monsoon was, alone, necessary to bless Germany with an abundant harvest. The Dawes report pointed to a succession of loans for her parched soil. It was not "a cloud no bigger than a man's hand." It covered the firmament with the promise of drenching, but reviving, rains. The industrials of Germany were thrilled with the new hope hanging in the heavens above.

The second recommendation which gave joy to German hearts was that in which the experts insisted that the French and the Belgians should let go their grip on the great coal and iron center of the Fatherland. The loan would be as oxygen to a prostrate and exhausted country; but a revival of energy is useless without the freedom to use it. So that, in the opinion of their high financial magnates, the unshackling of Westphalia was fundamental.

France did not, at first, pay any particular attention to this part of the report. She had an idea that, somehow or other, it could be dodged for some time. References to this question in the French press and Parliament were wrapped up in a covering of ambiguous phrases. The startling fall of the franc forced Poincare, for a while, to dwell more upon the points of acceptance than upon the reservations. When the fall was temporarily arrested, and the bruised franc once more stood up in the world's exchange, the Ruhr evacuation gradually emerged into notice, and it became clear that French opinion was not in the least reconciled to the idea of clearing out of the Westphalian coal fields.

It was soon apparent that the new French Parliament was just as reluctant to haul down the tricolor at Essen and Dusseldorf as its predecessor had been. M. Herriot, although elected on a pacifist program, was compelled to make declarations in the Senate which were Poincarist in sentiment and purpose. The misty beatitudes of Chequers were thrown into the waste-paper basket and both M. Herriot and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald drew up a declaration which left the evacuation of the Ruhr to the chances of French politics. It was on the basis of this declaration, hastily plastered together in order to save M. Herriot from the senatorial grave, that the London conference was expected to build a lasting European settlement.

Financiers Cried "Halt."

Commissions were set up to lay the bricks on this ramshackle foundation, and building operations began. At that stage came the voice of the financiers crying out, "Halt!" in imperative tones that could not be ignored. They made it evident to the complacent

Some Curious and Seemingly Trivial Questions Recent British Science Convention Answered

By ERNEST BRENNECKE.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

TORONTO, Canada, Aug. 23.

THE most eminent scientists in the English speaking world have just had a great pow-wow at Toronto. Specialists and experts in every branch of investigation, the grand sachems of the laboratory and museum, have met and compared notes of the past, present and future condition of man and of the world he lives in.

They have looked at everything under and over the sun with calm, clear eyes. They have considered it all with their cold, dispassionate minds. They analyzed us and our world. What sort of world have they found—and left for us to consider and digest? Undoubtedly a world passing strange—a world by turns startling, curious, beautiful, horrible, fascinating, repulsive, funny.

Myriads of important things and unexpected, fantastic things have been turned up. Consider, for instance, only the range of subjects under discussion: Why baby laughs, why the rooster has a comb and spurs, the deer antlers, the problems of increasing population, the temperature of the earth, how mountains grow and die, the conquest of disease and pain, how man learned to speak, the mystery of the egg, why we shiver, how to tell the age of a fish, how radio discovers buried metal, why the sun sometimes looks green.

The discussion cannot be dismissed with a quip or a laugh, however, for the occasion was nothing less than the ninety-second annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

If we now look at ourselves and the universe through the minds of these great men we get few thrills. We are surrounded by worlds of excitement and wonder.

Here follows some of the most striking of these scientific experiences:

Human Babies' Bodies Like Young Chimpanzees

A YOUNG plant or animal as it grows, passes through all the stages of development through which its ancestral st[illegible] passes in the millions of years of evolution. This principle is known as the "Bio-genetic Law." It was invoked by two speakers at Toronto.

Prof. E. C. Jeffrey of Harvard applied it to plants. The seedlings of living forms, he declared, supply an exact recapitulation of racial history of these types. Certain types of pine trees in their early growth reveal all the characteristics of fossil pines of millions of years ago.

Dr. Charles Hill-Tout considered tables of both the monkey and the human races. The skull forms of infants of modern man, of the gorilla, of the chimpanzee and of primitive races like the Neanderthal were all very much alike. In man the infant skull grows larger without much change, but in the anthropoids and semi-humans the skull development between birth and maturity results in radical alterations. The ancestors of the human race were decidedly not creatures with flattened skulls or projecting brows. Those things are all departures from the parent type of both man and gorilla. While man developed along a straight line, the gorilla fell by the wayside, relied on brute muscle alone. His skull underwent great changes, large ridges were developed for the support of his huge jaw and neck muscles. But these ridges do not appear on infant gorilla skulls.

Early man, therefore, is the ancestor of the gorilla, and the gorilla is not the ancestor of man. The skulls of baby gorillas are round and ridgeless, they are just like those of modern babies.

The Race Is to the Strong; Passive Resistance Doesn't Pay

RACES which try to survive through the dangers and horrors of existence by adopting a course of "passive resistance" ultimately perish. They are vanquished by more active fighting rivals, and finally are seen no more on the face of the earth. This is the lesson which man can draw from the researches of the palaeontologist, according to Prof. W. W. Watts, president of the geology section.

Life can only be bought, he said, at the price of continued aggressiveness. When a life form attains a certain size, it usually develops a tendency to abandon functions promoting swiftness in attack. Those reptiles which survived, for instance, were the ones which threw away their protective armor and gain rapidity of motion and attack.

The race has been to the swift, active and strong, every time. Those that trusted in defense rather than defiance have gone under in competition with those prepared to face the risks involved in attack. The giant reptiles of mezozoic period now extinct, whose skeletons fill the museums of the world, perished because their brains and nerve systems were too sluggish to cope with the conditions they faced. The actual physical changes of the period do not account for their disappearance.

The human brain, on the other hand, is the product of all the world's yesterdays. The entire course of evolution could not have been planned better to make possible the existence of such an overlord of creation.

American Children Taller, Healthier Than Forefathers

THE English races are healthier and longer lived than famous ancient peoples, such as the Egyptians and Romans. And American descendants of European parents are, in the average, bigger and taller than their fathers and mothers, according to Dr. F. C. Shrubsall, president of the anthropology section.

Stature and weight today, he said, are not less than in the days of Agincourt or Waterloo. Modern civilized man is decidedly not deteriorating. Our expectation of life is far greater than ever before. The fossilized bones of the earliest human beings indicate that our most ancient ancestors seldom lived beyond the early adult stage. Mummy cases in Egypt show that an Egyptian child of five years might expect to live to be only 35. A five-year-old child of Rome under the Caesars, could expect a life of only 29 years. But a child of five living in present day America or England can expect to live to be at least 64 years old.

As to the Americans, war records show that the average English-born man dwelling in the United States is distinctly taller than the average Englishman. This may be explained, according to Dr. Shrubsall, by the greater tendency of the taller stock, the Nordic, to emigrate from the mother country to fresh fields. It may, on the other hand, be the effect of the vigorous American environment, causing foreign scions to sprout and thrive phenomenally and outstrip their parents physically.

Our Funny Bones Analyzed: Why Kids Laugh at Charlie's Hat

WHY do we laugh? And why do we laugh at the things we laugh at?

To scientists these are not foolish questions. To them they are curious, interesting and important.

Prof. William McDougall of Harvard advanced the theory that man's sense of the ridiculous was nature's provision for keeping him healthy. Too much sympathy with the minor misfortunes of others lowers vitality. Therefore, instead of weeping, we laugh heartily when a fat man's $20 panama is squashed under the wheels of a truck. The laugh keeps up our blood circulation and stimulates digestion. This, said the Professor, is one of the most beautiful and delicate of nature's adjustments.

And why is a hat the funniest thing in the world? Dr. C. W. Kimmons of London University answers this question in his serious discourse on child-humor. In which he analyzed thousands of jokes diligently collected from British and American schools. For a very small child, he said, the two wittiest of all conceptions are to be found in the big man with a small hat and in the child with a man's hat. A hat blown off, provided it is not your own, furnishes amusement, and the position of the hat on the head produces great changes in the general appearance. A suit of clothes, unless it is on extravagant design, rarely provokes laughter. It simply appears as a natural extension or suburb of the body. But not so the hat, which is in the nature of a foreign body.

And why is Charlie Chaplin's hat the funniest of all possible hats? Its irresistible appeal is due not only to the fact that Chaplin is a clever artist but chiefly to the fact that he is breaking all the conventions and is doing in a very amusing way the very things that children are forbidden to do. Children get their fun chiefly though the eye, and thus prefer slapstick to all other forms of comedy.

White Men Will Be Crowded Off the Earth in Year 3000

IN 120 years the earth will no longer be able to produce enough food to keep its inhabitants alive. In the year 3000 the continents will be so crowded that there will be standing room only except in the Polar regions. In 100 years from now the white man may have been ousted by the colored man from all the fertile lands of the earth, except possibly Australia.

These are but few of the dangers and impending horrors of the world's rapidly increasing population, as seen and expressed by Prof. J. Y. Gregory, president of the geographical section. He reached these terrifying conclusions after an examination of the figures for the increase in the numbers of people in all parts of the world between 1906 and 1910. The last available figures on population show that the white race numbers 520,000,000, the Mongolian 520,000,000 and the negro 520,000,000. Thus the colored races are already in a majority of two to one. This constitutes a real colored peril.

The maintenance of European dominion lays a heavy burden on the white race, as it is responsible for the Government of eight-ninths of the habitable land of the globe. One-third of the inhabitants of the world rule eight-ninths of it, the remaining two-thirds of the people control only one-ninth of the land.

During the past half-century the unprecedented increase in the white race has been exceeded by that of the colored people. Increased disparity in numbers means, in a democratic age, an inevitable transfer of power. Meanwhile the former prestige of the white man has been undermined by his own beneficent rule. Alike in war and peace, the personal authority which the white man held in 1900 has undergone a momentous decline.

And now, when white enterprise has subdued the land, built railways and utilized the rivers, the colored man will oust the white. Only Australia may be completely colonized by the whites. It will be their last refuge.

Bumping His Head in Fight Gave Rooster His Comb

WHY the peacock has such brilliant plumage, why the reindeer, the goat and the bull have horns, why the barnyard cock has a hard, red comb on his head and spurs on his heels, these are the themes of countless children's curious questions. But few people can answer them.

Among those who can is Dr. J. T. Cunningham, a renowned biologist who offered his explanations at Toronto. These bony weapons he declared, were developed from injuries and irritations sustained in courtship and fighting by countless generations of these animals. They gradually became hereditary characteristics. By constant butting the buck deer and goat developed their head injuries

A Scientific Body Old and Famous

THE British Association for the Advancement of Science was organized at the City of York, England, in 1830, for the purpose of bringing together the foremost scientific men in the United Kingdom.

It meets once every year, usually in an English city. It has met four times in Canada. Every year its general committee elects a new president. Among past presidents were such famous men as Lord Lister, Lord Kavin and Sir John Evans. Last year its president was Sir Ernest Rutherford, the first man to change one element to another. This year's head is Major-General Sir David Bruce, renowned for his medical work in the Army during the war.

The Association is divided into thirteen sections, covering the fields of chemistry, mathematics and physics, geology, zoology, geography, economic and statistic, engineering, anthropology, physiology, psychology, botany, education and agriculture. Each section has its own president.

After the Association president's address, each section president delivers a lecture which starts a general discussion. Thus, by attending these meetings, a specialist in one field can keep abreast of the latest advances in other fields.

Shortly after the formation of the British Association similar bodies were organized in the United States, France and Australia. At this year's meeting members of the American Association were guests of the British. Many Americans as well as Scandanavian and continental Europeans, also addressed the conclave. It was therefore, in effect a world-review of modern science.

Contracts Made by Standard Oil and Other Companies Are Basis of Anti-Trust Action

State's Suit Is Expected to Include Several Concerns Who Are Believed to Have Agreed Not to Compete.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 23.

PROVISIONS of contracts entered into by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana with other oil companies in alleged restraint of trade, and for pooling of asserted patent rights to gasoline manufacturing processes, will furnish the principal grounds for antitrust action to be filed by Attorney-General Barrett against the Standard of Indiana, and probably some of the other companies participating in the contracts, it was learned today.

Introduction by Attorney-General Barrett of these contracts as evidence in the state's gasoline price inquiry was the outstanding development of the investigation, in progress here at intervals since Aug. 11, to determine whether antitrust proceedings should be instituted.

The Attorney-General has not made a statement of the nature of the antitrust action he plans to file, but the Post-Dispatch correspondent was reliably informed that the action undoubtedly will extend to some of the other companies named in the alleged restrictive agreements, which purported to keep these companies out of competition in Standard of Indiana territory.

The motion filed by the Attorney-General in the State Supreme Court, by which the inquiry was instituted, stated he had been informed that the Standard of Indiana had entered into alleged agreements for price fixing and restraint of trade, that the company had discriminated in prices between sections of Missouri, and that the company had given alleged rebates to destroy competition.

Analysis of the testimony in the various hearings shows documentary evidence introduced by the State to support some of these charges, while others were not established by testimony.

Pooled Patent Rights.

Principal points presented by the State, which it considers damaging testimony, were:

Contracts by which the Standard of Indiana, Standard of New Jersey, the Texas Company and the Gasoline Products Co., agreed to an interchange of pooling of patent rights owned by each for "cracking" petroleum to recover gasoline under which each of the four companies could license other companies to use any of the pooled patents, subject to certain restrictions on distribution and the amount of gasoline produced.

Contracts between the Standard of Indiana and 21 companies licensed to use its "cracking" process, the majority of which contained a condition that the licensee was not to sell any of the gasoline so manufactured in the states comprising the Standard of Indiana territory. Some of the contracts gave the licensees the right to use other patents in the pool, as well as the Standard of Indiana process subject to the territorial restrictions. In some instances cancellation of the license was provided as a penalty if the licensee invaded the Standard of Indiana territory.

That these contracts, by their provisions, present actual agreements between the major oil companies concerning each other's territorial rights.

That these contracts actually were executed and still are in force.

Monopoly on "Cracked" Gas.

Standard of Indiana officers, in reply to questions by Attorney-General Barrett, testified the contracts had been executed, but asserted the clause preventing licensees from selling their products in Standard of Indiana territory in practice was "dead" and never had been enforced by the Standard of Indiana.

The line of questioning pursued by Attorney-General Barrett when Standard of Indiana officers were on the stand clearly indicated the State will contend the contracts were not designed solely to protect patent rights, as testified by Standard officers, but created a monopoly on gasoline sales through the territorial restrictions placed on gasoline manufactured under the patented processes.

These questions further developed that the State takes the position that a combination between owners of individual patents to pool these patents whereby competition is eliminated, is an illegal combination because the alleged restraint of trade arises from the combination and not by exercise of patent rights.

Various witnesses had testified the Standard of Indiana was a "stabilizing" influence in its territory. Company officers denied the contracts of the Standard enabled it to keep prices up, in the face of over-production of gasoline, and asserted the Standard fixed its gasoline prices largely on its costs of production and distribution.

Kansas City Situation in Issue.

Issues raised in the inquiry, which were not established or which developed conflicting testimony, were:

Charges that the Standard of Indiana and Sinclair companies entered into an agreement in the Kansas City district to eliminate the competition of independent companies, but not to interfere with customers of each other. C. M. Reynolds, former city salesmanager of the Sinclair company in Kansas City, testified he had been informed by B. H. Crandall, district manager of the Sinclair company, that such an agreement had been made between himself and H. C. Griffen, Kansas City manager for the Standard. Reynolds said he was instructed to start a campaign to get the business of the independents, offering price concessions where necessary, but not to let Standard customers alone. He testified he paid rebates under instructions. Griffen later testified and denied any such agreement had been made with the Sinclair company. He produced company reports tending to show the Standard and Sinclair companies had taken customers away from each other during the period covered by Reynold's testimony.

Testimony of various Missouri dealers that the Standard had discriminated in price cuts was met by the Standard with affidavits from its local agents in areas where prices were reduced, showing competitors instituted the cuts. Standard officers testified the company never led in price cutting and asserted that in no instance was a cut met until affidavits and even photographs had been obtained showing a competitor had cut first. The anti-trust law requires intent to destroy competition must be established to prove charges of price discrimination.

Dealers' Agreement Alleged.

Charges of rebating were not substantiated as far as the Standard of Indiana was concerned. The manager of a Kansas City taxicab company testified he had received rebates from the Sinclair and Monarch Oil companies, but never had received a rebate from the Standard, which he now patronizes. No other witness testified of receiving rebates, although there was considerable hearsay testimony concerning rebates.

Several witnesses testified of alleged local agreements among retail dealers in sections of the State to hold prices up and stated

Criminals as "Patients."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE question at the end of an editorial on "The No-Crime Theory" challenges an answer. Although not qualified to meet the demands of this subject, permit me to presume to express an opinion.

You grant "on its face the humaneness of the doctrine," but express serious doubts as to its working values. On a similar point Anton Chekov (speaking through a character in "The Duel") says: "The 'humane studies' of which you speak will satisfy human thought only when, as they advance, they meet the exact sciences and progress side by side with them."

You say the principal result of the "no-crime" theory will be "to throw open the door to the commission of any and every crime, etc." Did the abrogation of the penalty of imprisonment for debt (in England) cause everybody to become a conscienceless debtor and swindler? Did the lifting of death punishment for highway robbery cause the whole world to become robbers? Did prison reforms cause an increase in crime? It really does not seem as if the psychological consequences of the changes mentioned are such as you seem to fear. We must consider them as baselessly imagined. On the other hand, have we not had numerous vindications of applied science? We have all heard of surgical operations changing the character of persons charged with criminal tendencies. What do we really know, as yet, concerning the mystery of human personality? Is it not too early to condemn the honest efforts made to acquire a truer knowledge of ourselves?

You observe "it would be impossible to convince anyone living that under such a theory that utterly selfish conduct was wrong." In a certain sense, this is quite true; but it would be easier to convince anyone living that certain kinds of conduct are "bad." To form a judgment about what is "wrong" might be humanly impossible, while we can hardly fail about the latter. You are therefore admirably in order when you say: "There would be no wrong or right, in dealing with one's fellows." There would be only "bad or good." Similarly with the conception of "sin," there would be no sin, there will be only something that is to be considered as bad, because hurtful to ourselves, but which we are able to understand and correct.

Therefore let us give due attention to such far-seeing practical philosophers as Darrow et al. Society still leans toward the first aid of ruthless extermination against grave offenders, but the society of the future will trust more intelligently to the teachings of science. S.

Defective Traffic Markers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HAVING just completed an auto tour through Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, my attention was attracted to how plainly the roads and detours are marked. Imagine my surprise when driving out Delmar boulevard to find it closed at Hamilton avenue and a sign reading detour to Kingsbury boulevard. I wonder if a stranger in our city would know where Kingsbury boulevard was without having to stop in heavy traffic and ask the direction. How much plainer it would have been to have the sign read "Detour two blocks left."

I also noticed that in coming into the city over any one of the three bridges that there are no connecting markers to any one of the Missouri State highways.

Help put St. Louis on the tourist map, as it hurts to have them knock us wherever you stop.

The Tariff Cow.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF it would not be an act of lese majesty against the Coolidge can-do-no-wrong fetish, now being spread with a skill equal to that which invested the last Hohenzollern with his halo; kindly register the prophecy that with four more years of extracting the substance of the Mississippi Valley and the Northwest through the agency of the Fordney-McCumber act, the Republican party and the country will face a revolt totally different from the conventional protest now being led by the rebel Republican from Wisconsin.

If the imagination can visualize four more years of this process, it would seem to overtax the popular Republican formula that in every way we grow better and better every day, and that everybody is for Coolidge.

Even the great Kansas City Weekly Star may be unable to abate its castigation of the tariff bloodsuckers in time, and right in the heat of the campaign reprint its cartoon of the longitudinous cow browsing off the pinched and irritated West, with her distended udders in the State of Massachusetts.

And what a storm would burst if the counterfeit presentment of the hired milkman was the very picture of Calvin Coolidge! Nell and Maria!

TOM R. BUCKNER.

THE WORD FROM COOLIDGE.

The Ku Klux Klan is dead as a political factor. John W. Davis killed it in his Sea Girt speech when he denounced the organization by name. Previously La Follette had dealt it a smashing blow. But though dead, politically, the klan has not yet been buried. Interment, however, can quickly be performed. A word from Mr. Coolidge will suffice. If the Republican candidate for President will join with the other two candidates in specifically proscribing this wholly intolerable movement our American politics will have been purged of a vicious influence that contained the seeds of disaster.

The waited word from Mr. Coolidge which will complete the final rites should not be delayed. With that word, it is plain, that the last door, politically, will have been slammed in the klan's face. The effect on the decent, upright membership of the klan—and many such men have joined it—is obvious. They will first of all appreciate the fact that this is a judgment from which there is no appeal. More than that, they will realize the gravity of their mistake. With all three parties agreed on this issue the klansmen of good character and good will will be confronted by a verdict of censure to which as good citizens they must bow.

As for the promoters of the klan, the men who have made huge profits from it—their graft will be finished. They will have no more stuff to peddle. For the real lure of the klan, the cohesive strength of it, has been political power. Through such power, and only through such power, could the Invisible Empire be erected and maintained. With all political parties spurning them, with no political contacts left, with nothing to sell except a bizarre regalia and grotesque ritual, these gold-brick merchandisers will have to shut up shop.

The waited word from Mr. Coolidge will proclaim the solidarity of public sentiment against the klan, and against any movement of its kind. It will make repudiation official. That is the thing for which the Post-Dispatch has all along contended. As a government that functions through parties, it is imperative, when the vital principles of our Government are assailed, that the parties unequivocally take their stand. Opportunism, with its evasiveness, insincerity and cowardice, may have its place in practical politics, but such policy becomes treason when a dagger is thrust at the very heart of our national being.

The klan is dead. The country awaits the word from Mr. Coolidge that will bury it.

BUSINESS RUBS ITS HANDS.

World trade will be stimulated by the operation of the Dawes plan and the United States will share abundantly in this new prosperity. Such is the judgment of economic and commercial experts.

An analysis of the situation by Alan G. Goldsmith of the Department of Commerce should be of especial interest to the American farmer. Mr. Goldsmith says that Europe buys one-half of all American exports and sells us one-third of the goods we import for domestic consumption. A revival of business there, he logically concludes, will increase the demand for our staples, such as grain, cotton, meat products and lumber. That is not all. If Europe can buy Brazilian coffee in pre-war quantities, Brazil naturally will be able to buy more from us. Again, if Europe purchases Chilean nitrates as she formerly did, Chile like Brazil, will be a better customer for Uncle Sam. So it goes. The effects of a Europe again at work will be far-reaching enough to touch happily almost every American industry.

What the business experts are now saying was said repeatedly by the Post-Dispatch five years ago in urging the Senate to join with President Wilson in making a real peace in Europe. True, the first consideration then was humanitarian. Profits were secondary to the redemption of people beggared by the war. Europe starving and in rags, with neither money nor credit, was not regarded as a field for commercial exploitation. Nevertheless, the idealistic adventure of assisting Europe to its feet did have a practical aspect. The fact was as well known five years ago as it is now that Europe is our best market. The fact surely should have been known at Washington that a prostrate Europe meant bad times for certain American industries, notably agriculture. But isolation was the talisman. Let Europe stew in its own juice was the watchword. It was so ordered. The record is written. For the American farmer it is written in the language of bitter poverty. The farmer thoroughly understands isolation now. He has paid the bill of our Government's refusal to admit that Europe was on the map.

CONSOLIDATE ALL SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

The 39 counties in Missouri which did not receive any part of the State fund of $130,000 divided among the 75 counties which have one or more consolidated school districts should take steps to get in line for further annual appropriations by consolidating their school districts.

Under the school law every consolidated district must contain an area of at least 12 square miles. And when such district has complied with the law, in the matters of organization, provision for adequate school buildings, including a high school, taxation for school purposes, etc., it is entitled to receive State aid, not only for a part of the expense of building the high school, but $25 a year for each square mile or fraction thereof in the district. With this aid it is possible for comparatively poor districts to reach a standard of education equal to that of richer districts. It is also possible, and is the practice in well-managed districts, to provide transportation for children to the centrally located schoolhouses, making attendance easier and more regular.

The day of the little one-room schoolhouse, with ill-paid teachers, an inadequate school term and no modern equipment, is past. Districts that are contented with such educational facilities where it is possible to have better do not deserve to flourish. And they will be left behind in the march of progress. In this matter of education in the country, it emphatically pays to organize.

THE MARVEL OF THE DEED.

The greater of the last two great oversea hops to American continental soil has been completed by the world encircling air navigators, Lieutenants Lowell H. Smith and E. H. Nelson. Eight hundred and twenty-five miles was negotiated over a dangerous Arctic course sown with icebergs, partly shrouded in fog and holding unknown terrors of storm and cold. In that cruel waste of wave and wind Lieut. Locatelli of Italy, who started out barely ahead of the Americans, may now be lost.

Much is to be achieved before heavier-than-air machines may ply their course in the skies on close schedule in disregard of the elements. The time of the coveted goal of progress may be long, and it may be short. Other sensational feats of aeronautics already crowd the record and tax the memory. But they do not in the least discount or obscure the magnificence of the present achievement.

It remains for the flying profession to appraise the contribution of this epochal flight and its several segments to the science of aviation. The layman, however, looks on with sheer admiration at the heroism, effort and ingenuity whereby these birdmen perform miracles in the subjugation of time, space and the elements—yea, and of fear.

REAL ROADS—NOT BLUEPRINTS.

Illinois is famous for its good roads. Missouri is notorious for its bad roads. Yet Missouri has more miles of paved roads than Illinois has. That statement was made by John M. Malang of Joplin, former superintendent of our State highway system, in an address in St. Louis a few days ago. Coming from such a road authority as Mr. Malang the statement, surprising as it may be, cannot be challenged.

The fact can easily be explained. It is due to our road construction policy. After ratifying the $60,000,000 road bond issue Missouri, in effect, decided to have no good roads anywhere until she had good roads everywhere. In other words, construction was to be begun in all parts of the State at the same time and carried on simultaneously all over the State. That policy has been adhered to. The result is we have no trans-state roads such as Illinois and many other states have. We have a big mileage of good roads, but the roads are scattered, disconnected, fragmentary. This mileage represents a lot of money and a lot of work, but it is not yielding results. It is neither furnishing service to the people of Missouri nor attracting the tourist traffic which other states, such as our neighbor, Illinois, are getting.

Our road policy was characterized also by more caution than vision. For instance, a limit was placed on the bonds to be issued yearly, the amount being fixed at $5,000,000. The reason for that requirement is praiseworthy. The legislators, backed by public sentiment, were determined that this great undertaking should be carried through cleanly, with no taint of extravagance or graft. Hence those safeguards. But the enterprise developed in a way that was not and could not very well have been foreseen. For example, when Theodore Gary assumed the chairmanship of the Highway Commission he found an accumulated fund of $28,000,000 on hand which had to be utilized or, under the law, be lost. To utilize it he was obliged to build up an organization equal to the job. An organization that could contract and capably manage, say, $5,000,000 worth of road construction could not manage $28,000,000 worth of construction.

Mr. Gary built up the required organization. And that is the road problem which confronts Missouri today. We have a highway organization competent to contract for and build roads much faster than our finances provide for. Construction has already gone ahead of our finances, especially in the vital matter of maintenance. The question with us is simply this: Shall we keep our present efficient highway organization intact? Shall we save the construction already completed by providing adequate maintenance funds? And shall we hurry along the whole splendid project to a completed State highway system?

We can do all this and do it with no greater effort than other progressive states are making.

What is known as proposal No. 5, which will be submitted to the voters in the November election, assures the completion of the entire 7640-mile road system in six years, according to Mr. Gary. This proposal provides for a gasoline tax of 2 cents a gallon, tractors excepted; for a 50 per cent increase in motor licenses; for authority to issue the remaining $45,000,000 of road bonds at the rate of $15,000,000 a year.

A sound way to ascertain the practicability and fairness of this proposal is to observe what other states are doing. Roy F. Britton, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri, says that 36 states already have a gasoline tax and two others will vote on it this fall. He also says that while Missouri ranks eleventh among the states in the number of automobiles it is forty-fourth in the amount of its license fee. Manifestly, then, there is nothing extraordinary in Proposal No. 5. On the contrary, Missouri is being asked to do only what other states have done. We are adopting the practice which experience has persuaded the people of other states to adopt.

Our Highway Commission is now proceeding on the assumption that the proposal will be ratified. Under the letter of the law it can issue $5,000,000 of road bonds this year and the same amount next year. But there is nothing in this law, as construed by Attorney-General Barrett, to prevent the Highway Commission from issuing the two-year bond quota of $10,000,000 in 1924. This is being done. It raises the question as to what will be the consequence if proposal No. 5 fails? Chairman Gary's answer is that "it would be impossible to say when the system could then be completed." It is obvious, of course, that the present highway organization would have to be disbanded and the remainder of the work done on a small, slow, costly, dishearteningly protracted scale.

What does the adoption of proposal No. 5 mean? Just this: Construction will go forward without interruption. Constructed roads will properly be maintained. Missouri's evil repute as regards roads will give way to a reputation for good roads. The tourist traffic that now shuns the State will roll across Missouri endlessly, east and west and north and south. What is of far greater importance is the fact that the people of Missouri will be emancipated from the social and economic curse of bad roads.

Mr. Malang, whom we have already quoted, made a statement some time ago in this connection which may well be repeated. He insisted that Missouri must think in terms of a finished highway system. That is the substance of proposal No. 5.

Real roads, not blueprint roads.

THE ORIGIN OF THE PACKING HOUSE

IN the quaint old town of Seville
They're talking of fair Carmen still.
Of all the ancient voluptuous vamps, she was the hardest boiled.
Between her teeth she had a rose,
At least that's what her picture shows.
And Jose, whose job was brigadiering, with her became embroiled.

Now Jose loved her very much,
Because of which he got in "Dutch,"
When he turned her loose after she'd been jugged for fighting, which was wrong.
For a rag, a bone and a hank of hair
He sacrificed his all right there.
They did say he was in quite soft till Escamillo came along.

This toreador had some pull.
Oh, boy! how he could throw the bull!
Told Carmen for the love he bore her
he would go and stab a cow.
Stabbing cows was his vocation
But when only on location.
But the public still acclaim him as though he really did know how.

Poor Jose, sick, with rage was wild,
Swore he would kill that gypsy child
Less she quit this Escamillo who did the sword dance with the steers.
But fair Carmen, vain and haughty,
Told Jose that would be naughty.
And he could keep on swearing vengeance
as of him she had no fears.

No public will a story take
Unless it teems with chop or stake,
So prepare yourself for horror, unless you have a morbid mind.
As to make this story thrilling
We will have to do some killing.
You must give the public what they want,
this is what the writers find.

Jose, with love unsatisfied,
Asked Carmen if she'd be his bride.
She scorned him, so he carved her in a manner that was beautiful.
He used a bloody stiletto.
He did not like to treat her so,
Said, "You just have to treat 'em rough,
as that's what makes 'em dutiful."

When he found that his love was dead,
The simp completely lost his head.
And again with his bloody stiletto
he found a bleeding heart.
Jose and Carmen side by each
Should in their death a moral teach,
As Esky was a fickle guy, he never loved her from the start.

He just kept on with his killing
All the old bulls that were willing To chase a banderillero until they were chicken-hearted.
The bulls, most ev'ry one now grants,
Like Jose, never had a chance.
So we give to you the story
how the packing house got started.

DICKENS IN REAL LIFE.

Reports of a recent coroner's inquest at Rotherhithe, England, sound amazingly like a chapter from Dickens. The case was that in which one schoolmaster had killed another through jealousy and then killed himself. The woman in the case was also a teacher. She testified that the murderer and suicide had proposed marriage to her twice, but she had rejected him. She described him as a man who brooded a great deal, and whose nerves were obviously unstrung. She said:

> If I stood within a couple of yards of him for some time he was often taken with absolute shuddering from head to foot. Even the flesh of his face seemed to shake. I had never seen it before, and it frightened me. He would change color and go yellowish-gray.

Readers of "Our Mutual Friend" will recall the account of the jealousy-maddened schoolmaster, Bradley Headstone.

> He held out his hand. As she, with manifest hesitation, touched it, a strange tremble passed over him, and his face, so deadly white, was moved as by a stroke of pain. * * * The working of his face as she shrank from it, glancing for her brother and uncertain what to do, might have extorted a cry from her in another instant, but all at once he sternly stopped it and fixed it, as if death itself had done so.

On the whole, Dickens seemed to have had as keen an insight into the psychology of passions as any of the ramping young lions of present-day romances.—Washington Post.

GIRLS WHO ARE NEVER KISSED.

There are some girls who are never kissed. The Japanese lover, for instance, does not salute his betrothed in our fashion. He regards kissing as a queer foreign custom; it has no meaning for him. In China the kiss is considered disgraceful.

But although the kiss is unknown, or at any rate neglected, in many parts of the world, nearly every nation has some form of salutation which corresponds with the European kiss. The Malays and the Eskimos greet each other by rubbing noses. Among the Burmese, the form of greeting which denotes affection is to apply the cheek and draw a long breath.

It is true that the kiss is also used as a means of salutation where there is no affection, or even respect. Children, for instance, are taught that they must kiss people for whom they may have a strong antipathy, simply because it is the proper thing to do, and two women who hate each other will kiss for the same reason. These uses are a degradation of one of the most beautiful modes of expression in the world.

In Iceland they do not understand the kiss as a mode of salutation, but it is regarded as something belonging to the supernatural. If a child is ill you will sometimes see its mother solemnly kiss the little one on the breast—an invocation to the Supreme Being that her child may be cured.

We are not altogether without superstition regarding the kiss. At one time many a gambler might have been seen kissing the cards to bring him luck, and the warrior, before starting out to battle, would kiss the favor given him by his lady to insure victory and to enhance his safety. Until lately we kissed the Book when we took the oath "to speak the truth, the whole truth, and noting but the truth."

And who has not seen a mother take her child in her arms and kiss the bruise to "make it well?"—A. F., in Washington Post.

into permanent attributes, and transmitted them to their descendants. By constant kicking, the rooster developed spurs.

The mysterious endocrine glands, which are thought to control growth, are probably responsible for this state of affairs. They caused callous tissue, the result of local injury, to become permanent. The hornless deer, for instance, by driving his skull against the skulls of other deers, caused the injured tissue on his head to become absorbed into his circulation, until this new substance caused some modification in the chemicals produced by the growth-controlling glands.

Then the changed chemicals, or hormones, released by the glands, gradually built up the deer's horns. In the same way, the fighting apparatus of other male animals and the ornamentation of some female animals was gradually formed.

Defeat of Disease Is Science's Greatest Task.

Science can and must soon eliminate all sickness in the civilized world, said Sir David Bruce in his presidential address, which took the form of a review of the astounding achievements of medicine within the last generation. As the personal eradicator of the deadly Malta Fever, Sir David spoke with authority.

With all that physicians have done and are still doing, he pointed out, illness still causes an annual loss among the insured workers of England equivalent to the idleness of 375,000 persons throughout a year. Through sickness England loses $750,000,000 per year, the United States $3,000,000,000 per year.

If this is to be remedied, he continued, medicine "must change its strategy, and instead of waiting attack must assume the offensive. Instead of remaining quietly in the dressing stations and field hospitals waiting for the wounded to pour in, the scientific services must be well forward in the enemy's country, destroying lines of communication, aerodromes, munition factories and poison gas centers, so that the main body of the army may march forward in safety.

"It must no longer be said that the man was so sick he had to send for the doctor. The medical practitioner of the future must frequently examine the man while he is apparently well in order to detect any incipient departure from the normal and to teach and verge modes of living conformable to the laws of personal health, and the public health authorities must see to it that the man's environment is in accordance with scientific teaching.

"It may be a long time before the change is widely accepted, but already enormous advances have been effected. And it only depends on the intelligence and education of the populations how rapid the future progress will be. Public opinion must be educated to recognize that most diseases are preventable and to say with King Edward VII, "If preventable, why not prevented?"

How Mountains and Mines Were Born, Lived and Died.

North America once boasted two huge mountain ranges, each of which was greater and taller than the present Rocky Mountains, said Prof. M. B. Baker. But that was long ago, long before our Western continent took its present shape.

These huge ancient mountains, which have now disappeared, were forced up out of the earth by violent disturbances in the lower part of the planets' crust. During this mountain building process masses of boiling material which later solidified and stiffened into rock, were injected into and poured over the rocks already formed.

One uprush of molten material brought up copper, nickel, silver and cobalt, while the gold ores of Porcupine, Kirkland and other regions in Ontario and Quebec were inlaid in the mountains by a second boiling over of ore from the vast depths in the earth.

Shivering Glands Preserve the Warmth of Our Bodies.

Shivering is an automatic reaction to chill on the part of the bodily machine of man or animal. It is an emergency measure for keeping warm. We feel cold, we shiver and shudder violently, this violent motion exercises our muscles, stimulates blood circulation and that raises the bodily temperature, and we feel warmer.

This fact was stressed by Dr. W. B. Cannon and Dr. A. Querido of Harvard, who discussed the means at the disposal of animals for keeping their bodies always at an even uniform temperature. The learned doctors showed that the secretion of the adrenal glands, which are small bodies situated near the kidneys, is increased whenever there is liability of lowered temperature through loss of heat from the body.

When animals deprived of the use of adrenal glands are threatened with chilling, they shiver, whereas normal animals exposed to the same temperatures do not. Therefore it is concluded that the former "feel the cold" more than the latter. If adrenalin extract is injected into the blood stream it speeds of the body, and makes the subject feel warmed.

Radio New Divining Rod to Locate Underground Ore.

For centuries "magicians" have claimed to be able to detect the presence of gold, silver and other valuable metals underground, sometimes by merely holding an ordinary twig, called a "divining rod" over the supposed deposit. PRINTER'S PROOFS.

From the New York Herald and Tribune:

IN the recollections of life on the ol "Sun" which Mr. Edward P. Mitchell contributing to "Scribner's Magazine" there is a passage on the methods of the lat Charles A. Dana which is rich in meaning for the literary man. "His dictation was swift and sure," we are told. "He seldom haggled in picking the right word; but when he got to work upon his proofs he would sometimes spend hours in furbishing the phrases, returning to the task da after day, recasting whole paragraphs un the emendations satisfied a fastidio taste." It was the story of "R. L. S." a over again, the story of every writing ma worth his salt since the pen first woke i the human hand the thrill of creative authorship. The challenge of the emp page, ready for the opening words, is hardl a more poignant affair than the challeng of the printer's proof. * * * There are se tences in it you knew were not quite rig when you set them down, but you cou not let them arrest the development o the main idea—you would "catch the in the proof." There are others—and specific words, too—the irrelevance of whic you never even faintly surmised in th manuscript. On the proof they stick ou like the proverbial sore thumb. And the the new ideas and metaphors, the indi pensable phrase, the nuance which t neglect was to cripple the whole argume the inspiration reorganizing a paragrap or substituting the complex semicolon fo the simple comma—all these things are inseparable from the joy of the printer's proof. * * * Nothing so sure—seemingly—nothing so absolute, as an author's corre tion. "There," he says, "That is ri now." But he reckons without the prin Suppose it is a final proof and the cor rection is the last, unchangeable tou In eliminating one error the printer blithe makes another, and that one goes fo eternally to the derision of a world th knows not the mutability of proofs. * * An "author's correction," scrawled on th margin of the sheet, is the closest souv we have of an act of genius, of Gibbon s ting a heroic period in motion, of Shel assuring the immortality of a song. Not a the criticism of all the commentators ca give you the key to Balzac's "infinite cap ity for taking pains" that you will get fr his proofs, jungles of emendation smoth ing a nucleus of print. Scott was alm as bad, as the proofs of "The Betroth and "The Talisman," recently sold at a tion in London, clearly show. Tolstoy, w are reminded, was even worse. He "sh lessly admitted practically rewriting no after the printers had them already type."

Curious and Seemingly Trivial Questions Answered

into permanent attributes, and transmitted them to their descendants. By constant kicking, the rooster developed spurs.

The mysterious endocrine glands, which are thought to control growth, are probably responsible for this state of affairs. They caused callous tissue, the result of local injury, to become permanent. The hornless deer, for instance, by driving his skull against the skulls of other deers, caused the injured tissue on his head to become absorbed into his circulation, until this new substance caused some modification in the chemicals produced by the growth-controlling glands.

Then the changed chemicals, or hormones, released by the glands, gradually built up the deer's horns. In the same way, the fighting apparatus of other male animals and the ornamentation of some female animals was gradually formed.

Defeat of Disease Is Science's Greatest Task.

Science can and must soon eliminate all sickness in the civilized world, said Sir David Bruce in his presidential address, which took the form of a review of the astounding achievements of medicine within the last generation. As the personal eradicator of the deadly Malta Fever, Sir David spoke with authority.

With all that physicians have done and are still doing, he pointed out, illness still causes an annual loss among the insured workers of England equivalent to the idleness of 375,000 persons throughout a year. Through sickness England loses $750,000,000 per year, the United States $3,000,000,000 per year.

Radio New Divining Rod to Locate Underground Ore.

For centuries "magicians" have claimed to be able to detect the presence of gold, silver and other valuable metals underground, sometimes by merely holding an ordinary twig, called a "divining rod" over the supposed deposit. The device seldom worked. But now the old-time wizards must give way to expert radio engineers. According to Sherwin F. Kelly of the University of Toronto, they have already developed radio devices which will, infallibly tell whether or not metal is underground at any given spot.

"I have used one of these radio methods with considerable success," said Mr. Kelly, "on a great variety of deposits."

It will not be long, therefore, before every valuable mine in the earth will yield the secret of its presence, even though not a single shovelful of dirt or rock is dug or tested. If a person owns a plot of land, he will be able to find out in a jiffy whether he also owns a valuable fortune-making copper or silver mine.

One of the several methods which Mr. Kelly described was that developed by H. R. Conklin of Joplin, Mo. It makes use of the electro-magnetic properties of metallic sulphides. A single turn of wire, 200 feet in diameter, is laid on the ground and a high tension alternating current is passed through it. By systematic study of the magnetic field within the circle, certain abnormal weaknesses of the resulting magnetic field are easily detected. Such weaknesses always overlay metalliferous materials. In other words, whenever and wherever the machine indicates a "weak spot," there an excavator will surely find a mine.

How Cave Man's Grunts Developed Into Speech.

An artificial speaking machine was demonstrated by Sir Richard Paget. By blowing into it and fingering stops, he mechanically produced complete words and sentences.

He used this device to illustrate his theory of the development of human language from the unintelligible roars, grunts, squeaks, howls and whistles of our prehistoric ancestors.

In those early days, he said, man used his larynx to roar or grunt with, and at the same time he communicated his ideas to others by grimaces and the movement of tongue and lips. The next step was the discovery that blowing air through the mouth while he was grimacing, the movements of his tongue and lips produced changes of whispered sounds, so that the various grimaces could be recognized even when his back was turned.

The last stage in the great invention of speech came when our primitive ancestors discovered that by roaring and grunting at the same time as they whispered the audible grimace became recognized 10 or 20 times farther off than before. They also found that they could vary the note of their roars and grunts without interfering with the recognition of the grimace. And so they invented the art of song.

INTERNATIONAL BANKERS FORCED DAWES PLAN, LLOYD GEORGE WRITES

conference that no money would be advanced on the security of such a structure. It might be good enough as a pontoon to carry a not-too-weighty ministry across ministerial crisis, but it was not strong enough to carry solid bullion from the iron safes of Wall Street or the London Exchange. Montagu Norman spoke gently, but firmly, in the Treasury Board room, and J. P. Morgan made his voice heard by wireless from the mid-Atlantic, above the roar of its billows. There would be no loan unless the financiers' terms were complied with. And the loan is the linchpin of the Dawes report. Take that out and the report collapses.

The condition of a loan is that the security must be good. To make the security good, German prosperity must be restored. Bankers are not in the habit of risking their money on concerns which are in the hands of the bailiffs. The bailiffs must, first of all, be cleared out, and an undertaking given that they will not return, except as mandatories of the lenders. That was the bankers' ultimatum, and no amount of persuasion or pressure availed to shift them one inch from their resolve. This was not politics, it was business. Their own and their clients' money was involved. The stern message created consternation at the conference. The British treasury, through its unbending Chancellor, became the official spokesman of the bankers. The Herriot-MacDonald paper was swept aside as a pernicious irrelevancy. It had served its purpose, which was political. Now to business.

After four weeks of haggling and hesitating, American and British bankers have had their way. The protocol has been dictated by them. The German acceptance of these terms has also been the work of the financiers. The conditions imply a large measure of servitude, which hurts the pride of a great nation. It must hurt to see your country treated by foreign money lenders as if it were Turkey or China. But finance has no susceptibilities, it has only apprehensions.

All Elements of Bargain.

If, on the one hand, the gold is adequate, and, on the other, security is good, then you have all the elements of a bargain. You must not be too sensitive about things that cannot be cashed across a counter. The orders of German financiers to their politicians were just as peremptory as those of the allied bankers to their political representatives. Financial exigencies must dictate the decisions of this conference. At all hazards, Germany must climb out of bankruptcy. France must square her budgets, and Europe must be settled up. These fine points of national honor must be suspended to a date when nations can better afford to indulge them. That is a purely financial settlement. Money has this time talked, and talked to some purpose.

Will this settlement last? We shall know in a few weeks whether the German Reichstag is prepared to hammer the collar around the neck of the fatherland tightly enough to satisfy the exacting requirements of the lenders. Having exhausted or absorbed the borrowed money, will Germany go on paying out of her till sums mounting higher and higher each year as prosperity returns? Is this, like all other settlements, provisional, or is it permanent? Will there be another readjustment? These are questions for no distant future. If the settlement brings lasting peace, there are multitudes who have hitherto disliked and distrusted cosmopolitan finance who will secretly bless it and feel that Providence has at last found good use for the international financier.

CONTRACTS MADE BY STANDARD BASIS OF ANTI-TRUST ACTION

retail dealers followed the Standard in fixing their prices.

These alleged agreements of dealers are matters open to possible prosecution by Prosecuting Attorneys in the counties, the Attorney-General's department indicated, but are considered relatively insignificant in the present investigation.

Under the Missouri antitrust law it is not necessary to prove that conditions of an agreement in restraint of trade were carried out, according to attorneys. It is only necessary to prove that the agreement in restraint of trade was made, it was said.

Another Hearing Sept. 10.

Officers of the Standard Co. who testified, including Dr. W. M. Burton, president, and John D. Clark, vice president, asserted the contracts under fire were not restrictive in effect and had been made after company attorneys had advised the company was within its patent rights. The agreement for interchange of patent rights was made, it was stated, to clear up overlapping of these patents, and to avoid litigation over possible infringement of patents.

One more hearing is scheduled on Sept. 10 in Jefferson City. At that time Robert Stewart of Chicago, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard of Indiana, is to testify on behalf of the company.

DRY AGENTS SEIZE TWO TRUCKS OF BEER

Officers Arrest One Driver While Unloading and Other After Chase.

Prohibition agents are getting to work earlier these days. So are beer-runners. Sometimes, no matter how hard the beer-runners try to keep incognito, they and the agents meet.

At 6:15 o'clock yesterday morning, Fifteenth street and Sullivan avenue seemed deserted. It wasn't, however, as Federal agents were there and wideawake. They saw a truck loaded with barrels drive up to a saloon at the northwest corner. They saw the driver open up a pair of cellar doors and begin transferring the barrels from the truck to the cellar.

As the first barrel slid down the iron skids, the agents arrested the driver, who seemed displeased because he had been interrupted and surprised because the agents told him the 19 barrels contained real beer. He gave his name as George Henry, but professed not to know whence the barrels came, or why. The truck had painted on it, "North St. Louis Sales and Service Co., 2906 North Nineteenth street." At this address, which is a saloon, nobody seemed to know about the company.

The agents were taking Henry and his truck to the Federal Building, when a similar truck, also loaded with 19 barrels, passed. It picked up speed as Henry shouted, "Beat it—step on it," to the driver. An agent in a flivver pursued and overtook the truck after nine blocks.

The second driver, who gave his name as August Meyers, also professed ignorance of his consignment or employers. The agents are still seeking the source of the beer, which was cold when confiscated. The two trucks were dusty and muddy, and it is thought the beer was from Illinois.

MICHIGAN'S NEW TELESCOPE DUE SOON, AFTER 13 YEARS

University Will Send Big Lens to South Africa for Study of Southern Skies.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 23.—After 13 years' waiting, the University of Michigan expects to have its new telescope, the fourth largest in the country, completely assembled and ready for use, late this year. Soon afterward it will be dismantled again and taken to South Africa, for eight or ten years of study of the southern sky by university astronomers. Only three refracting telescopes in the United States will have lens surpassing its 27 inches of diameter ,that at Yerkes with 40 inches, that at Lick with 36 inches and one other measuring 30 inches.

Difficulty in getting glass sufficiently large to make the lens was responsible for the delay. Orders for the new telescope were placed June 10, 1911. Two years ago, the big piece of glass reached this country from Germany.

Sent to the shop of Robert R. McDowell in Pittsburg, it had been shaped and was being polished when McDowell died in 1923. Search revealed no man able to continue the work except one in McDowell's shop, who was then working on a lens for Yale. He turned his attention to the Michigan lens in June, and will be finished with it in six months. Slowness of the work of polishing is due to the fact that each three minutes of polishing demands a wait of an hour for cooling.

Eventually, after its trial test at Ann Arbor, and its sojourn under the skies of South Africa, the new lens will become part of the equipment at the university observatory.

AUG. 31 TO BE LABOR SUNDAY

Sunday, Aug. 31, will be observed as Labor Sunday throughout the land, and at many St. Louis churches special services, with sermons devoted to the cause of labor and its relationship with the church will be held.

In a letter to the pastors of member churches of the Metropolitan Church Federation of St Louis, the Rev. Arthur H. Armstrong, executive secretary, note is made that Labor Sunday is a custom of many years standing, whose observance is annually increasing. No particular program has been suggested, the manner of observance being left to the individual church.

The Most Valuable Camera in the World

It is not the product of the brain and hand of man, marvelous though the achievements of Eastman may be.

It is far more delicate in structure, more complex, more highly sensitive than the finest photographic device ever created—it is the human eye.

The majority of human eyes, if properly cared for, will faithfully serve their possessors for a normal lifetime. Neglect is the deadly enemy of good vision.

Eyestrain headaches, squinting and peering at objects are nature's danger signals, giving you due warning of impending eye trouble of serious nature.

For over 20 years I have specialized exclusively in the correction of visual defects, solely by means of properly prescribed glasses. Uniformly successful results have been obtained in over 30,000 cases of defective vision. My successful record and my reasonable charges are the basis of my appeal for your patronage.

SCOTLAND YARD SEEKING NEW WOMEN SLEUTHS

London Police Believe Female Detective Can Catch Jewel Thieves and Drug Vendors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Recruiting for the new women's police force of Scotland Yards will open soon and, from the many applicants, the criminal investigation department hopes to get some bobbed-haired, daintily-gowned detectives, who will prove more than the equals of jewel thieves and drug traffickers, who have hitherto eluded attempts of men detectives to track them down.

By dressing up to the part, these feature sleuths are expected to be able to move leisurely about the West End without creating as much suspicion as male plain clothes detectives.

BATHERS TANNED WITH TEA

French Using It to Even Up Tone of Skin the Sun Misses.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—While it is true that tea drinking has increased enormously in France in recent years, this adoption of the English habit does not fully account for the immense consumption of this commodity reported from the French seaside resorts.

The mystery of what becomes of the excess has been solved by the discovery that the fair bathers are using it to "even up" the tone of their skins when sunburned in pattern effect from disporting on the beach. Baths of strong tea are said to impart the desired "tan" to the skin where it has not been exposed to the sun.

SUBWAY PLAN IN DETROIT DIVIDES COST OF BUILDING

Abutting Property Owners to Be Assessed for 51 Per Cent, Rest of City and Riders to Pay Balance.

CITIZENS VOTE EARLY NEXT MONTH

Project Already Has the Approval of Common Council; Provides for Commission Without Pay.

C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city, who expects to recommend to the Board of Aldermen in the autumn an ordinance for a survey of conditions here applicable to the creation of a subway transit system, which he and other authorities think the city must have soon, has suggested that consideration should be given to a plan proposed for a subway system in Detroit, whereby car riders, owners of continguous property and the city as a whole would share the cost of the underground tubes.

The Detroit plan, which was prepared by the Rapid Transit Commission of that city, as a proposed amendment to the city charter, and has been approved by the Common Council, will be submitted to the voters Sept. 9. It was evolved from study of methods of financing various large public undertakings in America and abroad.

It recognizes that property owners along rapid transit lines and the community generally derive benefit, as well as passengers who are moved more quickly than on surface lines. The riders' share of the cost of the system would be represented in the fare, while property owners and the city would make payment in manner similar to payment for street improvements.

declare that it will reduce the transportation company's overhead expense, thus assuring the lowest possible fare. The plan would divide the cost as follows: Property owners, 51 per cent; city, 17 per cent; car riders, 32 per cent. The Detroit Rapid Transit Commission issued the following explanation of its scheme:

"Assessment by district on locally benefited property so 50 per cent of the cost of the system will be assessed against locally benefited property extending a half mile on each side of each rapid transit line. The assessment district will be divided into zones or areas. Rates will be charged varying from 7 cents per square foot at the station entrance down to 1 cent per square foot a half mile away. A 100-foot lot at a station entrance would pay the equivalent of $7 per front foot, or a total of $40 per front foot over the seven-year period. A similar lot 1500 feet from the station entrance would pay $2.25 per front foot every year, or a total of $15.75 per front foot over the seven-year period, while a lot of the same depth in the outer zone would pay $1 per front foot per year, or a total of $7 per front foot during the period of construction.

Can't Be Assessed Again.

"Once an assessment district has paid these seven annual assessments toward the construction of any line or lines, it cannot again be assessed for the same line or lines.

"The assessment district will be created by the Common Council at the request of the rapid transit commission, and the levying and collection of assessment will be through the offices of the board of assessors and of the city treasurer. The amendment provides that in no case can an assessment against any property exceed in amount the benefit that the property will derive from the rapid transit system.

"The charter amendment provides that certificates of indebtedness may be issued to cover any unpaid assessment. These certificates may be sold at public or private sale, will bear interest at 6 per cent until due, and 8 per cent thereafter. It is believed that the benefits in the enhancement of property values along rapid transit lines will substantially exceed the amount of the annual assessment. The certificates of indebtedness are designed to preserve to the small lot and home owner his full measure of benefit from the construction of the rapid transit system by permitting him to obtain an extension of time upon any or all the annual assessments against his property. These certificates of indebtedness will be sold by the city treasurer, acting in the capacity of broker, and they will be exempt from other taxes.

City's Share of Expense.

"Ad valorem taxes upon the city as a whole—The rapid transit commission proposes that 17 per cent of the total cost of the system shall be raised by direct taxation in seven annual, and approximately equal amounts. This percentage is similar to the 15 per cent of the cost of street openings and widenings assessed against the city as a whole.

"Assume, for the sake of example, an undertaking to cost $100,000,000. Seventeen per cent would be $17,000,000, and this spread over the seven-year construction period, would total approximately $2,430,000 per year, to be divided among the annual budgets of Detroit and such other of her neighboring municipalities as would be affected by the different lines of such a system. If a system was recommended that would cost $200,000,000 the 17 per cent would be $34,000,000, or approximately $4,860,000 per year for seven years, to be similarly divided among the annual budgets of Detroit and her neighbors. The charter amendment uses the figure of 20 per cent instead of 17 per cent in order to provide a little leeway to the commission.

Patrons Pay 32 Per Cent.

"Portion to be paid by the car rider—32 per cent of the total cost of the rapid transit system is recommended as the part to be paid by the car rider. The commission is empowered, under the amendment, to buy on credit, to lease with option to buy, or to make contract in any form, to use promissory note, or other evidence of indebtedness, in order to finance the car riders' 32 per cent of the total cost in advance of rapid transit operation, and of the receipt of revenue from the car rider.

"This part of the cost is all that the car rider has to carry and pay back. He will have no interest to pay on the 51 per cent of the total cost that is assessed against locally benefited property. He will have no interest to pay upon the 17 per cent paid by the city as a whole. Locally benefitted property and the city as a whole may be regarded as providing a new street facility. They build the subway or rapid transit structure. The car rider has to equip this structure and pay for the cost of operation and maintenance.

"The charter amendment itself does not contain the basis of local assessment or the exact proportion of cost to be borne by property and the car rider. The amendment is broadly drawn to give to the city the power to avail itself of the plan outlined above.

"The proposed amendment changes the Rapid Transit Commission as authorized a year ago, from three members with salaries of $10,000 per year to five members without salaries. The appointment of the new rapid transit commission will be in the hands of the Mayor and the first terms of office will be for one, two, three, four and five years, and thereafter all terms of office will be for five years. Each Mayor during his two-year term of office will consequently have the appointment of two commissioners, while the other three carry over from previous administrations. On account of the magnitude of this undertaking and the importance of properly maintaining continuity of policy and program, this method of appointment and duration of office has been deemed essential. Any member of the commission may be removed by the Mayor for cause."

FILLING STATION IS OPENED DESPITE CITY ORDINANCE

An oil filling station was opened last week at Forty-third and State streets, East St. Louis, by Finis P. Ernest, owner of a chain of East Side filling stations, despite a city ordinance forbidding motorists to enter or leave such a property, when the connecting driveway leads onto property owned by the East St. Louis Park Board.

In this instance, the west half of Forty-third street is so owned, but Ernest has announced that an unused, weed-covered alley, leading from the rear of the oil filling station to Forty-third street, will be converted into a driveway, while the portion of the lot contiguous to the street, will be closed with a fence of artistic construction.

This apparently successful adaptation of the property, for the purposes indicated, follows the abandonment of plans for an oil filling station there, which were promulgated by Vernon Clark, an East St. Louis real estate dealer, and others. Clark bought the lot, but gave up the project when he learned the limitations, and sold it to Ernest. Previously, the city had offered to deed its right to the east half of the street to the Park Board, contingent upon its permitting the erection of a filling station. This right was not waived, and the offer was rejected.

Nurses' Examination Sept. 26.

Examinations for licenses as obstetrical nurses will be held by the State Board of Nurse Examiners at 238 Municipal Courts Building, St. Louis, and Kupper Hotel, Kansas City, Sept. 26. They will be open to graduates of maternity hospital courses of at least 18 months. Applications may be obtained fro mthe board secretary, 620 Chemical Building.

SEVENTH EDITION OF RED-BLUE BOOK MAKES ITS APPEARANCE

Volume Has 1853 Pages and Contains all Information About the City.

The seventh edition of St. Louis Red-Blue Book, a volume of 1853 pages, containing a listing of residences and business properties by street and avenue number, the automobile registration for the city and St. Louis County, and other statistical business information, made its appearance yesterday.

The publishers, Polk-Gould Directory Co., announce the publication is the only one of its character produced anywhere. The street and avenue guide and directory of householders fill 865 pages, while the automobile registration, listed numerically, fills 484 pages, these two sections constituting the chief makeup of the volume.

Previous editions have listed telephone numbers, numerically by exchanges, but in the current volume this is omitted, on account, the publishers say, of the merging of the Bell and Kinloch systems and attendant changing of numbers.

In addition, the book carries a miscellaneous section, embracing information as to the city government, courts, schools, buildings, business, civic and religious, etc.; a buyers' guide, listing St. Louis firms, alphabetically, by lines of business; a corporation section, containing a list of all incorporated St. Louis concerns, describing officers, nature of business and capital stock; a club directory, giving officers and members' names; and a classified business directory, limited to a selected list of business and professional men and corporations.

MILLSTADT HOME-COMING

HISTORY STILL REPEATS

Old heads do not belong on young shoulders!

The play-time of life is during childhood and youth; each has its distinctive diversions.

Children properly taught will acquire wisdom as they grow, guided by parental teachings. Experience will do the rest.

There are some nationalities with whom raising children is an art; they raise so many.

Whether raised in affluence or poverty, proper HOME training will develop the good traits and curb the bad ones.

History has proven this in many great men's lives.

Tennis Rapidly Becoming Popular Pastime Among Members of Country Club

Many Parties Are Given by the Stay-at-Homes in the Fashionable World Since the National Clay Court Tournament Was Held Here — Club Also Boasts of Some Real Championship Caliber Among Its Members—Regular Saturday Night Dances Will Be Resumed Next Month.

TENNIS, both as a sport and a mode of exercise, has made rapid strides in popularity since the National Clay Court Championship tournament held here in July. The courts, both municipal and private, are crowded with enthusiastic devotees of the game, and groups play from early morning until sundown, and by arc light into the night. The clubs, where golf for years has held undisputed sway as the king of sports, have their quotas of tennis matches. Especially is this true of the St. Louis Country Club, the chief rendezvous of the stay-at-homes in the fashionable world. Here the members, with their wives, congregate for what they term "tennis parties." The games are usually scheduled for late afternoon, when the sun is set sufficiently to permit of comfort, and the sight of white linen and flannel-clad figures flying over the hardened surface is an every-day occurrence.

The club boasts championship caliber and judging from the way they practice lobbing and chop, back-hand and volley and half volley strokes, there will be more in the near future. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner play unusually good games, so do Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kauffman. Mrs. Lynn Secord is another adept, and Mr. and Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus and Mrs. Claude Matthews are a credit to their instructors. Until their departure for the East, Mr. and Mrs. Pelham Turner were often seen on the courts, and Mr. and Mrs. Gates Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Lewis, and Mrs. John Young Brown motor out often. Among the men, George Knapp and Clarence Gamble are skilled. The sets are often followed by informal dinner parties and dancing. The regular Saturday night dances at the Country Club, suspended for the summer, will be resumed next month.

The list of this season's debutantes has been augmented today by the name of Miss Mary Howell Betts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick Betts of 5750 Westminster place. Miss Betts is a graduate of Mary Institute and last year attended Vassar College. She is a close personal friend of Miss Jessie Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peyton C. Carr, and Miss Marjorie Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alden Little, two of the new crop of buds, and her formal coming out party will be a tea, to be given by Mrs. John Leigh Green, of 12 Kingsbury place. The date of the party will be announced later.

Titled visitors come to St. Louis with increasing frequency. Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Andrews, 4914 Argyle place, and the latter's mother, Mrs. William McLoney, will return home today from a motor trip to New York, bringing with them Mrs. McLoney's son-in-law and daughter, the Marchese and Marchesa Manzi-Fe of New York. The Marchesa, before her first marriage, was Miss Flavel McLoney, and later become the wife of Richard Sayers of Chicago. She and the Marchese plan to depart in September for Italy to reside.

Mr. and Mrs. John Overall of the Kent road are expected home about Sept. 20 from a summer in Europe. They are traveling with Mrs. Overall's sisters, Mrs. Henry McRee and Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa, and their husbands. In the absence of the Overalls their country home is being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus.

Mrs. Clinton H. Lubbock, 5438 Vernon avenue, has returned home from a month's visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Judge and Mrs. James E. Goodrich, of Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave J. Meyer, 3853 Westminster place, will leave St. Louis today for Bolton's Landing, Lake George, N. Y., to attend the wedding of Miss Catherine Dula Edgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn C. Edgar of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Meyer's son, Jerome Meyer, which will take place there Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Corby departed yesterday for a trip to the Northern resorts, and will be at home after Sept. 1 at 108 Arundel place.

The bride was a student at Monticello Seminary, and would have completed part of her course next June. Corby is a graduate of the University of Michigan, where he became a member of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity. He served in the war with the aviation corps, and is a member of the St. Louis Flying Club.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bullock, 5530 Delmar boulevard, will depart Wednesday for New York to sail for Europe. They will be gone a month.

Mrs. Robert Thal of 5153 Washington boulevard sailed yesterday from Southampton on the newly painted, flag-bedecked steamer Berengaria, bearing the Prince of Wales on a visit to the United States. Mrs. Thal has been traveling in Europe for two months. Mr. Thal will meet her in New York, and they will go to Jackson, N. H., to visit their daughter, Mrs. Harry Schram, before coming to St. Louis.

Mrs. and Mrs. Rolla Wells of 25 Westmoreland place, who spent the early part of the summer in California, have sailed for Hawaii to spend several weeks.

An interesting letter sent from Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Donnell to the latter's parents, M. and Mrs. Frank P. Hays, told of their activities in London during the convention of the American Bar Association. They attended the garden party given by the King and Queen of England in the immense grounds surrounding Buckingham palace, and later the reception given by Lady Astor to the visiting lawyers. They were also guests at the reception given by the Bar Association of London, which was attended by royalty. The Donnells are expected home Sept. 15. Mrs. Hays has been caring for their children during their absence.

St. Louisans Active In Affairs at the Eastern Resorts

BOSTON, Aug. 23.

TODAY everyone is at the North Shore swimming pool for the annual gymkhana of the younger members of the Magnolia and Bass Rocks summer colonies.

The class in esthetic dancing which began some weeks ago is now meeting twice each week at the summer home of Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard of St. Louis, under the auspices of her daughter, Mrs. Luther Ely Smith, whose two children, Adeline and Luther Jr., are members of the class.

Last Saturday was given over to the horse show at Green Meadows, the Burroughs estate at Hamilton, for the benefit of the Welcome Home in Boston. Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, and Lady Isabelle Howard, motored over from Pride's Crossing for the occasion.

Mrs. Luther Ely Smith of St. Louis entertained two tables of bridge at the North Shore swimming pool, Magnolia, on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Ludington and son of St. Louis are August guests at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Among the parties at the dinner dance at Del Monte's on Saturday night was Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Perry of New York, who had eight guests at their table. Mrs. Perry is the daughter of Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick of St. Louis, with whom she is spending the summer at Magnolia.

The "auction tea" last Saturday afternoon at "Blighty," the East Gloucester summer home of Col. and Mrs. John W. Prentiss, was one of the most important affairs of the summer, about 2500 invitations having been sent out. The auction was for the benefit of the building fund of the North Shore Artists' Association and took place in the big assembly room of the house. Many of the artists of the North Shore had given works of art and the total receipts were over $5000. Among those who contributed was Mrs. Kathryn Cherry of St. Louis, who is of the Rocky Neck artist colony.

Rye Beach, N. H., Aug. 23. — At Rye Beach, a short distance along the shore from the North Shore of Massachusetts is a delightful summer colony. Some thirty years ago Marshall Field of Chicago built himself a summer home in this region, and for years the summer folks at Rye were largely from the Windy City. Later St. Louis people, discovering its beauties, came in ever increasing numbers until now there is a large permanent colony as well as many families who make the two large hotels their summer headquarters.

Perhaps the best known of the St. Louis estates is that of former Governor David Francis, whose family have been coming here for years. It is not an imposing place but the pretty colonial house with a well in the front yard looks comfortable.

Mrs. George Castleman of St. Louis is also a cottage owner at Rye Beach, and has been coming to this section of New England for a number of years. Her estate, The Elms, is another place of delight with its gardens and lawns in which Mrs. Castleman takes great pride.

Dr. and Mrs. George S. Drake Jr. of St. Louis, are at Rye Beach where there is a large Drake family connection, from Cleveland and Chicago, while others are a few miles away at Bass Rocks.

St. Louisans at the Farragut this year include Mr. and Mrs. Max Kotany, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins and Dr. and Mrs. Horace Soper. At Stoneleigh Manor are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Akin of St. Louis, who have been at Rye for many years.

The social and sport center of Rye Beach is the Abenaqui Golf Club, where this week the women's golf tournament has been played. Miss Audrey Faust of St. Louis won in the finals, defeating Miss Constance Woodworth of Concord, Mass., 5 and 3.

Miss Damaris Macbeth of St. Louis is visiting Miss Betty Meggs at Rye Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Papin of St. Louis are also of the Rye Beach summer colony.

HYANNISPORT, Mass., Aug. 23. —Another colony of St. Louis people may be found at Hyannis and Hyannisport, on the south shore of Cape Cod. Among the pioneer summer people in this section were Mr. and Mrs. John H. McCluney. Mrs. McCluney's death last Saturday, at the Hyannisport home, brought a sense of grief to all the old-timers in the resort. Miss Mildred McCluney and Mrs. Charles H. Gardner of St. Louis have been with Mrs. McCluney during the summer.

Another of the St. Louis families who have come to Hyannisport for years are the Reyburns. This week Miss Marceline Reyburn has joined her mother, Mrs. Charles Fletcher Sparks, at their summer home and is entertaining Miss Mary Francis Dickson, also of St. Louis.

MAINE COAST, Aug. 23.—The summer colony at Bar Harbor have had a busy week beginning with the water sports at the Swimming Club on Monday followed on Wednesday by the gymkhana under the auspices of the American Legion. Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt donated a cup for the chariot race and 25 other cups were given by members of the summer colony. Among those who had boxes were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus of St. Louis are recent arrivals at the Poland Spring House, Poland Spring.

Mrs. C. C. Murphy of St. Louis is with friends at the Poland Spring House.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Stanard of St. Louis are guests at the Poland Spring House for a short stay.

The first of a series of races for the 17-foot one design class of the Bar Harbor Yacht Club was sailed on Saturday, Mrs. Robert McCormick's yacht winning, closely followed over the finish line by Joseph Pulitzer's.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, who are spending August at the Pulitzer villa at Bar Harbor, entertained at dinner on Friday evening.

Mrs. Raymond Foster of St. Louis, who is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Frederick Pinkham in Portland, was the guest of honor at a tea given by Mrs. Raymond Hearn of Portland on Wednesday afternoon.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—The largest ball of the summer was given by Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan at Bonniecrest on Saturday night in honor of the twenty-first birthday of their son, Mr. John P. Duncan. Some six hundred guests were invited, among them the players in the invitation tennis tournament which was in progress at the Casino during the week. Also among those invited were Mrs. Dan W. Jones of St. Louis and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman of Boston.

This has been a dancing season at Newport, there being four large balls last week and three this, in addition to a number of small affairs. On Thursday afternoons the youngsters of the villa colony dance on the horseshoe piazza of the Casino.

Many from the neighboring resorts came to Newport last Saturday for the Newport dog show at Freebody Park, the championship for the show was won by Mrs. William P. Burden's Hercurean Indomitable, a St. Bernard.

The polo tournament at the Point Judith Country Club at Narragansett Pier continues to draw large numbers of the cottagers eac hafternoon. Among those frequently noted in the grand stand is Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert of St. Louis, with other members of her family, among whom have been recently Mr. and Mrs. Don Lambert, who came on for August.

The annual putting contest at the Ocean House, Watch Hill, has been in progress this week. Among the entrants was Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Yantis of St. Louis.

The men's annual championship tournament, the big event of the summer at the Misquamicut Golf Club, began this week. Among those playing were Allen T. West, W. G. Yantis and Rev. Edward Travers, all of St. Louis.

Miss Lousita Mose rof St. Louis was one of the guests at a brithday dinner given by Miss Eleanor Cornell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cornell of East Orange, N. J., at the Ocean House, Watch Hill, on Wednesday evening. Afte rthe dinner the young people enjoyed a marshmallow roast on the beach followed by dancing at the hotel.

After a honeymoon trip through the White Mountains by motor, Mr. and Mrs. Bry will return to St. Louis to make their home.

A reception followed at the bride's home.

The ceremony was performed in St. Peter's Evangelical Church by the Rev. William Hackman, the pastor. Miss Gertrude Rittenhouse was bridesmaid and Lamonte Saunders best man. The bride wore a simple summer frock fashioned of white crepe de chine and lace. Her wreath and veil were trimmed in seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of the palest green crepe; she carried pink roses. Upon their return from a honeymoon trip Mr. Laue and his bride will make their home in St. Louis.

How to Bathe Face to Remove Wrinkles

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the country have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel one-half pint. These ingredients are, of course, perfectly harmless, and there is no difficulty in obtaining them at any drug store or toilet counter.

ACTIVITIES OF MISSOURIANS IN CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, and her granddaughter, Miss Beatrice Henderson, who have been spending the summer at Bar Harbor after altering their plans to go abroad, will return to Boundary Castle in Washington, Sept. 15.

"That versatile May Williams," Washington society is saying of Mrs. John R. Williams, wife of Col. John R. Williams, U. S. A., who is from Missouri. Mrs. Williams has successfully managed several extensive real estate operations and accumulated a tidy fortune thereby. Her daughter, Juliette, married Joseph Leiter, the millionaire wheat king. Mrs. Williams is now engaged in a project to build a huge bachelor apartment on Connecticut avenue for the sake of the bachelors of the diplomatic and resident colonies. She came back here from Bar Harbor last Monday to watch the progress of this work.

Gen. Pershing retiring chief of staff, United States Army, will be the honor guest, Sept. 9 in the Hotel Astor, New York, at a banquet to be given by the Government Club with Mrs. George B. Owens as hostess. A number of important persons from military and civic life will be present. The General will be accompanied from Washington for the banquet by Major H. R. Quekmeyer, his aid.

Mrs. Bessie P. Brueggeman, who has been in Atlantic City for the past two weeks, has returned to her home here. Major and Mrs. Arthur Haldane Doig, formerly of St. Louis, have come to Washington for several months. They will open an apartment here shortly.

Miss Peggy Hagerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hagerman of 3317 Newark street, prominent members of the St. Louis colony here, has left Washington for Jamestown R. I., where she will make several visits before entering Smith College where she is a junior.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Puller have returned to Washington and opened their home on 18th street, Northwest, after a month at the North Shore resorts.

HOISTING APPARATUS RESCUES HORSE CAUGHT IN MANHOLE

Fire Department and Various Agencies Called to Help Extricate Animal.

A team of horses, drawing an empty coal wagon through an alley between Laclede avenue and Forest Park boulevard, just west of Euclid avenue, about 10:30 a. m. yesterday, dislodged the iron cover of a sewer manhole, about four feet in diameter; the "off-horse"—a large, black animal—falling, as far as his left hind-leg would permit, into the aperture. The driver unhitched and led away the other horse; a crowd collected; somebody got to a telephone; and thereafter—

The fire department arrived.

The Union Electric "trouble wagon" and crew arrived.

The Humane Society investigators arrived.

And the crowd continued to arrive—in increasing numbers.

All efforts to extricate the unfortunate animal proved fruitless, until about noon a call was responded to by an automobile truck with a hoisting apparatus. By this agency, aided by a fireman's life-saving belt, passed about the horse's middle, the animal was restored to terra firma and its customary posture.

Except for a badly skinned leg, the horse appeared little the worse for the experience, and was led, limping slightly, to the company's stables at Market street and Leffingwell avenue.

KIEL SIGNS PETITION ON SITE REFERENDUM

Mayor Says Location of New Courthouse Should Be Put Up to People.

A man circulating a petition of the Courthouse Referendum Committee, for a referendum on the ordinance locating the new $4,000,000 bond issue courthouse on the Memorial Plaza, asked Mayor Kiel, whom he did not know, to sign the petition, at Hotel Statler Thursday.

The Mayor signed it, and explained yesterday that his signature was an expression of his opinion that the question should be put up to the people. The Mayor had gone to the hotel at the time a group of movie stars were there for the Loew theater opening.

As is known, Mayor Kiel changed his mind a few months ago and agreed with leaders of the Courthouse referendum group, some of whom are warm personal friends of his, that the Courthouse should be kept some where on Broadway. If a majority vote was cast to uphold the referendum proposal the plaza site ordinance would be repealed, ubt a majority vote the other way would affirm the ordinance.

It will be recalled that after the Board of Aldermen passed the plaza site ordinance, and when it was awaiting executive approval or veto, the Mayor departed on a previously planned trip to Europe without acting on it. President Neun of the Board of Aldermen, as acting Mayor, signed it.

Initial petitions of the Courthouse Referendum Committee were found to have a surplus of valid signatures. Supplementary petitions, which must be filed by Sept. 10, will have to bear about 14,300 valid signatures, there being unusually a percentage of invalid ones. About 15,000 signatures have been obtained in the last week. It is expected to finish, with about 10,000 more, this week.

The Plaza Courthouse Committee is opposing the effort to change the Courthouse site designated by the Aldermen.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card holders on receipt of postage, in order of application.

"THE ETHICS OF JOURNALISM," by Nelson Antrim Crawford. "A pioneer book on a subject which is attracting keen attention not only among practicing journalists and students but among the thinking public as well."

"THE STATE OF THE NATION," by Albert J. Beveridge. The questions discussed are ones that challenge every thoughtful citizen. They are treated with candor and common sense and though there is never a doubt where the author stands, his arguments are fashioned with tolerance and his reasoning is clear.

"BOOK OF ENTERTAINMENTS AND THEATRICALS," by Helen Smith and L. Barratt. "The authors who are past grand masters of the art of organized entertainment reveal the arcana of the craft, telling, in an informal but exhaustive fashion, everything that one needs to know about the work of the Entertainment Committee."

"ESSAYS BY PRESENT - DAY WRITERS," Edited by Raymond Woodbury Pence. "Representative examples of what is being done in essay writing on both sides of the Atlantic. Biographical notes and bibliographical lists are included in the volume.

"SONGS AND BALLADS OF THE MAINE LUMBERJACKS WITH OTHER SONGS FROM MAINE." Collected and edited by Roland Gray. The sheaf of songs and ballads comprising this volume were gathered during a long residence in Maine while the author was a professor in the State university.

MODERN GYPSIES; THE STORY OF A TWELVE-THOUSAND-MILE MOTOR TRIP ENCIRCLING THE UNITED STATES," by Mary C. Bedell. For the lover of out-of-doors. Picturesque sections covered in this record are the desert, California, Yosemite, Crater Lake, Mount Ranier and Yellowstone.

"GENE SARAZEN'S COMMON SENSE GOLF TIPS," by Gene Sarazen. A highly practical and easy-to-follow book on golf. Profusely illustrated.

"PLAYS OF IVAN S. TURGENEV," translated from the Russian by N. S. Mandell. Ten plays by the famous Russian novelist are here translated into English for the first time.

FARMERS' COUNCIL PROTESTS AGAINST BURNS' DISCHARGE

Secretary Wallace Dismissed Solicitor Without Hearing, Report Sent to President States.

TESTIFIED BEFORE HOUSE COMMITTEE

Former Department of Agriculture Attorney Told of Collusion Between Packers and Administration Branch.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-22 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Characterizing the summary dismissal of John M. Burns from the Department of Agriculture by Secretary Wallace, following Burns' testimony before a House committee regarding methods used in the packers and stockyards administration as "one of the most underhand and sneaking cases of official terrorism in our country's history," the Farmers' National Council, through its managing director, Benjamin C. Marsh, announced today that it had asked President Coolidge promptly to investigate Secreatry Wallace's action.

The statement said: "The Farmers' National Council has set before President Coolidge in a letter the essential facts regarding the summary dismissal of John M. Burns from the Solicitor's office of the Packers' and Stockyards Act Aministration.

Burns' testimony was given to the House Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture at the request of that committee. Burns went before it with the consent of Secretary Wallace, who did not appear before the committee personally, to attempt to answer the charges Burns proved.

After Congress Adjourned.

"Six days after Congress adjourned so it couldn't force the removal of any Cabinet members Burns was removed without a hearing on pretext that the force was being reduced, although the Secretary has since hired an additional lawyer from outside the department in connection with the Armour-Morris merger.

"The Farmers' National Council reminded President Coolidge that the chairman and treasurer of the Republican National Committee have not yet complied with the Senate resolution asking them to report to the Senate what contributions the "Big Five" meat packers have made to that committee, directly or indirectly, since 1920."

It was denied at the Department of Agriculture today that Burns had been connected with the packers' and stockyards administration. It was explained that he had held a minor position in the solicitor's office of the department, and had been dismissed following an order for reduction of forces. This dismissal, it was admitted, occurred some months ago.

Testified of Collusion.

Burns testified before the House Committee on Expenditures in the Agriculture Department that there was evidence of gross collusion between the "Big Five" meat packers and the packers' and stockyards administration, which is a division of the department under the direction of Chester Morrill, who is classified as an assistant to the secretary.

Department officials said that Burns was not an employe of this division and therefore was not in a position to know the facts. These officials said that the charges he made against the administration had been proved goundless, that the committee had adjourned its hearings on motion of the chairman and that no report had been made.

It was indicated that the Department would issue a statement though it was quite likely that no mention would be made of Burns.

To substantiate their claim that the administration was operating for the benefit of co-operative societies, these officials said that John J. Brown of Indiana, president of the National Producers' Association composed of 23 co-operative societies, had voluntarily appeared before the committee, with other agricultural leaders, to give the administration unqualified indorsement.

Hughes and Coolidge Differ.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—There is at least one point of disagreement between President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes. While the President is not partial to either pie or doughnuts for either breakfast or any other time, his secretary of state is fond of both. Asked today where he stood on pie and doughnuts, Hughes' face burst into a broad, sunny smile as he remarked: "I am very fond of both."

Plan to Observe Defense Day.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 23.—Mayors of 318 Missouri cities and towns had notified Adjutant General Raupp today that preparations were under way in those towns for observing national "Defense Day" Sept. 12. At Carthage, the program will include the dedication of a memorial hall. Governor Hyde will deliver an address at the dedication ceremonies. An aircraft demonstration will be held at Joplin in connection with the program.

RE-PURIFIED HELIUM GAS FOR DIRIGIBLES

Government Installs $100,000 Plant at Lakehurst that Separates Air Adulteration

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The coming of the German-made dirigible ZR-3 to the United States this fall accentuates the value of that recent acquisition to science, nonexplosive helium gas, of which this country possess a commercial monopoly. The ZR-3, which is to become American property as a reparations payment, will be flown to America using hydrogen, but upon its arrival will be inflated with helium.

So important is deemed the American supply of helium, that a measure is pending in Congress to insure its conservation and to prohibit its exportation.

The Bureau of Mines, to which branch of the Department of the Interior was intrusted the search for helium and the working out of processes for its recovery, has just installed a new extraction plant at Fort Worth, Texas. There, in conjunction with the commercial development of the product, the Government will carry forward, the new method, which is to be turned over to the navy to operate later, when demonstrated fully successful.

Helium 98 Per Cent Pure.

A repurification plant has recently been installed at Lakehurst, N. J., home of the navy air giant Shenandoah. Air seeps in through the huge envelope of the Shenandoah, and when the helium purity is lowered to 85 per cent, through admixture of the air, the mixture is taken out and put into a refrigeration plant and again separated. Helium 98 per cent pure is recovered, with only about 1 per cent loss.

This new repurification plant cost about $100,000, but it has already demonstrated a saving of $180,000, each time the gas is taken out and repurified. The cost of filling the Shenandoah with unused helium is estimated at $200,000. The repurification system enables helium formerly used to be restored to its pristine purity and pumped into the Shenandoah for $20,000.

Won't Burn or Explode.

Sources of supply of helium are in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, three states in which it was originally found, and more recently in Utah and Montana, according to Dr. C. S. Lind, of the Bureau of Mines. The conditions which regulate its retention are not known. Unless helium is found to exist in quantities of one-half of one per cent, mixed with other gases, commercial development is not considered worth while. Two per cent of helium in a well is the maximum.

Helium is "perfectly inert chemically," says Dr. Lind. "It won't burn or explode, and it might even put out a gasoline fire. While hydrogen can be manufactured anywhere in the world and is universally obtainable, the safety of helium makes it the more desirable."

Helium was first discovered in the sun in 1869, Dr. Lind explains. From the Greek word helios, meaning the sun, it gets its name. It was discovered on earth in 1895 and in the United States in natural gases in 1907. The Bureau of Mines started helium work in 1917 as a war proposition.

FILES ADVERSE REPORT ON GRANTING CLUB CHARTER

Former Judge Kinsey Holds Woman's Republican Is Wholly Political in Character.

A report was filed yesterday in Circuit Judge Calhoun's court by former Judge William M. Kinsey, holding that the Thirteenth Ward Republican Women's Good Government Club is not entitled to a pro forma decree of incorporation.

He had been appointed referee to investigate the club's application for a charter, and in his finding states that it appears the chief purpose of the club is wholly political in character, which, in the opinion of the referee, is not authorized by the statute under which incorporation is sought. He suggested that the Court set a date for hearing the petitioners in open court.

Officers of the club are: Lillie Bammert, president; Dora Meyer, vice president; Mildred Neu, secretary, and Louise Albrecht, treasurer.

RULES POLICE HEADS NOT LIABLE FOR ACTS OF OFFICERS

Judge Calhoun Sustains Demurrer in Suit Brought Against Commissioners.

A demurrer in favor of members of the Bord of Police Commissioners and Chief of Police O'Brien, freeing them from liability in a $50,000 damage suit growing out of the acts of a patrolman, was sustained yesterday by Circuit Judge Calhoun.

The plaintiff, William L. Flagg, alleged that the patrolman, Modesto Gentilini, had without warrant or excuse entered his plumbing shop at 7106 Southwest avenue one day in May, 1923, and placed him under arrest on a peace disturbance charge after assaulting him.

On being acquitted, Flag filed suit seeking to hold the Police Board and the Chief of Police jointly liable with the patrolman for damages. Judge Calhoun decided that a public official is not legally liable for acts of a subordinate. He permitted the case to stand as against Gentilini.

BURIAL OF MISS JANUARY IN BELLEFONTAINE CEMETERY

Daughter of Original Owner of Ferguson Died at Home in Columbia.

The funeral of Miss Laura Hickman January, who died Friday in a hospital at Columbia, Mo., after a week's acute illness, was held yesterday from a chapel at 4449 Olive street, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Miss January, who was about 60 years old, was the daughter of the late Thomas T. January, upon whose large farm most of the present town of Ferguson is located. Upon the same property is located the Wabash Club, which has a lake known as "January Lake."

Miss January, who was known among her friends for many private charities and philanthropies, formerly lived in Ferguson, but moved to Columbia several years ago. Though in failing health for several months, she was acutely stricken a few days ago with an enlargement of the neck glands.

Surviving her is one brother, M. T. January, and a number of nephews and nieces living in St. Louis. The pallbearers, all of whom were relatives, were James E. Darst, Joseph E. Darst, Charles Cunningham, Charles H. Bartliff, Baird January and Andrew Bass.

ATING MILLINERY SHOP

Actress Has Large Patronage in Deauville Harbor.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—A remarkable of enterprise undertaken by Marthe Regnier, actress and liner, seems to have scored for a social as well as commercial success. Chartering a passenger boat from the Seine River she converted it into a hat shop and took it down river to Deauville Harbor, where it has been well patronized. Reports from the seaside resort say there has been a constant stream of motors at the Quayside where the "shop" is moored.

Oriental carpets and silken draperies hide the plainess of the boat's interior in a way that shows to best advantage the hats, dresses, shawls and other articles offered to feminine shoppers. The actress-milliner has also broken away from the use of flowers as adornments for the headdress. She has substituted vegetables, declaring that a bunch of artificial radishes is fully as effective as a cluster of roses.

Special Rail Rates for V.-P. Ball.

Railroads in the Western and Southwestern Passenger Associations have granted a special rate of fare to St. Louis for the Veiled Prophet celebration, Oct. 7 and 8, from all stations within 150 miles of St. Louis in the association territories. The round-trip fare will be one and a half times the one-way rate. The district included is the eastern part of Missouri and part of Illinois.

JEWELERS TO HOLD CONVENTION HERE

Session of National Association at Statler This Week to Include $10,000,000 Display.

The nineteenth annual convention of the American National Retail Jewelers' Association will be held at Hotel Statler for four days, beginning Tuesday. Precious stones and jewelry said by the convention managers to be valued at $10,000,000 will be exhibited in the Statler lobby under special police protection during the convention.

The convention will be called to order at 9 a. m., Tuesday, by Edward H. Hufnagel, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., president of the association. Mayor Kiel will deliver the address of welcome, to which Arthur G. Mansur, of Burlington, Vt., will respond. Addresses during the convention will include one by Edwin F. Lilley, vice president of the Horological Institute of America, Milford, Mass., whose subject will be "Improving the Watchmaker."

A feature of the jewelry exhibit will be the smallest watch in the world, of platinum and diamonds, and no larger than a dime. The exhibit will also include rare pieces of historic value.

Entertainment features during the convention include automobile tours of the city, a river excursion, and an evening at the Municipal Theater. The 40-piece band of the Illinois Watch Co. will give a concert at the Statler Wednesday. About 1100 delegates are expected.

DAVIS SAYS VETERANS' BUREAU OFFICE WILL REMAIN HERE

Assures Chamber of Commerce District Headquarters Will Not Be Moved.

In response to a telegram sent Dwight F. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, by the Chamber of Commerce, asking if there is any possibility that St. Louis may not be retained as a district control office of the United States Veterans' Bureau, Davis yesterday replied there is no thought of excluding St. Louis as a district office. Dispatches from Washington have told of the Veterans' Bureau's plans to reduce the number of district offices from 14 to eight.

This procedure, it was pointed out by executives of the St. Louis district offices, would be carried out by merging some districts with others. It is considered likely that St. Louis, under the new plan, will be headquarters for the southwestern States. At present the district comprises Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Paul V. Bunn, general secretary of the chamber, told Davis, in the telegram St. Louis logically should be included among the district offices retained and added the Chamber of Commerce is prepared to present arguments to this effect to Gen. Hines, commanding officer of the bureau at Washington, should this be necessary. About 250 persons are employed in the St. Louis office.

TO TAKE OFF FAT
New French Formula Reduces Pleasantly, Safely, Surely

If you are suffering from excess fat; if your heart, lungs and liver are affected by the burden you are carrying; if your joints are stiffened with rheumatism, or if you are a victim of high blood pressure due to obesity, you can now be relieved. No matter how little or how much you want to lose, and no matter all the pills, creams, diets and exercises you have tried before, SAN-GRI-NA, a new discovery of a French scientist, is guaranteed to relieve any fat man or woman or your money is refunded.

SAN-GRI-NA is the formula of a French physician. It has been used in Europe by millionaires, actresses and hundreds of fat men and women, because it is simple, easy, pleasant and harmless. If you are burdened with rolls of ugly fat, make this test to-day. First, weigh yourself, then go to any good drug store and get a box of SAN-GRI-NA, take two small tablets before each meal, and watch your fat disappear. One French woman, now in America, states that she reduced [illegible] pounds in eight weeks with this marvelous discovery, and has never regained one pound since. You do not have to follow any diets or exercises, but be sure and get the right tablets called SAN-GRI-NA, as nothing like it has ever before been offered to the American public.

"SAN-GRI-NA" is now sold at any of Speckart Bros.', Draper's, Enderle's, Otto's, Judge & Dolph's or Wolff-Wilson's Drug Stores

8 MONTHS OF LISTENING ALL HE CAN STAND; SHOOTS AT PIANIST

Berlin Man Tells Magistrate Neighbor Practiced for Hours at Time—"Had to Do Something."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 23. — Eight months of listening to the piano airs of a neighbor was all that Herr von Unwerth could stand and he finally gave vent to his feelings by shooting at the pianist with a revolver. The incident took place in a fashionable part of Berlin, where Fraulein Maria Danel practiced for hours upon her piano.

The bullet missed, but the echo of the shots brought all the dwellers of the neighborhood and a policeman. Unwerth was carted off to the police station loudly declaring that he had merely exerted his right to put an end to the piano exercises which had driven him almost mad.

"I just couldn't help myself and had to do something," he said.

The Police Magistrate put Unwerth under a bond to keep the peace hereafter and requested the young pianist to use a soft pedal when she practiced.

DOUMERGUE PLAYS HOOKEY TO VISIT FRIEND'S HOME

President of France Finds Living Under Guard in Elysee Palace Is Irksome.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—M. Doumergue's three months' residence in the Elysee Palace and the splendid country chateau at Rambouillet have already taught him something about uneasiness of the head that wears the top hat of the French presidency.

Of simple tastes, and opposed to much of the pomp and ceremony connected with his position, he finds irksome the constant presence of the flock of detectives and bicycle policemen charged with assuring his personal safety. The other day the President confided to a friend: "I finally succeeded in getting a key to the little outer gate of the Elysee Gardens, let myself out, hailed a taxi and at last felt free. But when I arrived at my destination, a friend's house, I found trailing me four bicycle policemen in a lather of sweat and all out of breath. I felt so sorry for them that I won't play hookey again."

MAUVE SUIT LATEST FOR MEN

Costume Appears at Deauville—Silk "Toppers" for Women.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—A departure in shades for men's wear was noted in the reserved enclosure at the Deauville races this week, when a young man appeared in a suit of bright mauve. In brilliancy, his costume vied with that of some of the women's. He proved to be a well-known Deauville hairdresser.

Some of the fashion leaders of the resort are trying to introduce, for women's wear, a silk "topper," much like those worn by men. Its chances of general adoption are not favorable, as it should be worn only with a very sober gown.

DETECTIVES' "FLYER"; TO COVER FAST CALLS

Police Department Receives First of Ten Fast Autos for Robberies and Riots.

An automobile, to be known as the "flyer," was delivered to the detective branch of the Police Department yesterday for use in getting quickly to the scene of a big robbery, murder, riot or any other emergency. It will make 75 miles an hour.

In appearance it is much like the ordinary touring car, with seats for five men, but here are some of the things it carries: A heavy bell for a warning signal in traffic, riot guns, tear bombs, automatic pistols, a sub-machine gun and ropes.

When a "flash" of something wrong reaches Police Headquarters the man receiving it will shout to the nearest available detectives: "Get the flyer," which will be kept handy in the police garage, on Clark avenue, behind Police Headquarters.

"We want to make it hot for the 'red hots,'" said Chief of Detectives Hoagland. "It is no longer a matter of minutes in getting to a bank robbery, for insance, but a matter of seconds. It is advantageous to get on the scene quickly."

Nine similar cars have been ordered for outlying districts. This car was equipped at the Fire Department garage.

TO CURB CHINESE SMUGGLING

Philippine Officials Find Orientals Enter From Borneo.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MANILA, July 25.—The smuggling of Chinese from British North Borneo into the Philippine Islands has increased largely in recent months and has become a profitable traffic, according to officials of the customs service.

Within the last week nearly 50 Chinese have been arrested in Zamboanga on charges of being in the country unlawfully and will be deported either to Borneo or Hongkong. They are brought from the coast of Borneo in native boats and landed on the various islands of the Sulu group only a few miles from the British possession. After reaching Philippine territory they easily work their way into the more populous sections, and many of them are never caught.

The customs authorities have ordered all available patrol boats to southern waters for the purpose of beginning a vigorous campaign against this traffic in Chinese as well as against the opium traffic.

GOVERNMENT MAY BUILD STAMP MILL IN ALASKA

Reduction Plant for Free Milling Ores Regarded as Necessity After Unofficial Survey.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Aug. 1.—After an unofficial survey of the mineral resources along the Government's Alaska Railroad, members of the United States Bureau of Mines have recommended to Washington that an ore-sampling plant and reduction works for treating free-milling ores by plate amalgamation and concentration of base ores be established by the Government at Anchorage.

According to engineers of the bureau, an official survey soon will be made.

It is reported that there are free-milling gold prospects in the railroad belt sufficient to supply thousands of tons of ore weekly, and lessors are ready to enter the field as soon as they are able to dispose of their product.

CIRCUS WILL OPEN HERE NEXT SATURDAY

Many Features With Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Show.

For the first time in three years a circus of the first order will be in St. Louis next Saturday, Sunday and Monday. It will be Ringling Bros. & Barnum & Bailey Combined Show, which was here last in 1921.

The show ground will be the old Ranken tract at Market street and Compton avenue. There will be performances at 2 and 8 p. m. each day, with the gates open an hour in advance. General admission will be 75 cents, but children under 12 can get in for 50 cents. Reserved seat admission will be $1.50.

In general, it is stated, the circus today is just about the same as the circus of grownups' childhood. New devices have been utilized, but the essential elements of old are still there. One hundred clowns will disport themselves, a feature being a collapsable flivver. There will be three rings, of course, but, instead of two stages, there will be four. The big top, said to be the largest canvas structure in the country, will hold 15,000 spectators. An innovation will be the operation of 40 electric fans throughout the seating area.

One hundred railroad cars are used by this circus, which has about 1600 employes, nearly half of whom are performers. It carries 760 show and work horses and half a dozen motor trucks, but the horses are still needed to haul the ponderous wagons over soft ground.

Among the leading performers are May Worth, equestrienne; Lillian Lietzel, aerialist; Berta Beeson, wire walker; the Nelson family (really a family), acrobats, and Ernest Clark, Trapeze worker.

Another important being in the organization is John Daniel II, a young gorilla, caught in Africa by Miss Alyce Cunningham, an Englishwoman. Miss Cunningham, another woman and a groom are the simian's constant companions. He is exhibited in the menagerie before each show, but the rest of the time is pampered like a child. He is taken riding daily on the seat of his own Ford sedan. Probably he will be taken to visit Forest Park and its zoo here. He has never worn collar nor harness. He is playful, but rough. Four years old and a yard high, he is a vegetarian and demands such a luxury as imported Italian grapes.

The menagerie has nearly 1000 animals, including 12 baby elephants and 35 older ones, in five herds, and three giraffes. It is said there are only four other giraffes in the country, the Cincinnati and Bronx (N. Y.) zoos each having a pair.

CORNERSTONE OF LUTHERAN CHAPEL TO BE LAID TODAY

Principal Address Will Be Made by Rev. Harvey Hoover of Carthage College.

The cornerstone of the new chapel at 3721 South Grand boulevard of the Advent Evangelical Lutheran Church, which was organized two and a half years ago and now meets in the auditorium of a business school, will be laid at 4 p. m. today by the pastor, the Rev. Frederick H. Hanes.

The principal address will be by the Rev. Harvey D. Hoover, president of Carthage College. The Rev. Eldon C. Dolbeer, field missionary of the Illinois Synod and first minister of the congregation, will give a historical sketch.

A second unit of the edifice is to follow the one-story chapel, which is so constructed that it may easily be altered for use as church offices and the like. The second and larger unit will be back of the chapel and separated from it by sunken gardens, so that the main body of the ultimate structure will be unusually sequestered. The architect, O. D. Schmidt, is a council member of the congregation, which has grown from a membership of 30 to 120.

Three Drown When Bridge Falls.

COVINGTON, Ky., Aug. 23.—Three persons were drowned and two others were injured last night when an automobile in which they were riding went through a bridge into Decoursey Creek, eight miles south of Covington.

DAVIS MOUNTAINS IN TEXAS MAY BE NATIONAL PARK

Scenic Region, in Which Is 9000-Foot Peak and Picturesque Canyons, Has Romantic History.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 23.—Another great motoring playground will be opened to tourists from the Middle West if a movement to have the Davis Mountains region in Texas is made a national park succeeds. Legislation making this section a State park has been recommended. Completion of highways will make the Davis Mountains, often called the "Texas Alps," easily accessible.

In the heart of the Big Bend country, these mountains offer lovely canyons, silvery streams, palisades and deep gorges, intermingled with numberless mountain peaks and ranges.

The territory suitable for a national park would take in all the important mountains in Jeff Davis County. Mount Livermore, the apex of the Davis Mountains, whose peak rises nearly 9000 feet above the sea level, is said to be the highest mountain in the State.

Another interesting peak is Star Mountain, visible from Fort Davis, which was used as a signal station for the United States army during the Mexican trouble in 1916. Then there is Madevia Mesa, whose tableland is the highest in Texas.

There are peaks of every shape and description, some of which are said to be volcanic.

In a beautiful valley at the foot of the Davis Mountains is Fort Davis, "The Mile-High Town," having the same altitude as Denver, Col.

The ruins of the old barracks, officers' quarters, chapel, corrals, formerly used by the United States Government as a protection to the frontier from attacks by Indians, give historic background. This old fort also served as a safeguard to the United States mail, which was transported by the old stagecoach.

Dual Highway to Relieve Massachusetts Traffic Jam

New $2,000,000 Road Paralleling Highway From Boston to Worcester Planned Because of Truck Congestion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—The first step toward dual highways to lessen traffic congestion, partially due to heavy movement of trucks, may be taken by Massachusetts, for the State Department of Public Works is planning a $2,000,000 highway paralleling the State highway from Boston to Worcester.

The new highway is to follow closely the present Worcester turnpike. A legislative appropriation will be necessary, although the Department of Public Works plans to build only about 25 miles of the new road, leaving the rest to the communities through which it passes.

To avoid creating worse congestion in Worcester, it probably will be decided to build a road connecting with the new highway and passing around Worcester chiefly to carry truck traffic to and from Springfield, Hartford and other cities south of Worcester.

Truck traffic between Boston and Worcester and cities west of the latter now move over the State highway, although there are some grades at the Boston end that truck drivers shy away from. The proposed new road will offer trucks easier grades.

There have been reports that when the dual highway is a fact, truck traffic will be forced to use the new road and keep off the main State highway. But this could not be done without a special act of the Legislature, because the State has no power to route any one kind of traffic over a special road only.

TROPHY FOR 1000-MILE STOCK CAR SPEED TEST

Only Cars Exactly Like Those Sold to Customers Eligible For Contest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23. — A perpetual trophy for the fastest 1000 miles made by a stock touring car chassis on a California speedway has been offered by the Los Angeles Times. The trophy is for only genuine stock cars, which must be absolute duplicates of the cars sold to customers every day. The competition is open to any standard car with four wheels, no matter what the weight or size of engine. The object is to show just what stock cars can and will stand, for such a 1000-mile high speed test will show up any weakness.

Whoever drives a stock car the fastest 1000 miles will hold the trophy two months before it can be taken from him.

HAND SIGNALS REQUIRED BY LAW—WHEN DRIVER IS TO STOP, SLOW OR TURN

SO MANY failures of automobile drivers in St. Louis to signal when about to slow or stop or turn right or left are reported, that it would be well to remember that the Missouri motor vehicle law specifically requires such signals.

A driver, when stopping or checking speed, is required to extend his arm horizontally. When intending to turn to the right, he must extend his arm "at an angle above the horizontal."

When planning to turn to the left, he must "extend his arm at an angle below the horizontal."

Hand signals are not required if a car is equipped with mechanical signals and the signals are used.

A Car of Countless Superiorities

Extremely light, simple and compact, yet fully adequate to its task, the Rollin motor utilizes the same superior scientific principles of design as the finest cars of Europe.

Through the incorporation of high compression and the embodying of advanced constructional details, the Rollin small displacement motor is enabled to develop a remarkably smooth continuity of power flow.

4-bearing crankshaft, aluminum alloy pistons and connecting rods, balanced statically and dynamically, force-feed lubrication and a fine character of workmanship, make this motor free from vibration and keep it working in fine fettle.

Carburetor and manifold refinements, together with high compression, are responsible for the Rollin's remarkable performance of from 25 to 30 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Balloon tires, 4 wheel mechanical, internal expanding brakes, and a transverse rear spring, exclusive with the Rollin in the moderate price class, make riding and driving easy and pleasurable to a high degree and contribute an added measure of safety and peace of mind.

GAS COST HIGH AT STATE OWNED FILLING STATIONS

Vane, Manager of National Dealers' Body, Reports South Dakotans Question Wisdom of Experiment.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 23.—Business conditions in the Northwest, from Minneapolis to Seattle are the most promising they have been in five years, according to C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, who recently arrived here from headquarters in St. Louis.

Vane motored through Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington, talking to automobile dealers, bankers, farmers and business men en route and gathering their impressions of production and economic conditions.

Recent advances in agricultural products have changed the entire feeling of the rural section, Vane reports, and the generally greater prosperity of these sections is rapidly dissipating the radicalism so evident after the beginning of deflation in 1920. Farmers are receiving the highest prices for their products that they have obtained in five years, and for the first time in that period feel as if they are being paid a fair price.

"Some of this feeling I found expressed concretely in South Dakota where the people are already beginning to question the wisdom of State owned gasoline filling stations," said Vane. "The highest priced gasoline that I bought on the trip across the Western country was in South Dakota. Minnesota gasoline could be purchased as low as 15 cents a gallon, with a general average of 18. South Dakota gasoline was quite generally 25 cents.

"I was informed that these prices were due to the fact that in the insistence that the filling stations sell gasoline at a profit, no consideration was paid to the fact that production and refining costs should be limited. As a consequence, production and refining costs, I was told, were out of all bounds of reason in comparison to privately operated plants. Naturally, those who had looked to State owned filling stations to provide cheaper gasoline were beginning to express discontent over this new machinery they had set up which was giving them higher prices than privately conducted plants in other States were providing.

CALIFORNIA HAS 15,000 MILES OF SURFACED ROADS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 23.—California now has more than 15,000 miles of surfaced roads. This State is called upon not only to provide adequate highways for its 1,200,000 motor vehicles, but it also must be prepared to take care of an ever-increasing number of visiting motorists. This year it is estimated that some 300,000 cars will enter the State and make use of the roads for touring purposes.

The Automobile Club of Southern California has just completed signposting the Arrowhead Trail, which is the key road to Zion Canyon, the newly created national park in Southern Utah.

The western portion of the transcontinental roads from Omaha, Kansas City and El Paso to Los Angeles also have been signposted by this auto club, which recently celebrated the acquisition of its hundred-thousandth member.

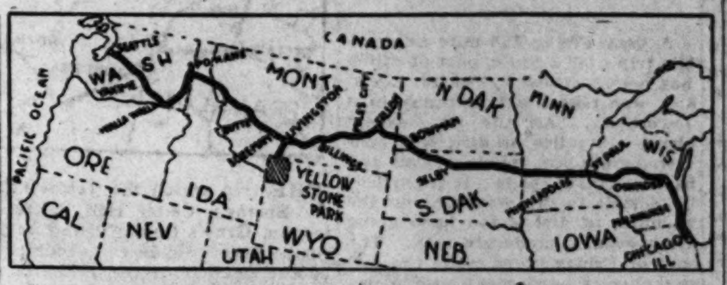
YELLOWSTONE TRAIL OFFERS INTERESTING TRIP TO PARK AND PACIFIC NORTHWEST

Missourians Can Pick It Up in Wisconsin—Illinois Motorists Can Drive Into It Anywhere East of Chicago or in Wisconsin.



LONGEST of the transcontinental highways is the Yellowstone trail, which begins at Plymouth, Mass., and ends 3594 miles distant at Seattle, Wash., on Puget Sound. It is being improved steadily, and eventually will be a concrete and gravel highway from coast to coast.

Missouri and Illinois motorists can intercept the Yellowstone Trail at Chicago or any point between Chicago or Milwaukee and St. Paul, Minn. Possibly the most satisfactory way is to use the popular Wisconsin route, which follows the St. Louis-Chicago route through Springfield, Ill., and Peoria to La Salle, Ill., where one goes north on No. 2 (gravel) to Mendota, then north on temporary No. 2 (gravel and dirt) to Franklin Grove, then west on Lincoln Highway concrete to Dixon and northeast on gravel and dirt through Oregon to Rockford. Then on concrete to Beloit and north on Wisconsin No. 13 concrete to Evansville and on good gravel to Madison, Wis., a total distance of 291 miles. Thence one can cut northeastward to Milwaukee, or go over No. 12 through Sauk City, Baraboo, Kilbourn and the Dells, Mauston, New Lisbon, Tomah, Black River Falls and into the Yellowstone Trail at Eau Claire, Wis. A prettier route is from Madison to Baraboo over No. 12, then No. 33 through Reedsburg, Union Center and Casghton to La Crosse, where the motorist crosses the Mississippi River and goes north on Minnesota No. 3 to Winona, west on No. 7 to Rochester and north to St. Paul, where he picks up the Yellowstone Trail.

The Yellowstone Tral from Chicago passes through Racine, Milwaukee, Fon du Lac, Oshkosh, Stevens Point, Marshfield, Abbottsford, Chippewa Falls and Eau Clair to St. Paul. From Milwaukee to Oshkosh the trail traverses the Fox River valley, Wisconsin's prettiest and most highly developed farming region. Marshfield is the center of the State's richest dairy section. An extensive natural forest is the attraction at Chippewa Falls. From the top of a hill at Hudson is a view for miles up and down the St. Croix River.

All of the Yellowstone Trail across Minnesota is included in the trunk highway system, and will all be paved. The section from Big Stone City to Aberdeen, S. D., is included in the highway system of South Dakota, much of it being completed or under contract.

Leaving Minneapolis, the Yellowstone Trail takes Excelsior boulevard to Excelsior, the largest city on beautiful Lake Minnetonka, and then passes through the richest farming section of the State.

The trail skirts the lake region of Minnesota, but touches Big Stone Lake. A trip over the Yellowstone Trail from Minneapolis to the Missouri River, 429 miles west, gives to the traveler a first-hand impression of the great producing sections of the Northwest. Progressive farm life is the domnating feature.

The section from Aberdeen, S. D. to Billings, Mont., is 632 miles. For the first 100 miles west of Aberdeen, the trail leads through a level to gently rolling country, great in stock raising, dairying and agricultural possibilities, but as yet, only partially developed. The trail along here is splendidly graded and marked.

At Mobridge the Missouri River is crossed by ferry, which will be replaced by a steel highway bridge now under construction. From Mobridge to McLaughlin the Trail passes through the Standing Roch Indian Reservation. Formerly this was a prairie trail, but now it is a good, highland road. The road across North Dakota is particularly good, and well-marked the entire distance. The Little Missouri River is crossed just above before entering Marmarth over a new steel bridge. From Marmarth to Terry, the road passes through a somewhat broken agricultural section, but is an excellent thoroughfare, and no trouble will be experienced. At Terry the Yellowstone Trail drops down to the Yellowstone River, following the river to Miles City, Billings and Livingston, to Gardiner, the north entrance to Yellowstone National Park.

The valley road of the Yellowstone, and the approach to Yellowstone National Park from Livingston to Gardiner, passes over the crest of the Rockies just east of Butte, always as good a road as can be found anywhere. The mountains are all taken on easy grades and there is no danger. The highest point of the Yellowstone Trail is the Continental Divide, just east of Butte. Going down the west side of the divide, over Davis Grade, a wonderful view of Butte is had. From Butte west the trail follows a valley by Deer Lodge, going downward by easy grades. From Deer Lodge west, it follows a stream through a canyon for 85 miles to Missoula.

Leading west from Missoula, the trail goes over a newly constructed Federal road. The road over the divide can be made easily as it has been recently constructed. On the Idaho side of the divide, the road is built with easy grades. Part is being hard-surfaced.

Mullan, Idaho, is the beginning of the Coeur d'Alene mining district. Here the stream is met which the trail follows to Catakio, from which point it branches off through the famous Fourth of July Canyon. A wonderful piece of road

A. A. A. Declares That No One Should Leave Car Standing Anywhere on a Public Highway.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Parking automobiles on public highways is strongly condemned by the American Automobile Association, as a public nuisance and danger. The basis for the A. A. A. action is numerous complaints from tourists who have been inconvenienced and endangered by persons who park their cars on the main highways when they could drive on to cross roads or open spaces.

The association states it does not sympathize with the motorist who thinks he would forfeit a privilege if forbidden to park on highways, because he is not safe in parking where there is high speed traffic and really would benefit by being compelled to park in safer places.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., says the number of accidents resulting from parking cars on heavily traveled highways offsets any possible advantages and that if the motorist does not appreciate the importance of park-

MOON

The Truth

MERE competitive criticism falls by the wayside as Moon moves forward again.

The truth about Moon leadership throughout America and many foreign markets is now a matter of record.

Passing twenty-five motor car manufacturers in volume of sales in four years, and the fact that Moon factory sales have multiplied fourteen times in the same period is not just an accident.

Thousands have turned to Moon in the great motor-wise markets.

BETTER METHOD FOR TESTING CAR BRAKES

Automotive Engineers Get Facts for Action Toward National Braking Code.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

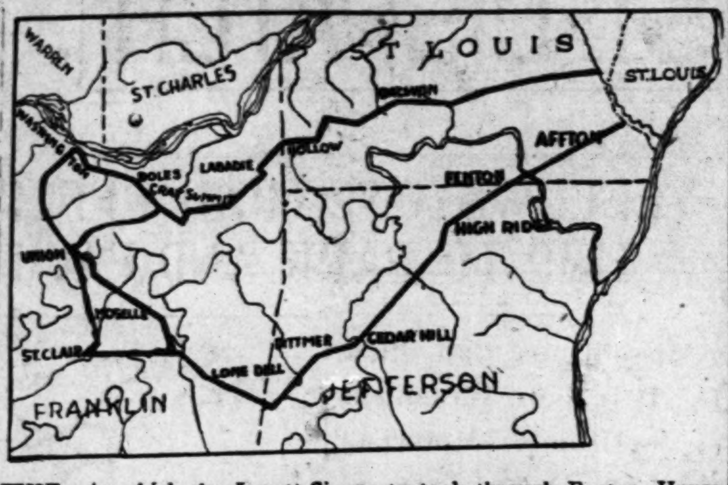
WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Automotive engineers connected with the U. S. Bureau of Standards recently tested the brakes of automobiles, picked at random in Washington to obtain data as the foundation for a uniform national code regulating braking requirements. The results of the examinations of the control apparatus of the motor vehicles will be sent to the annual congress of the National Safety Council, which will be held at Louisville, in September, and to the joint conference on street and highway safety, called by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, which will be held at Washington in November.

With a view to setting safe standards of performance, the Bureau of Standards has been making tests on automobile brakes for several months, using a new instrument known as the James brake inspection decelerometer, which has been pronounced by Government officials and other engineers the most accurate, convenient and fastest method for determining the stopping rate of an automobile. It was designed by a Government official.

The method of making the test is as follows: Set the instrument on the floor of the car, with the direction arrow pointing along the line of direction of car motion. Accelerate to any desired speed and apply the brakes with as much force as possible. The pointer will indicate the stopping distance from 20 miles per hour, and will remain there long enough for an accurate reading to be made, usually two or three seconds. The faster the stop, the greater the motion of the pointer, but the lower the reading.

Charming Dry Weather Trip and Good Option

Jewett Six Road Exploring Party Finds a Delightful 150-Mile Tour That Has Only 10 Miles of Dirt to Fear.



THE trip which the Jewett-Six party took through Fenton, House Springs, Cedar Hill, Dittmer, Oermann, Moselle, Union, Washington, Gray's Summitt and back into St. Louis over the Manchester road. As is told in the accompanying story, this trip is impracticable in wet weather or the day after rain. But in any kind of weather one can make the tour out the Manchester road to Washington, then to Union and Moselle, back to Union and over Route No. 12 to Gray's Summitt and back into St. Louis.

A very pretty 150-mile automobile trip over a route, part of which has been traveled by few St. Louisans, was taken last Saturday in a Jewett six. All the trip, except about 10 miles of dirt, was concrete, macadam, made gravel and natural gravel roads. It is perfectly feasible in dry weather, but the 10 miles of dirt is too hard going after even a moderate rain. The rain of Friday night made the dirt stretch very hard, mean pulling, although the danger was of getting into the ditch, not of bogging down in the road.

The start was made out the Gravois road through Fenton and on to Cedar Hill. Of all roads out of St. Louis the Gravois, on the whole, offers the best surface, traverses the prettiest country and offers the most views worth remembering. There was a 50-foot detour around the end of a bridge that was being rebuilt just beyond Fenton, but otherwise the graveled surface of the Gravois road is in excellent condition, in better shape, in fact, than the writer remembers in three years. The Antire Hill grade is relatively smooth, the two or three rough spots not being at all bad. One could hardly ask for a better country road than from Fenton to House Springs. Beyond the latter place, the road is a bit rough in places, but still good. The long hill beyond House Springs is not bad.

Pretty but Muddy.

About half a mile beyond Cedar Hill, the party swung to the right into road No. 30. At first the road appeared to be gravel and was good though none too wide. It had rained the night before, but the road had just been dragged and was smooth and offered no difficulties. There were several sweeping views from the tops of ridges and some pretty bits along brooks and through woods. One or two spots were encountered that were a bit muddy, but the road was good for a comfortable 15 to 20 miles an hour and was a delight scenically.

Then, about six miles from Cedar Hill, stretches of mud began to appear. The road, however, was still travelable under any weather conditions and appeared to be mud on a hard bottom. But presently it became unmistakably dirt, and very muddy, slippery dirt, at that. The Jewett kept going steadily along in high, but the pulling was very hard and it was difficult to keep the car from going into the ditch every hundred yards or so. Another car, which was just ahead, finally gave it up, but the Jewett party continued until, after about 10 miles of mud, they ran out onto a natural gravel road that was practicable under any conditions.

The entire dirt stretch on this road evidently is being dragged and maintained by the State, and when dry should offer a very pretty trip. While it is narrow, there is plenty of room for turning out for another car.

Lovely Road Along Ridges.

The gravel road crossed a bridge over a creek and presently crossed the Meramec River. Road men had advised not trying to make St. Clair because of a hill, bad in wet weather, and the fact that the Jewett party had come away from St. Louis without chains. They advised, instead, swinging right into the first right-hand road beyond the Meramec bridge and running to Moselle and Union. Their advice was taken, and the result was a lovely 12-mile ride to Union, mostly along the top of ridges, with occasional dips into valleys and numerous beautiful sweeping vistas. The road to Moselle is good natural gravel and then made gravel, all passable in any weather.

From Moselle to Union is more beautiful ridge road and then rolling farming country, with good going all the way over gravel and macadam. It would be well, however, to drive a bit cautiously on approaching the curves, for some of them are rather sharp.

A good macadam road climbs up a stiff hill out of Union and continues along the ridges about 10 miles until it drops down again to Washington in the Missouri River bottoms. Along this road, also, are many fine views. The road traverses a rich and well cultivated farming country. Washington, with its many quaint brick houses, is well worth an extended visit.

Onetime Bad Road Now Good.

The Jewitt party took the road to the Manchester road and Gray's Summit. The road sweeps up from the bottoms onto another ridge and continues for miles well above the valley. It is good macadam, maintained by the state and well

Giant Cowboy, Chained to Car, Starts 5-Day Grind

Will Get $3000 if He Can Make Olds Six Falter in Non-Stop Contest Started in St. Louis.

Noon yesterday saw the start of one of th eomst unusual automobile contests ever held in St. Louis, when "Daredevil" Seeley, also known as the "Cowboy Samson," was chained and manacled to the steering wheel of an Oldsmobile touring car and began a five-day and night nonstop drive.

Under the terms of the contest, Seeley, who is a giant in stature and build, will be paid $3000 by the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds distributer, if the car falters under the strain. If the car completes the test successfully, Seeley will be paid $1 for every mile recorded on the speedometer.

Seeley was handcuffed and locked to the wheel by Philip H. Brockman, head of the Police Commission and president of the De Luxe Automobile Co.

He is to drive the highways of Southern Illinois by day and at night is to report to policemen at designated intervals. The car is not to stop, except when traffic signals require. The hood of the car was locked shut at the start, so that adjustments or repairs will be impossible. Gasoline and oil will be taken aboard on the fly from Roxana Petroleum Co. filling stations.

Seeley weighed 248 pounds when he began the long drive. He will live on a dit of milk and ggs during the test, and a doctor and nurse will be ready at all times if he falls under the strain.

A great crowd saw the start of the five-day run from the Postoffice. There was much comment on the dramatic nature of the contest.

AUTO PRODUCTION IN JULY, 258,000 CARS, IS INCREASE OVER JUNE

PRODUCTION of motor vehicles in July was 258,200, according to estimates based on shipping reports to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

This total is 5.3 per cent above June. As production the last few months has been adjusted to retail conditions this increase, the first since the decline started in April, is believed by leaders in the industry to reflect a steady strengthening in the business outlook, in accord with predictions made earlier in the season.

Trade reports from car and truck dealers prophesy favorable market conditions in the fall.

NEW OLDS SIX DRIVEAWAY HELD

Dealers Enthusiastic Over Arrival of New Models—82 Attend Meeting Here.

So great was their interest in the coming of the new Olds six models that 82 of the 102 dealers of the De Luxe Automobile Co., distributer of Olds cars in this district, came to St. Louis last week for the meeting at which the new cars were first shown in this territory

At the dealers' meeting, which was held at the Hotel Melbourne, Philip H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe company, specially stressed the strength of the Olds selling organization in this district with its 102 dealers and close affiliation with the giant General Motors Corporation and all its affiliated companies. The country, said Brockman, is financially sound and money is plentiful, so cars can be sold. He warned the dealers to watch their credits, discouraged small down payments and wild trading, and encouraged selling of accessories and emphasis on good service. Dealers, he said, should be active in the public affairs of their communities, especially in all traffic matters, for reduction of traffic accidents is vital to the expansion of the automobile industry.

R. S. Hudson, general manager for St. Louis, and A. S. Pierce of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, told the dealers of its policies and how they could use it to supplement their financing through their local banks. He especially suggested that they have the corporation handle their retail paper because of its collection facilities, remarking that the corporation will handle fully $325,000,000 worth of automobile paper this year.

Guy E. McCarthy, Olds factory representative traveling this district, said he never had been in a territory where the dealer had a better distributor to do business under,

George T. Willett, general manager of the De Luxe company, discussed changes in the policy of the company toward its dealers saying that thereafter there would be no more associate dealers, but that all were to be master dealers, if they could meet the requirements. Willett emphasized the necessity of giving good service and displaying the Olds service signs and emblems.

Brockman had a factory representative display and explain a bayonet locking radiator cap for which he has taken the distributership for all territory west of the Mississippi River.

Following the meeting, the dealers were guests at a banquet and then attended the Fashion Pageant in the Municipal Theater.

Some 60 of the new cars were on hand, and most of the dealers were able to drive them home.

The De Luxe Automobile Co. is displaying the new models in its new showrooms and headquarters at 3107-11 Locust street. Its used car business is being conducted at the old quarters at 3128 Locust street

GABRIEL MAKES SNUBBER FOR THE BALLOON TIRE

"With balloon tires coming into stronger favor constantly, snubbers are more than ever a necessity on cars," says Charles Kloske, manager of the Equipment Service Co., St. Louis Gabriel distributor. "Both the new Gabriel and the type for standard tires are designed to give the necessary free play which allows the tires to aboorb the small bumps on apparently smooth roads. A set of Gabriels on a car more than pays for itself in saving on tires, body shocks and wear and tear on chassis parts. It does this by minimizing the jolts. This is proved by the fact that virtually every manufacturer of quality automobiles includes Gabriels as standard equipment on at least some models, or drills frames for their installation."

AUTO PROSPECT SHOPS BY PLANE

Benton (Ill.) Man Brought to St. Louis by Air—Drives Chrysler Car Home.

The air mail service started recently by the United States Government aroused enthusiasm and speculation by the public. Some were optimistic and others were doubtful as to the success of the undertaking. The service is a success. Another development in modern methods came in Franklin County, Ill. It remained for the Harrison Motor Co. of Christopher to go a step further and lead the way in the adoption of new salesmanship methods.

Shopping by air is the newest departure from every-day practice. E. O. Shaw, civil engineer, of Benton, Ill., had been in the market for a Chrysler roadster for some time, but the demand for the late models delayed delivery of his new automobile to him.

The other morning the Chrysler agency at Christopher received word from the Ward Motor Co., distributers in St. Louis, that a roadster was available for their territory if they lost no time in laying claim to it. The Harrison company got Shaw on the telephone in short order.

"Be ready to go to St. Louis for that Chrysler roadster within an hour," he was told. "We're coming right over in an airplane, and will be in St. Louis before noon to drive the machine back."

Shaw was taken somewhat by surprise, but proved himself equal to the occasion. "I'm game," he said.

The airplane, with Shaw and Russell Harrison, a member of the firm, soon was skimming toward St. Louis.

Dr. Shaw and his new machine drew up at the curb in Benton about 5:30 the next morning, and soon a crowd of admirers was inspecting the Chrysler roadster.

A British car, the Jowett, is powered with a small horizontally opposed engine rated at 7 h. p., but has a four-seater body.

CURIOUS CROWDS...that ask
"How Does That 'One-Shot' Lubrication System Work?"

IT is not strange that owners of the 1925 Cleveland Six are being actually stopped on the street.

The fame of the "One-Shot" Lubrication System is spreading with wildfire speed.

You can hardly blame a man for wanting to ask a fellow motorist what results he is enjoying from the actual use of the biggest convenience feature ever offered the motoring public.

He has read of it. He's interested. And when he gets the facts—he gets an entirely new idea of what convenient motor car maintenance now means!

The "One-Shot" Lubrication System does away with the grimy, greasy task of oiling and greasing the car by hand. It is an exclusive, patented feature of the 1925 Cleveland Six.

Step On The Plunger

A plunger projects through the floor board near the driver's heel. By stepping on it, you lubricate every part of the car. Two seconds is all it takes!

Consider the convenience! You never use a grease gun or an oil can! You never have to go without your car for several hours while it is being lubricated. Whenever a squeak develops—down goes the plunger and the squeak is silenced. Whether you are moving or standing still, "One-Shot" works with perfect efficiency.

Then consider the economy! Because it's so simple and easy to keep all chassis parts correctly lubricated, you will never neglect that important operation. Thus the life of your car will be prolonged. And you will never have to pay the repair bills that such neglect invariably results in!

Mileage Motor

With its marvelous ease of maintenance, the 1925 Cleveland Six combines the masterly performance qualities that stamp the new Mileage Motor as one of the greatest power plants of the day.

Until you actually drive the 1925 Cleveland Six, it is almost inconceivable that a motor so economical, silent, and velvet-smooth is capable of such a brilliant performance range:

A speed well in excess of 60 miles an hour! An acceleration in high gear from 5 to 25 m.p.h. in less than 7 seconds! A high gear hill climbing capacity that is UNEQUALLED in any car of similar size or cost!

Owners are reporting mileages well above 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 250 miles to the quart of oil. And you will probably never touch the spark plugs from one year's end to another!

Four-Wheel Brakes—Balloon Tires

Go twice around the block in a 1925 Cleveland Six—choose any of the smartly handsome body types—and you will pronounce it the smoothest, easiest riding car you've ever been in!

Its extra long springs are scientifically set to eliminate side sway and pitching. The jars and jolts of ruts and other road irregularities are absorbed by genuine super-size balloon tires for which there is no extra charge on any model.

Exceptionally efficient four-wheel brakes of special Cleveland Six design are offered as optional equipment at a very moderate additional charge.

If you have not yet seen the 1925 Cleveland Six—you are neglecting to inspect the car that in a few short weeks has changed all existing ideas of what a moderately priced six should offer! Phone for a demonstration—choose the time to suit yourself! Arrange to get behind the wheel—and get a thrill.

WILLYS-KNIGHTS HAVE BALANCERS

British Device That Eliminates Vibration Now Made Part of Willys Engines.

Elimination of all motor vibration in its Willys-Knight models is achieved, according to Willys-Overland, by the addition of the Lanchester balancer, a British invention, as standard equipment in all future production. This device has been used with success on the other side of the Atlantic by leading motor-car builders. Willys-Overland has been able to obtain the American rights by arrangement with its inventor, Dr. F. W. Lanchester.

Ever since the first days of the multiple-cylinder motor car, automotive engineers have endeavored to conquer vibration. The Lanchester balancer is applied so as to counteract vibration at all motor speeds. It is a simple device of two small gears attached to the center main bearing of the motor, driven in opposite directions by a third and larger gear at twice engine speed. The third gear is part of the crankshaft. This rotation of the smaller gears, which are drilled in order to distribute their weight unevenly, gives equivalent, though opposite, movement to the mass of the pistons, neutralizing the vibration which these set up.

This device was first tested by Dr. Lanchester in the cars which bear his name President Willys placed Willys-Knight sedans, with Lanchester balancers, in the hands of such engineering authorities as Glenn Curtiss of the Curtiss Airplane Co., Hiram P. Maxim of the Maxim Silencer Co.; Maurice Olley, production engineer of the Rolls-Royce Co., and W. E. Best of the Remington Cash Register Co. After rigorous driving this quartet of experts heartily approved the new equipment. Maxim said that, in his opinion, the Willys-Knight was smoother than most of the six and eight cylinder cars on the road. From 15 to 50 miles an hour with no vibration was their experience, they said.

All Willys-Knight models leaving the Willys-Overland factory since Aug. 15 have been equipped with the Lanchester balancer and with 33x4.95 balloon tires on open models and 33x5.77 tires on closed cars.

In addition certain changes have been made in the timing of the sleeves, size of the ports and other engineering refinements, with the result that the power of the motor has been augmented.

BROCK TO PUT DUCO SERVICE STATION IN NEW BUILDING

R. H. Brock, president of the Brock Motor Car Co., states that due to the increase in refinishing autos with the Duco method he is compelled to move his paint shop from 4386-88-90 Olive street to his new building at 4416-18-20 Olive street, about Sept. 15. This building is practically new and is well lighted. He also has installed latest facilities for this work, such as air brush, ventilating fans and special refinishing room.

His paint-removing outfit, which was designed by Brock and Joseph F. Felkel, paint shop superintendent, is an improvement over the old method of removing paint. Paint can now be removed in less than one-half the time it formerly required. He now can refinish cars in less than half the time it took under the old method.

MOON NEW CAR SHOW ROOM MOVED TO NEW BUILDING

Carl Fritz.

The growth in popularity of Moon cars in St. Louis has necessitated the Moon Motor Car Co. moving its new car show room from Locust street to its large new building at 3114 Washington boulevard, according to announcement by Carl Fritz, city sales manager. The Locust street show room is being used for showing reconditioned cars.

"The old adage a prophet is not without honor save in his own country,' does not hold true in the case of Moon cars," says Fritz. This is proven by the new car registrations, recorded at Jefferson City and published monthly by the Missouri Motor List Co., which show Moon ranks ninth in number of cars sold in June. Since June, when the new 1925 models of Moon cars were announced, sales of Moon cars monthly have surpassed sales for the same period of last year. The Moon dealer organization in St. Louis includes: Igou Motor Co., 2918 North Grand boulevard; McNiece Motor Co., 5187 Delmar boulevard; Gamache Motor Co., 6828 Michigan avenue; Hoffman-Dicks Motor Co., 5711 Delmar boulevard; George C. Porter Motor Corp., Bellevue and Clayton road, and Grand Motor Co., 1645 South Grand boulevard.

NASH COMPANY IN 8 YEARS HAS PRODUCED 250,000 CARS

KENOSHA, Wis., Aug. 23.—The Nash Motors Co. has just celebrated its eighth anniversary, following successful introduction of two entirely new lines of six-cylinder cars. Reviewing the record of the company, President C. W. Nash said; "Our output the first 15 months was 12,179 cars and trucks, as contrasted with a production the eighth year of close to 57,000. Our first year we had on our books 3125 men, while today there are nearly 7200 men employed. In 1916 one plant was occupied with an area of approximately 103 acres and with 1,353,000 square feet of floor space under roof. Today three great plants are necessary to cope with the growing demand for Nash cars. These include the 'Advanced Six' plant at Kenosha, the 'Special Six' plant at Milwaukee and the Seaman company plant at Milwaukee, one-half interest in which is owned by the Nash Motors Co. and which is exclusively devoted to fabrication of Nash enclosed bodies.

"The first financial statement of the Nash Motors Co. showed total resources of $7,000,000, while today the figure has swelled to nearly $42,000,000. In these eight years there have been built more than 250,000 Nash cars and trucks, with an aggregate value in excess of $210,000,000. In respect to liquid financial condition, Nash now leads all automobile companies, for an analysis shows that the Nash ratio of current assets to total assets is 76-21 100 per cent, while Ford, the next highest, has 64-42 100 per cent."

NEWEST OAKLAND IS LANDAU SEDAN

Has Balloon Tires and Four-Wheel Brakes With Disc Wheels.

A new model of the Oakland—the landau sedan—is announced by the Oakland Motor Car Co. and the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., the St. Louis distributer. The new car combines the individual appearance of the landau type with the serviceability of the sedan. It is finished in Buckingham gray with red striping, special plush mohair upholstery to match, nickel trimmings and black fenders, with double bar bumpers in front, fender guards at the rear, nickeled head and cowl lamps and aluminum running board apron shields. The new Fisher one-piece ventilating windshield is a feature.

The car is equipped with balloon tires, has Oakland duco finish, mechanical four-wheel brakes, all controls centralized on the steering column, automatic spark control and is powered by the Oakland six-cylinder L-head engine.

Like all of the Oakland six line, it has five disc steel wheels as standard equipment, and is fitted with four 31x4.95 balloon tires.

LINCOLN IS NEWEST SHOCK ABSORBER FOR BALLOON TIRE

The Lincoln Products Co. of Chicago has built a new shock absorber to neutralize or eliminate the added rebound of balloon tires due to increased road contact. This new shock absorber is so designed that it functions in the same way as the high-pressure shock absorber while negotiating irregularities, with the when the extreme bounds occur, the new feature, the secondary springs, comes into izing these extreme same way that it takes more moderate rebounds.

The combination of pecially designed shock and balloon tires produce highest degree of driving

Just a year has elapsed since the first True Blue Oakland 6-54 saw the light of a salesroom.

But, back of it were years of six-cylinder experience. Oakland had built a lot of sixes before this True Blue Six came off the production line.

And back of it were nearly three years of sound engineering and tests directed to the ambition of producing the best light six that ever nosed its radiator into traffic.

No ordinary six would do—plenty of them already!

The engineering resources of Oakland and General Motors had but one requirement placed on them—leadership!

That of former Oakland design which was good was accepted. And the most advanced engineering thought was then added, to gain a result beyond comparison in the moderate-weight six-cylinder field.

Is it any wonder that the True Blue Oakland has been a success in the hands of True Blue Owners on every road in America? Or that Oakland sales have leaped to new high levels—over forty thousand True Blue Cars delivered in the first twelve months?

A year in advance of its field a year ago—refinements have been added from time to time to keep it so. You can see the whole roll-call of Oakland advanced features elsewhere in this advertisement.

The True Blue Oakland fulfills the Oakland determination to give Oakland owners one of the world's very finest motor cars—at a very modest price.

If you intend to spend around a thousand dollars for a motor car—see and drive the Oakland before you decide.

CHARMING DRY WEATHER TOUR AND GOOD OPTION

banked at the curves, some of which, howver, are sharp enough to call for cautious approach. About 10 miles from Washington the road turns to good, fast gravel, and presently joins Highway No. 12 the main south-of-the-river highway from St. Louis to Kansas City.

This part of No. 12 ranged from bumpy through fair to very good. But at every point it is vastly improved over the old highway as it was before the state began to remake it a year or so ago. The writer, recalling one Sunday when his car wallowed and bumped and strained at seven to eight miles an hour over this road, falling into holes and climbing out of them only to drop into worse ones, voted the state entitled to a medal for the improvement.

The road continues pretty all the way, and offers an especially lovely view from the high ridge after passing Gray's Summit. At the county line the concrete pavement is encountered and permits a smooth, swift trip into St. Louis, except that one still must detour in Maplewood, most drivers swinging left into North and South road and then right into Clayton road.

Can Make Any-Weather Trip.

After a rain, Highway No. 30 beyond Cedar Hill is not advisable because of the dirt stretch. But Gravois road is good all the way to Cedar Hill after any rain, and then is somewhat rough, but still good enough, from Cedar Hill to Morse's Mill.

One can always run out the Manchester road and to Washington, then swing over to Union and to Moselle, returning to Union and back over No. 12 and the Manchester road. This will make about a 130-mile trip, mostly on the ridges and so pleasant on hot days and offering any number of pretty views.

Real Road Ability.

The performance of the Jewett, which was driven by W. T. Sapp of the Newell Motor Car Co., was astonishingly good. Equipped with full balloon tires and snubbers, it made nothing of such rough spots as were encountered, proving yet again that balloons add probably 50 per cent in riding comfort, and have no appreciable effect upon engine performance. It proved ability to run long distances at 40 to 45 miles an hour without heating or fussing in the least degree. In fact, its performance warranted saying it could hold that pace all day.

On one long hill, nearly as formidable as Seckman Hill on the De Soto road, it was forced by a ditch across the road to slow to 10 miles an hour, but did not die off as was to be expected, instead continuing sturdily along in high to the top at that speed, thus showing great reserve power. The way the car pulled in high those miles of mud between Cedar Hill and the Meramec River, and the way it sauntered in high up that long hill out of Gray's Summit, dropping to 10 miles an hour and picking up again whenever the driver stepped on it, won the writer's admiration.

As a road car it proved exceptional ability to make time because it could maintain and increase high speed all the way up the long, hard hills that ordinarily so cut down a day's mileage. The acceleration for starting and from 20 to 30 miles an hour and from 30 to 40 miles an hour was startlingly rapid.

PARKING CARS ON ROADS CONDEMNED AS PUBLIC NUISANCE

ing safely, legislation must step in.

"It is hoped that this appeal to the motorist, however, will obviate the necessity for adding another law to the already overcrowded statutes," Mr. Henry explains. "If each motorist would act upon the recommendations of the A. A. A. board, the highways would be safer for all who use them and the nuisance of unsafe parking would be minimized."

The following suggestions are offered by the A. A. A.:

"Do not seek main highways for picnic purposes. Use the secondary roads, where there are plenty of opportunities for parking off the road.

"In event of puncture, try to get the car as far off the traveled portion of the road as possible before changing the tire, and in no case stop on a curve or near the top of a hill.

"Never stop opposite a car that has parked along the road. If you want to ask your way, stop your car at least 150 feet beyond and walk back to inquire.

"You are not safe sitting in your car while it is parked on a highway. Furthermore, you are a source of danger to those who are obliged to turn out to pass you.

"If you turn into a blind driveway to park, have the back of the car to the main road. When your car is facing the road, motorists may think you are just driving into the road. They may make sudden stops before discovering that your car is not in motion, and cars following them may be thrown into a series of rear-end collisions.

"Parking a car at night on a main highway is doubly dangerous. You never know what minute your tail light may burn out."

YELLOWSTONE TRAIL OFFERS INTERESTING PACIFIC COAST TRIP

is traveled here, built by co-operation of Idaho, the United States Forest Reserve and Shoshone and Kootenai counties. From Fourth of July canyon the road leads to Coeur d'Alene city, dropping rapidly to the valley.

The road from Coeur d'Alene to Spokane closely follows the Apple Way, and is a beautiful drive at any season. From Spokane the trail turns south to Rosalia, and in a southerly direction to Colfax, then southwesterly to Dayton, thence to Walla Walla, through one of America's greatest wheat belts. Thence the trail follows the Snake River to its confluence with the Columbia, crossing the Snake near Pasco over a new steel bridge.

At Pasco the Columbia River is crossed by a new steel bridge to Kennewick, and the trail hits the Yakima River, following the valley through Yakima. All this highway is included in the highway program of Washington.

From Yakima the trail starts the climb of the Cascades over a fine highway to Ellensburg, still following the river.

From Ellensburg the climb of the Cascades begin in earnest, the trail going through Snoqualmie Pass. The road on the east slope is good. Most of this road is like going through a great forest, and the climb is almost unnoticeable to the eye, though the engine feels it. It is not hard, however, and the glide down the west slope is fine, then across the level of Western Washington on a fine road to Seattle.

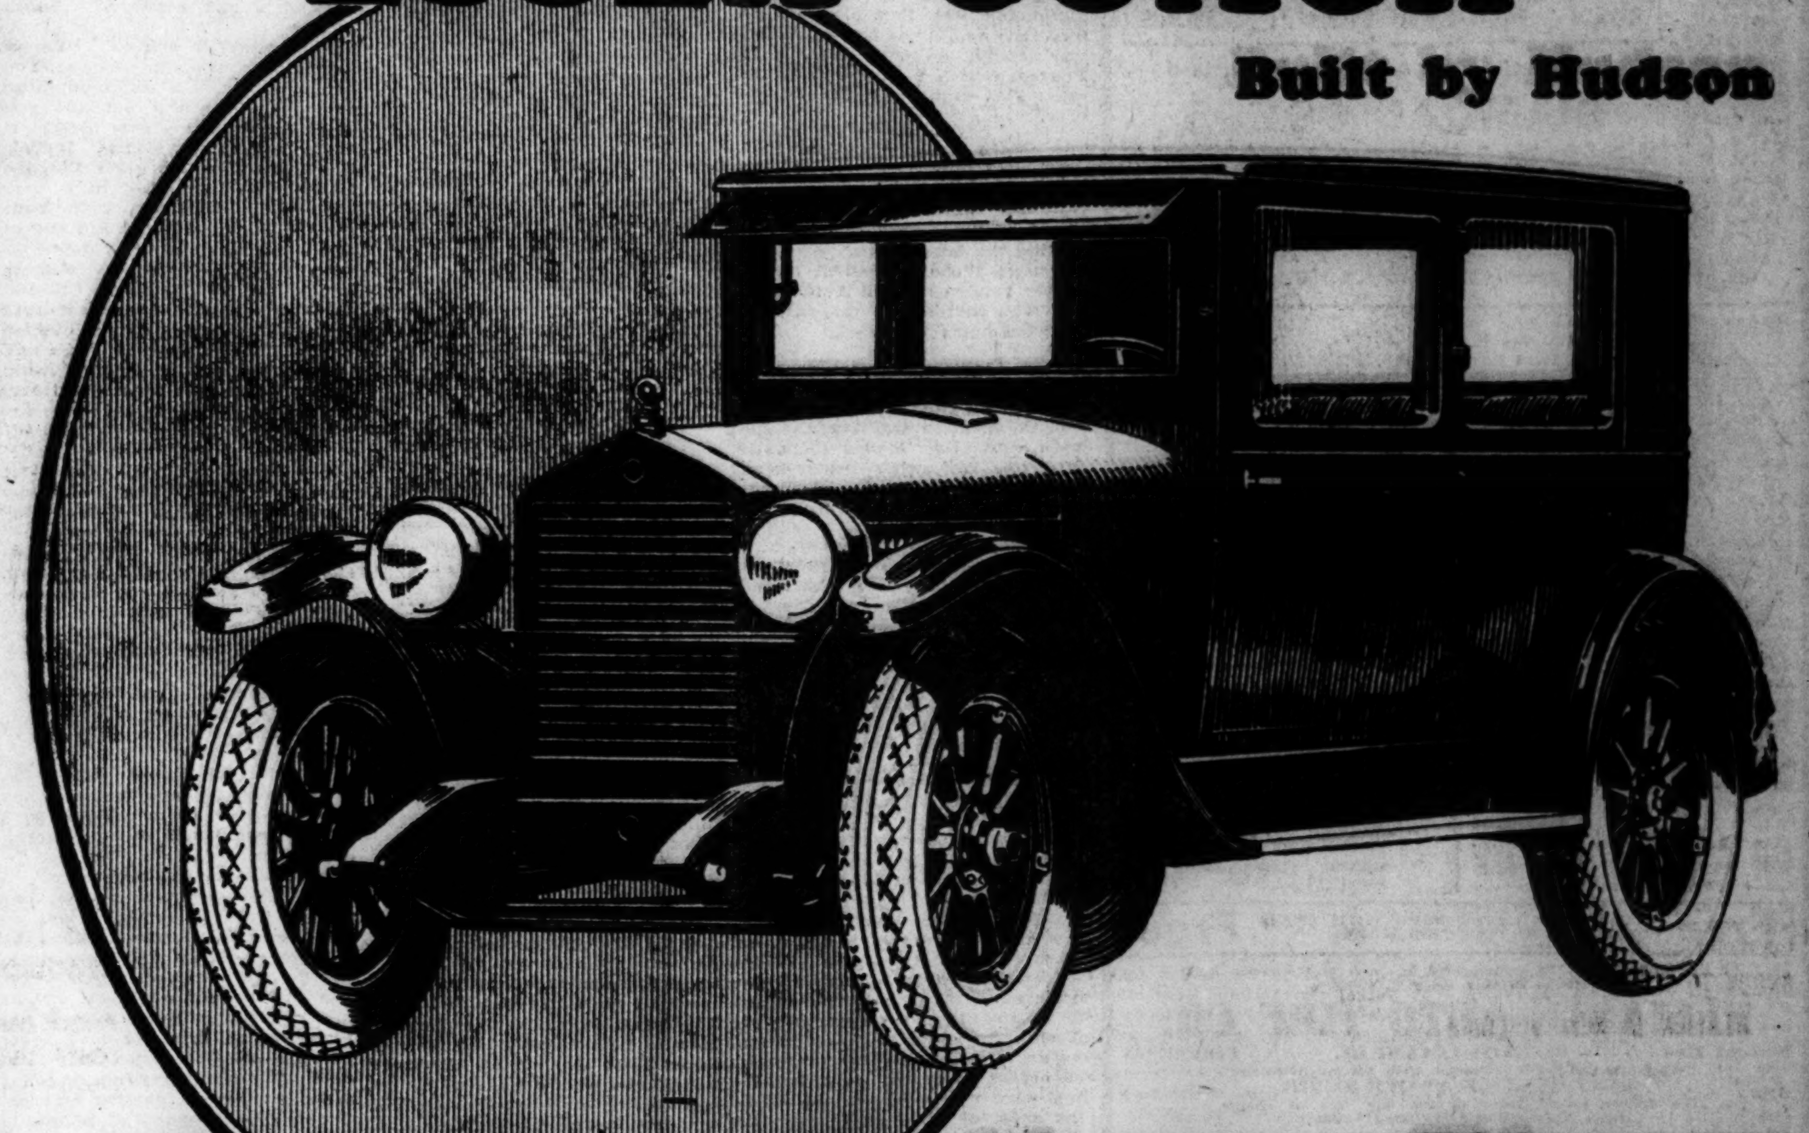
ESSEX COACH

Built by Hudson



Genuine Balloon Tires

Standard Equipment

The outstanding buying choice this year is "Closed Car Comforts at Open Car Cost." The Coach alone provides them. It is exclusive to Hudson and Essex. Everyone knows it gives highest closed car value. And because no other type or car shares its position it is the largest selling 6-cylinder closed car in the world.

Genuine Balloon Tires Enhance World's Greatest Value

Naturally when balloon tires had established their superiority Hudson and Essex would adopt them. They are now standard equipment. They add an even greater measure of riding ease, steadiness and good looks to the notable values of the Coach.

In workmanship, materials and design both Hudson and Essex are of one quality—built in the same factories, under the same patents. Your choice between them will rest solely on the price you want to pay. You see the Coach everywhere in increasing numbers. Everyone wants closed car comforts. They will no longer accept half-utility when all-year usefulness and comforts cost no more in the Coach. Consider how the growing trend to closed cars affects resale values. The diminishing demand for open cars means far faster depreciation in that type. As the wanted type, the Coach maintains exceptionally high resale value.

Evidence of Good Times Coming.

AN INDICATION that the outlook for the automobile industry is steadily growing better is the fact that, because of increased activity of car factories, the production schedule of the Detroit plant of the Continental Motors Corp. for September is heavier than for August. "Shipments in August from our Detroit plant," says W. R. Angell, vice president of the company, "will be within 10 per cent of our peak month. Automobile manufacturers are taking a more optimistic view than a few weeks ago, and indications point to a very satisfactory business for the industry this fall."

Directors Meet.

The directors of the Associated Tire Dealers' Association met Thursday at the office of the B. & K. Tire Co. They discussed important matters to go before the members at the next regular meeting.

Wins Economy Run Second Time.

A Hupmobile, for the second consecutive year, won the competitive fuel economy test run prize offered by the Auto Club of Latvia, near Riga, according to cable advices to the Hupp Motor Car Corporation. The field this year comprised 18 American and European cars. The Hupmobile won first prize for its own class and for all classes. A Fiat was second, a Chevrolet third, a Peugeot fourth, a Protos fifth, another Fiat sixth and a Berliet seventh.

Back From Vacation.

Edward Weber, head of the Weber Motor Car Co., has returned from a vacation trip to Wisconsin. Henry Weber is in Wisconsin now, visiting the lake region.

George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., who motored to Colorado, is expected home this week.

Tire Company Official Here.

W. C. McTamany, vice president of the Brunswick Tire Corp., of Akron, O., spent several days the last week with the Becker-Lehmann Sales Co., Brunswick dealer here. He reported finding business conditions good.

Long Trip in a 1915 Car.

Two youths from New York have just driven a 1915 Reo, which had gone 125,000 miles when they bought it, to Los Angeles via St. Louis, Denver and Salt Lake City and Seattle. The trip thus far has covered 65000 miles in 23 days. The car now has a total mileage of 139,725. They plan to drive back to New York.

Builds as Dealers Order.

In a letter to Gardner distributers and dealers, W. H. Yeldell, secretary in charge of sales and advertising for the Gardner Motor Co., says July production was hundreds of cars behind orders and that it will be impossible to make immediate shipments, in the strict sense of the word, for some time to come. "To guard against our dealers becoming overstocked, and to assure the car-buyer bright, fresh, new cars to choose from, we are building Gardner cars only as orders come in," says Yeldell. "In other words, we are not building a lot of cars and forcing the dealer to push himself to the limit to sell them, but are building only the actual number of cars and the particular models specified by the dealer in orders to us. So orders must be put in early."

Route to Dixon, Ill.

Replying to a query as to the best route to Dixon, Ill., the route which has been generally recommended from St. Louis is to follow the Chicago route over the McKinley bridge, Broadway in Venice to Madison avenue, following No. 4 markers through Granite City to Mitchell, turning right on concrete to Edwardsville, Staunton, Carlinville, Springfield, Peoria to La Salle (259 miles from St. Louis), then north on No. 2 detour to Mendota and Franklin Grove, then west on Lincoln Highway concrete to Dixon.

Ozark Trail Pilgrimage.

A nuumber of members of the Ozark Trail Association departed from Webster Groves Friday for a motor trip over the trail to Springfield, Joplin and other Missouri and Oklahoma cities to Duncan, Ok., where the convention of the Trail is to be held. They planned stops at Houston, Springfield and Neosho, and on the return trip were to visit Webb City. Among those who went was Judge Sam Hodgdon.

Making Tour for Auto Club.

Matt F. Morse, manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, left Thursday for Cape Girardeau, Springfield, Joplin and other Missouri cities to stir up interest in the club's campaign for members and to make a general inspection of branches and road conditions. He was accompanied by George Drummond, head of the club's road bureau. The week before he made a trip to Hannibal and Macon in the interest of the membership campaign.

Riefling Employes' Picnic.

The employes of the Riefling Automobile Co. held their annual picnic last Sunday on the Meramec River at Fenton. They paraded the city and then went in 78 cars to the picnic grounds, where they had the usual water sports and games. The "Greaseballs" beat the "Pencil Pushers" at baseball, 3 to 2.

Hydraulic Brake Contract.

The Wagner Electric Corporation has just entered into a contract with the Hydraulic Brake Co., holding corporation owning and controlling the so-called "Lockheed" patents on hydraulic brakes for automobiles. The chain of service stations operated by the Wagner company throughout the United States and Canada will become the national service organization of the Hydraulic Brake Co. The contract also provides that the Wagner company will be the sole licensee of the Hydraulic company for the manufacture of replacing parts for sale to the public, and all of these parts will be manufactured in St. Louis and nationally distributed through the Wagner Corporation's stations. The Wagner Corporation also has been licensed to manufacture "Lockheed" equipment for initial installation on new cars, and has closed contracts with a number of automobile manufacturers, among them the Moon company of St. Louis.

Used Car Showroom Opened.

A "quality used car showroom" was opened Sunday at 2936 Locust street by the Hudson-Roberts Motor Co., of 23 South Meramec avenue, Clayton. The showroom will feature closed cars at open car cost. W. H. Lofland, who has been with the St. Louis Motor Car Co. for the last few years, has charge of the new Hudson-Roberts used car department.

100 Miles in High at 4 M. P. H.

George Stokes, veteran pedestrian, failed on his sixty-ninth birthday, Aug. 9, to break the walking record of 21 hours and 56 minutes from Milwaukee to Chicago, 100 miles, now held by Henry Schmell. The start was made at 2 p. m. on the 8th and exactly 24 hours later Stokes had covered 80.3 miles at an average speed of 3.3 miles per hour, being forced to give up because of indigestion. He finished the trip to Chicago in an automobile.

Stokes' attempt was really a contest between him as a long distance walker and an automobile locked in high gear which was to keep up with, but not pass the walker. The car, which was a 1925 Buick standard six, performed the difficult task of running in high gear all the way at the average speed of 3.3 miles per hour. After Stokes dropped out, the car continued on its way, arriving at Logan Square, Chicago, with an average speed of 4 miles per hour for the entire distance.

NEW SHOCK ABSORBER BROUGHT OUT FOR FORDS

Robert H. Hassler, Inc., of Indianapolis, pioneer manufacturers of spring control devices for small cars and friction type absorbers for large cars, have announced a new Hassler rebound check and shock absorber for Ford cars. One type now fits any Ford car.

The new Hassler departs somewhat from previous Hassler engineering, except that basic Hassler principles remain unaltered. A more perfect control of the rebound has been affected.

The new Hassler has been considerably changed in appearance. The whole designs show a marked tendency toward compactness and unobtrusiveness. This is gained through design of the new spring members of the shock absorber.

Trained factory men have hung up installation records considerably under half an hour and ordinary mechanics, make an installation in less than an hour. Practically no change is made in the height of the Ford body.

The Newest Advancement In Motoring Comfort

The new Gabriel Balloon-Type Snubbers are the first and only means that scientifically control the greater upthrow and increased spring action which occur when balloon and low-pressure tires encounter large bumps.

And they are the first and only device that have the necessary free play to allow tires and springs to absorb small bumps.

They are entirely new in principle—scientifically designed to provide both the free play and the greater control which balloon and low-pressure tires must have.

Order them now. We can install them quickly, and without alteration on your car.

The new Gabriel Balloon-Type Snubbers are designed and built particularly for balloon and low-pressure tires. Specify this new balloon-type snubber in order to be sure that you get it on your car with balloon tires and in snubber shipments.

John Smith and His Car

I WAS rather amused at Smith the evening before we started on our automobile vacation. All motorists have come to regard "that trip" as the great event of the year, but Smith was about to have his first taste of a real vacation and so he could grow enthusiastic over events only as they came along. The few preparations required for a motor trip was the first thing that impressed him.

"If we were going by train," he said, "I'd have to buy the tickets, phone for an expressman, call a taxi, tip a half-dozen porters and then run the risk of missing the train."

"Your car goes any time," I replied. "Hop in when you get ready. Take your time or hurry, just as you please. Smith, you're going to find traveling by motor a new delight."

"And a new expense," Smith laughed.

"Expense?" I asked. "You're taking four people in your car. You expect to travel a thousand miles at least. Figure it out and you will find that this new delight is going to be a new saving. Including tips, parlor car seats and one thing or another the train fare would total more than $150. Your gas will cost you about $20 and at 2 cents a mile your tire depreciation will cost another $20. Storage for the car for two weeks will add $14 more. Allow a safety margin for something that might happen to the car and your expenses will be only about half what it would cost you and your family to travel by rail."

"But I wouldn't travel a thousand miles if we went by rail," Smith explained. "We would just ride up to the mountains and stay there for the balance of the vacation instead of moving around."

"Then you would miss a thousand things of interest," I retorted. "I think I ought to be in a position to know; I've taken vacations on both plans. I am quite sure you would prefer it every time even if a motoring vacation did cost more than the old-fashioned kind."

Smith's wife interrupted to explain something which seemed to worry her.

"Hadn't you better phone the garage man to have the car filled with gas when we're going on such a long trip?" she asked, addressing Smith.

"That's hardly necessary," I said. "Five gallons will drive your car 75 miles and you'll pass no less than 100 filling stations on the way. Every one-horse town has its garage and repair shop. Some of these days there will be a telephone box every mile of the highways, so that you need never worry about being stranded. But even with ordinary roads of today there is always a passing motorist to carry your message of distress to the repair man in the nearest town. If you think this 1000-mile tour is going to take you into the wilds of the world you are quite mistaken. The roads are heavily traveled by a population that has discovered the full value of the motor car."

Smith had a "pleasant" thought. "Suppose it rains tomorrow," he said dolefully.

"Your train goes any time," I replied. "Wait until it stops raining. You will have lost nothing but a little time, which you can very easily make up later. But what's to prevent you from going regardless of the weather. Drive carefully and take your time. It isn't half as unpleasant as most people imagine. And what's more the chances are that the sun is shining 30 or 40 miles from home. You'll motor right out of the rain into the sunshine."

But dawn of the next day brought nothing but sunshine. It was one of those days when enthusiastic men insist upon walking to work and when lucky men go motoring to vacation land. Smith had always thought of cities as being so many minutes apart from each other. But the alluring road maps changed the towns and cities into the interesting places they really are.

"Looks like this is going to be the best vacation ever," Smith exclaimed, taking a second glance at his oil gauge.

"That's because it will be a real one," I replied. "Vacations like these were not known 25 years ago. The average man spent two weeks with his family at some seaside or mountain resort, but with the automobile two weeks can be stretched to seem like two months. As a matter of fact, a motor car enables one to have a perpetual vacation."

"I'll say so," Smith agreed, impatient to crank the engine. "When I bought this car I imagined I was 'blowing' myself just to be modern. I wanted to be sporty, up to date. But I guess its turning out to be a 10 per cent investment. Come on, let's go!"

RAD

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR DEFENSE DAY PROGRAM

Broadcatsing of General Pershing's Speech Will Be Outstanding Event.

Radio has been called in to aid the War Department in its first national defense test. The announcement of the preliminary plan brought considerable comment from those disposed to belittle the efforts of the Government to try out its plans for mobilization in the event of an emergency, but radio will explain its objects to all who care to listen on Defense day.

On the evening of Sept. 12 Gen. Pershing will address probably the largest audience which ever listened in. Although no official announcement has been made by the War Department, it is understood that even more broadcasting stations than handled the political conventions or the recent notification addresses will be linked together and it is assumed that this chain will make radio reception of Pershing's utterances available in practically every section and community of the country. Gen. Pershing will talk from the War Department at 9:30 p. m., Eastern time. Literally millions will listen to his farewell address to the army on the subject of national defense. This will be the second address of this sort, as Gen. Pershing, who soon retires, is the only ranking army officer to wear the mantle of General of the Armies, laid down by Washington at Rocky Point, near Princeton, N. J., in 1783. Washington's address reached the ears of only a few officers and troops, whereas the remarks coincident with the retirement of our Second General of the Armies will reach millions, due to the present development of radio broadcasting aided by telephony.

Facilities combining radio and telephony will make it possible for every member of the regular army, and probably all National Guard forces to hear the words of their chief, not counting reserve officers and men and countless patriotic citizens who choose to listen in. If the army radio net, which reaches every post and station is hooked in with the chain of broadcasters practically every soldier on duty will have an opportunity to receive Gen. Pershing's message.

The use of radio in connection with national defense is not surprising, but it is reassuring to realize that the man-power of the country can be called to service by means of a single broadcast, literally springing to arms in a single night. A few years ago this would not have been possible. When it is considered that the voice of the commander in chief, his every word and accent may be projected into space covering the whole country from coast to coast, the real value of radio broadcasting as an asset in defensive mobilization is realized. Never before has a defense test of the organized military forces of the country been attempted and never before was a single broadcast planned of so far-reaching a character. Thirteen stations carried the voices from the political conventions and later the utterances of the two candidates, as far west as Kansas City, but it is possible that many more stations, including far western and even Cuban broadcasters may be hooked up together.

In terms of national mobilization this assures the messages reaching every city, village and even the farms. Those in the regular service will know where to report locally if not assembled, and reserve officers on Sept. 12 know how to proceed with the recruiting of their units, reporting to their superior officers in the nine corps areas. The real purpose of this test, according to Gen. Pershing, is not to assemble or recruit an army, but solely "a demonstration that it is necessary to have some preliminary organization in order to avoid the danger of delay if war comes." For this reason he will speak to the soldiers and patriots of the country on Sept. 12, the anniversary of the victory of the American arms at San Mihiel.

MANILA TO HAVE BROADCASTING

Project Under Consideration by Communication Company.

At a recent meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce at Manila, the establishment of a large broadcasting station by the Radio Communication Co. of Hongkong was discussed, according to a report from Assistant Trade Commissioner C. F. Goodhue. This company has already obtained grants from the Portuguese Government for the erection of a station in Hongkong and one in Shanghai. It is expected that if such a station is established in Manila, regular programs or music will be broadcast several times a week. Such a project was contemplated by the company about a year ago, but that company decided that the time was not ripe and the plans fell through. If the present project is carried out it may result in a considerable increase in the sale of radio apparatus throughout the islands.

Previously NRR, Annapolis, has been sending official dispatches throughout the islands.

The announcement of the preliminary plan brought considerable comment from those disposed to belittle the efforts of the Government to try out its plans for mobilization in the event of an emergency, but radio will explain its objects to all who care to listen on Defense day.

On the evening of Sept. 12 Gen. Pershing will address probably the largest audience which ever listened in. Although no official announcement has been made by the War Department, it is understood that even more broadcasting stations than handled the political conventions or the recent notification addresses will be linked together and it is assumed that this chain will make radio reception of Pershing's utterances available in practically every section and community of the country. Gen. Pershing will talk from the War Department at 9:30 p. m., Eastern time. Literally millions will listen to his farewell address to the army on the subject of national defense. This will be the second address of this sort, as Gen. Pershing, who soon retires, is the only ranking army officer to wear the mantle of General of the Armies, laid down by Washington at Rocky Point, near Princeton, N. J., in 1783. Washington's address reached the ears of only a few officers and troops, whereas the remarks coincident with the retirement of our Second General of the Armies will reach millions, due to the present development of radio broadcasting aided by telephony.

Facilities combining radio and telephony will make it possible for every member of the regular army, and probably all National Guard forces to hear the words of their chief, not counting reserve officers and men and countless patriotic citizens who choose to listen in. If the army radio net, which reaches every post and station is hooked in with the chain of broadcasters practically every soldier on duty will have an opportunity to receive Gen. Pershing's message.

The use of radio in connection with national defense is not surprising, but it is reassuring to realize that the man-power of the country can be called to service by means of a single broadcast, literally springing to arms in a single night. A few years ago this would not have been possible. When it is considered that the voice of the commander in chief, his every word and accent may be projected into space covering the whole country from coast to coast, the real value of radio broadcasting as an asset in defensive mobilization is realized. Never before has a defense test of the organized military forces of the country been attempted and never before was a single broadcast planned of so far-reaching a character. Thirteen stations carried the voices from the political conventions and later the utterances of the two candidates, as far west as Kansas City, but it is possible that many more stations, including far western and even Cuban broadcasters may be hooked up together.

In terms of national mobilization this assures the messages reaching every city, village and even the farms. Those in the regular service know where to report locally if not assembled, and reserve officers on Sept. 12 know how to proceed with the recruiting of their units, reporting to their superior officers in the nine corps areas. The real purpose of this test, according to Gen. Pershing, is not to assemble or recruit an army, but solely "a demonstration to the American people that it is necessary to have some preliminary organization in order to avoid the danger of delay if war comes." For this reason he will speak to the soldiers and patriots of the country on Sept. 12, the anniversary of the victory of the American arms at San Mihiel.

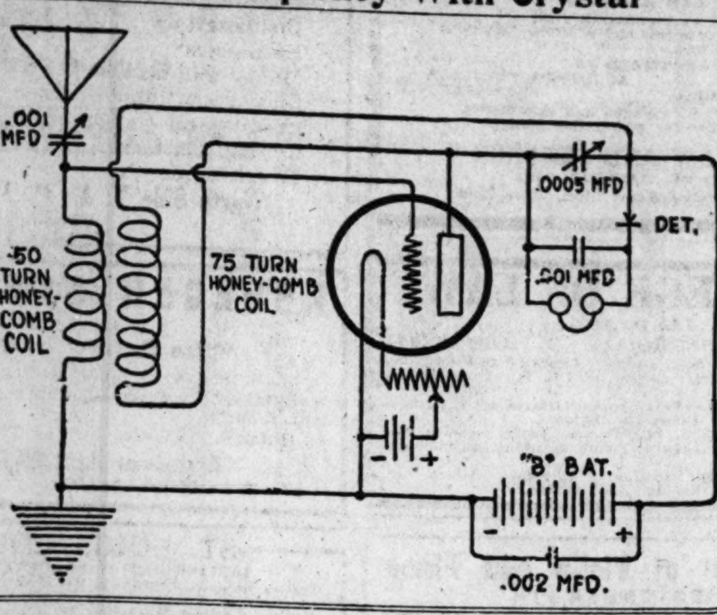
Project Under Consideration by Communication Company.

At a recent meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce at Manila, the establishment of a large broadcasting station by the Radio Communication Co. of Hongkong was discussed, according to a report from Assistant Trade Commissioner C. P. Goodhue. This company has already obtained grants from the Portuguese Government for the erection of a station in Hongkong and one in Shanghai. It is expected that if such a station is erected in Manila, regular programs of music will be broadcast several times a week. Such a project was contemplated by an American firm about a year ago, but that company decided that the time was not ripe and the plans fell through. If the present project is carried out it should result in a considerable increase in the sale of radio apparatus. Previously NSS, Annapolis, has been sending official dispatches throughout the islands.

Radio Frequency With Crystal



Navy Experimenting With Short Wave Transmitters

Successful Day and Night Tests Are Proving the Value of High Frequency and Low Power.

Radio experts of the navy have achieved phenomenal results with high-frequency (short-wave) transmitters operating on approximately 3000 kilocycles.

Commenting on regular tests, Dr. A. H. Taylor, superintendent of radio at the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., said:

"The American Radio Relay League is co-operating with us in the tests we are making, and we are receiving reports from observers in the following states: Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Oregon and California.

We are also receiving reports from Canada regularly and occasionally from Porto Rico. We have had reports from Brazil, France, Holland and England and hope for some from other countries before long.

What we are attempting to do is get a line on the seasonal variation of transmission and on the reliable range which can be obtained with a given amount of power. It will take considerable time, perhaps another year, to conclude these experiments and we are now in no position to make final statements as to what can or cannot be done. We are simply collecting a large amount of data, increasing the number of observers from day to day and relying very largely on the co-operation of American amateurs.

One of the most interesting things about this work is that it does not in any way interfere with broadcast listeners, as it would be impossible for any of them to be aware of it when we are using our most powerful transmitters. That is because our sets all operate on pure CW with a very steady pure wave, free of those irregularities which are so prone to cause interference in broadcast receivers. The wave length is so far removed from the broadcast band that it is not possible for such receivers to pick up our signals, even if they desired to do so."

Further observations indicate that high-frequency transmission fades less in darkness than daylight. In a report to the Navy Department, Dr. Taylor writes as follows:

"This laboratory has recently been carrying on extensive tests, both daylight and after dark, at frequencies between 1500 and 3000 kilocycles. Long distance so-called "freak" transmission after dark on high frequencies is no new thing, and has hitherto been of little interest to the naval service because of its utter unreliability, but in recent years the advent of tube transmitter for high frequencies permitting CW reception, and the enormous improvements that have been made in receivers for high frequencies, puts the matter in a somewhat different light. Furthermore, experimental work done by the Westinghouse company, by the Bureau of Standards, and by numerous amateur experimenters, has shown that if the frequency is high enough, some apparently new phenomena of transmissions take place and the intensity of signals apparently does not in any way follow the well-known Austin-Cohen transmission formula. Amateurs have succeeded in bridging almost unbelievable distances, using frequencies in the neighborhood of 3000 kilocycles.

"The Westinghouse company has been experimenting for several years with these frequencies and information is at hand that they have discovered that great distances can be regularly bridged with very small amounts of power if the frequency is high enough. They found, for instance, working between Pittsburg and Cleveland, that at 3000 kilocycles transmission was possible by daylight, but better after dark. On the other hand, at 3500 kilocycles (80 meters), the transmission was actually better by daylight than after dark. They also found a remarkably lesser degree of fading and swinging of signals on these high frequencies than on those well known in the amateur range within 1500 kilocycles. They further found very much less in the way of atmospheric disturbances, thus permitting very high amplifications in the receiver.

"These experiments have been more or less borne out by the tests which this laboratory has made on the intrafleet transmitter. It has been comparatively easy to work as far west as Detroit in the daytime and as far north as Connecticut. As a matter of fact, a considerable number of stations within a radius of several miles have been comfortably communicated with both by daylight and after dark. Until recently, the shortest wave length which this transmitter reached was 110 meters (2726 kilocycles). On this frequency considerable fading had been observed both by daylight and after dark, but it is not as pronounced as it is on somewhat lower frequencies. This transmitter can readily be modified to go down to short waves or higher frequencies, and further experiments in this laboratory will be made. Successful tests with 54 meters have also been made.

"It is well known that other countries, particularly France and England, are prosecuting such investigations very actively. It is reported that entirely satisfactory daylight transmission between Paris and Nice has been obtained on a wave length of 56 meters, which is about 5500 kilocycles. It is well known that Marconi has succeeded in bridging considerable distances in the neighborhood of 100 miles by telephone at wave length of 15 meters, or a frequency of 20,000 kilocycles. This he did with the aid of reflectors, which brings up the point that if the wave length is short enough, or the frequencies high enough, it is possible to build a sort of reflecting screen of parabolic shape which is not too large and cumbersome, and will confine the energy to a considerably smaller beam. This obviously permits small power to be used with remarkable efficiency.

"The 100-meter transmitter of the Westinghouse Co. at their Springfield works is said to have been heard in Denver (telegraphic transmission) without the aid of antenna or ground. The Navy intrafleet transmitter has been copied in Baltimore on its lowest power with only a few hundredths ampere in its antenna, also without the use of antenna or ground. The intrinsic radiation on these short waves is extremely high.

"There is a field of investigation here which, in the opinion of the laboratory, should be entered by the naval service to keep abreast of other countries. The number of possible channels of communication at these very high frequencies is almost infinite theoretically, and is very large pravtically."

For the Notebook.

Erect the antenna so that it will not be affected by storms.

When charging a storage battery, put in a little pure distilled water.

A receiving aerial does not require so much insulation as a transmitting one.

Never allow hot solder to come in contact with minerals used in crystal sets.

Receiving sets working without an antenna pick up the energy through the coils, wiring and ground wire.

Managanin, an alloy wire, containing 12 per cent manganese, 4 per cent nickel and 84 per cent copper, is usually used in resistance coils.

If signals are mushy and stations hard to get, reverse the leads on the grid coil.

Microphonic noises, which produce clicks and scraping sounds, are caused by loose contacts. They may occur in battery connections, in vacuum tube sockets, or in rheostats.

TUBE AMPLIFIER FOR A CRYSTAL DETECTOR

Increases Range and Volume; Few Parts Required for Assembly.

This circuit is suggested for the benefit of the enthusiast who has graduated from the crystal detector period and now uses a vacuum tube as a detector. The combination converts the tube into a radio frequency amplifier, thus greatly increasing both the range and signal strength of the set.

Another feature of this circuit is that incomparable crystal clarity which is unobtainable with any other known rectifier at the present time.

For this circquit the following parts are required:

50-turn honeycomb coil.
75-turn honeycomb coil.
Honeycomb coil mounting.
.001 mfd. variable condenser.
.001 mfd. fixed condenser.
.0005 mfd. variable condenser.
.002 mfd. fixed condenser.
Vacuum tube, preferably UV201-A or C-301A.
Socket.
Rheostat.
Crystal detector.
Filament or "A" battery (voltage depending upon type of tube employed).
Plate or "B" battery (45 or 67½ volts).

If results are not obtained when the set is connected the first time, try reversing the leads to the honeycomb coils. It is important that the minus of the filament battery be connected to the "ground," and in some cases changing the rheostat to the negative battery lead may improve the results.

PHONOFILM RECORDS SPEECH AND GESTURES OF COOLIDGE

First Talking Motion Pictures Ever Made of a President of the United States.

President Coolidge can no longer be referred to as "Coolidge the silent." He recently delivered a remarkable speech to the Phonofilm, the radio talking motion pictures, and action and words, photographed together, willl be preserved for posterity—the first talking motion pictures ever made of a President of the United States, or of the head of any nation, for that matter. Not only willl the pictures be placed in a vault at the Smithsonian Institute, but they will soon be seen and heard alll over the world.

The talking motion pictures of the President, made recently on the grounds of the White House, have just been developed, and a print sent to the President.

It was the first time that a speech has ever been photographed in the open air. Heretofore all speeches have been made in the studio of Dr. De Forest. It was impossible for the President to go to New York to have the pictures made, so a special attachment for open-air recording was taken to Washington. This new attachment separates the myriad sounds that fill the air and records only the sound that is desired.

The result was amazingly successful. According to Dr. De Forest, no finer recording has ever been accomplished. Both as to voice and action, the picture is most exceptional.

RADIO SHOW TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK

Sept. 22-28 Date Set for Exhibit of American and Foreign Apparatus.

A world radio show is to take place Sept. 22 to 28, inclusive, in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory in New York City.

This is the first exhibition of this kind which has ever been undertaken. Large numbers of exhibitors have contracted for space and there is no doubt about the success of the undertaking.

In this radio show the public will be greatly interested in the exhibits which are being brought to this country by England, France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and various other countries, and the exhibits will diclose to the American public the advancement in radio broadcasting in the foreign countries. America is reported far ahead of all the other countries, but we have heard of several surprises in the way of broadcast receiving apparatus which will be shown by the foreigners.

At this exposition not only will there be exhibits by many domestic and foreign radio manufacturers, but we shall also have a series of lectures in the auditorium which will be of great interest to the American radio public. During the week there will be a national meeting of three radio trade organizations in the United States. These meetings will be of great interest to all those who are commercially associated with the radio broadcasting art.

The Enemy—Dust.

Batteries should be protected from dust. They might well be placed in a box with a lid. Dust causes leakage and spoils the contact at the terminals. Dust holds moisture, which adds to the leakage and helps corrode the terminals.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The latest product to be announced by the Remler Radio Manufacturing Company is a "capacity unit" designed to replace variable condensers of the ordinary type. It differs somewhat from former types, in that the two sections of plates are approximately square in size and are attached to shafts controlled by gears. In other words there are two rotors with no stator plates. According to the manufacturers, comparative tests show a much lower loss than those of the average semi-circular type as this construction permits reducing insulation to a minimum. The chief features of this new device are: Metallic connections to condenser plates do not extend through the panel, and thus capacity effects are greatly reduced. Ratio of maximum to minimum is 165—1. Condenser gearing can be meshed so that more than one condenser, can be mounted and controlled from a single dial, making possible a single control set without loss of efficiency. A four-inch dial is supplied with each condenser.

The Saal company is now producing two types of loud speakers which are claimed to be the result of combined efforts of America's leading radio engineers and acoustic designers. The throat of the sound chamber is designed to permit the perfect flow of sound from the unit to the bell. It is made of cast aluminum backed with an additional wall which prevents any possible chance of vibration. No external battery or power is needed for either model. The same company is also producing a phusiformer.

What is claimed to be an exceptionally high grade alkaline storage "B" battery is being manufactured by the Gray Electro-Chemical Laboratories, Inc. Manufacturers claims for this battery are: That it has three times the milli-ampere capacity of any other storage battery of this type; that it is electrically indestructible; noiseless in operation, and made with a process that absolutely prevents corrosion and shedding of elements.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT DENIES INVESTIGATION OF MONOPOLY

Current Report as to Findings of Trade Commission Said to Be Untrue.

Officials of the Department of Justice deny that they are planning a complete investigation into the alleged radio monopoly.

A current report to the effect that the findings of the Federal Trade Commission in regard to the radio monopoly were of a character to warrant close study and "a further investigation" was also pronounced by the Department of Justice to be without foundation.

The Justice Department is leaving the radio monopoly case in the hands of the Federal Trade Commission, which expects to begin hearings on its complaint within the next six weeks. But until the Federal Trade Commission has completed its investigation and makes a report to the Department of Justice, it is believed there will be no action by the legal branch of the Government.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All queries must be accompained by the name and address of the writer.

Q. (1) Which makes less noise, a wire-wound rheostat or one of the carbon disc type? (2) Is static as noticeable with a crystal set as it is with a vacuum tube receiver? (3) Why is KSD rated as a 500-watt station when there are four 250-watt tubes in the transmitter? (4) Which do you recommend for distance, the ultra audion or single circuit hook-up?—G F.

A. (1) The carbon disc type is smoother in operation, gives finer control and is "less noisy" than the wire-wound type. (2) No, because a crystal detector is less sensitive than the audion (or vacuum tube). (3) Two of the tubes are modulators connected in parallel and two are oscillators, also connected in parallel, hence the output is not 1000 watts, but only 500. The output of a tube radio transmitter is determined by the size of the modulators and not by the oscillators. The modulators simply modulate the output of the two oscillator tubes. (4) The single circuit is the preference of many experienced radio fans, but we no longer recommend either the ultra audion or single-circuit regenerative because of the squeals and howls transmitted into the "air" whenever the tuning controls are adjusted. Either one is excellent when some method damping these sounds is employed. One stage of radio frequency "ahead" of the detector serves this purpose quite satisfactorily, but some slight difficulty may be encountered in preventing the r. f. from howling. Practice and experience, however, in making different adjustments, will enable you to get the most out of the set. As an alternative, for the two types you have mentioned, why not construct a reflex, either single, two or three tube? They double the output of the tube used, and are absolutely silent in operation, so far as transmitting squeals are concerned.

Q. The diagram I am enclosing with my letter will show the way my single circuit receiving set is connected. When the ground wire is connected, no signals can be heard. When the ground wire is entirely disconnected from the receiver, broadcast signals can be heard with fairly good intensity and excellent quality, except for the fact that the set howls and squeals at the slightest move. Please look over the enclosed hook-up and explain how my trouble can be overcome.

A. In the first place, your variable condenser is shown connected in parallel with the inductance coil, whereas it should be connected in series with the aerial and the coil. As a result, your set cannot tune down to broadcast wavelengths, when the ground is connected. to correct the trouble, change the variable condenser to the series position and attach the ground lead to its proper binding post. Your set "howls" and "squeals" excessively with the ground disconnected because the body capacity effects are greatly amplified, while with the ground replaced, they are considerably minimized.

Q. My office is on the top floor of a tall office building and I am unable to employ an aerial. As I spend much of my time in the evenings at the office, I should like a receiving set which will operate without an antenna. What would be the best kind to get? J. B.

A. We would suggest that you arrange with a radio dealer for a demonstration of a set which operates with a loop aerial.

Q. I have never seen a super-heterodyne hook-up which uses less than six tubes. Is there no way to assemble an efficient four-tube super? F. M.

A. It is possible to construct a four-tube super-heterodyne set but the results will not equal a three-tube regenerative receiver. The reason for having six or eight tubes in a "super" is because it is a complicated circuit and there are so many functions to be performed. To begin with, two radio frequency amplifiers are necessary and two detectors are absolutely required, as well as one oscillator tube. The detector may be combined with an oscillator, but for best results this should not be done. One stage of the radio frequency amplification is needed to bring in the signal, and the second stage is used to amplify it, while a third stage is usually added for greater amplification. Therefore, it may easily be seen that at least four tubes are needed to reproduce the signal, without audio frequency amplification. One stage of audio is hardly enough for good volume and it is the custom to employ two, or even three, for loud speaker operation. It follows, then, that at least eight tubes are necessary for a satisfactory super-heterodyne receiver. If you wish to build a four-tube set to operate with a loop aerial, why not use a three-tube reflex circuit with one stage of audio amplification? Or, if a loop aerial is not required, we would suggest a three-tube regenerative set with one stage of neutralized radio frequency amplification ahead of the regenerative detector.

STANDARD FREQUENCY SIGNALS PLANNED FOR THE WEST COAST

Bureau of Standards Announces Arrangements with Stanford University.

Arrangements have been made for the transmission of standard frequency signals for the Bureau of Standards by Station 6XBM, Stanford University, Palo Alto, Cal. Beginning in September, these signals will give to the western part of the United States the same standard frequency service that is available in the eastern half of the country through the transmissions from the Bureau of Standards laboratory in Washington. In preliminary trials the 6XBM signals have been heard as far east as Minneapolis, Minn.

The signals will duplicate those of the Bureau of Standards in schedule, character, and possible methods of utilization. The schedule of transmission on September 5 to 22, will be similar to Eastern schedule, except that the time will be Pacific Standard time. The transmissions are from 11 p. m. the dates scheduled to 12:32 a. m. On September 5 the frequencies will be from 300 to 666 kilocycles (1000 to 450 meters) and on September 22 from 550 to 1500 kilocycles (545 to 200 meters).

RADIO HAS ENLARGED ENGLISH VOCABULARY

Approximately 5000 New Words Added as Result of Popularity of Science.

The English language has been increased by 5000 words by the advent of radio.

The authority for this statement is Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, editor of the New Standard Dictionary since 1891.

"Radio not only has precipitated the exchange of ideas," Dr. Vizetelly said, "but it has enriched our very speech with a vocabulary indispensable to those that would understand the mechanism. Who 10 years ago ever concerned himself with 'radio-frequency' problems? Who today would neglect to 'tune in' and get his favorite station? We may have known of 'atoms,' of 'electrons,' of 'protons' and of triodes'; but we now have a knowledge of 'inductance,' of crystal detectors,' of 'tuning coils,' of 'variometers,' of 'triodes detectors,' and of 'autodynes.' 'Audion' and 'potentiometer' were once 'Greek' to most of us, and the 'amplifiers,' 'radio amplification' and 'radio triodes' were little less than a dead letter.

"Today the radio world has enriched us by contributing not merely the working knowledge of these terms, but definitions of the terms themselves, which every live wire in lexicography has placed on record.

"Thus the modern dictionary has become a code book of radio."

Two hundred of the new words, according to Dr. Vizetelly, have the prefix 'radio' and cover a page of the dictionary.

"The English language has been growing at the rate of 5000 words a year. Certain years the increase is less. Other years it grows with leaps and bounds as a direct result of some world event, like radio, or the war.

"From the year 1894 to 1912," said the lexicographer, "the rate of growth was 5000 words a year. From 1912 to 1914 the increase was small. Between 1914 and 1918, it went up in leaps and bounds—naturally as a direct result of the war.

"The war gave rise to approximately 6000 new words. These were not merely military. They added to the chemical, political and social vocabularies as well.

"It is so difficult to know how long a word is going to last. For instance, I haven't heard the word 'cootie' since the peace treaty was signed—and yet it gave me two days' trouble looking for its origin.

"We collect all the new words and then have to wait for the public to judge them. Once the public has put its stamp on a word, and its usage—even misusage—we put it into the dictionary.

"The word 'columnist' stays out for the moment, while 'bla,' 'charmeuse,' 'lip-stick,' 'mah jong,' 'sky-writing' and 'sky-ography' go into the dictionary. We embalm a word in the dictionary whether its usage is right or wrong, since the public and not the lexicographer is the judge."

Radiograms.

Russia has 40 broadcasting stations, eight of which have a radius of 2000 miles or more each.

Sixty per cent of the radio receiving sets in Canada are on farms. The Government is using this means to encourage colonization.

The peak of broadcasting stations in the United States was reached May 1, 1923, totaling 592 stations. There are approximately 534 stations at the present time.

The Bureau of Standards in Washington is experimenting with methods for standardizing radiophone receiving sets, and for definitely determining and describing the characteristics and performances of each type of instrument.

Ninety-seven of the 590 broadcasting stations throughout the country are operated by universities and colleges. Forty-five of the school stations are west of the Mississippi River, 26 are in Middle West, 15 in the South and 11 in the East. Forty-three of the schools are State institutions.

ACCOUNTANTS TO HOLD ANNIVERSARY SESSION

Meeting Here Sept. 15 to 19 of American Institute Formed 20 Years Ago.

The annual meeting of the American Institute of Accountants, to be held at Hotel Chase Sept. 15 to 19, will be in the nature of an anniversary gathering, as it was 20 years ago that a newly-formed organization, from which the present body developed, held, during the World's Fair here, its "Congress of Accountants."

Ninety-one public accountants attended that gathering, held in 1904 by the Federation of Societies of Public Accountants of the United States, which later became the American Institute of Accountants. An effort is being made to have all those living of the original 91 attend this year's meeting. Seven are known to be dead.

In addition English, Scotch, Irish and Canadian accountant organizations, which were represented at the "congress," have been invited to send representatives. To date English, Scotch and Canadian bodies have accepted the invitation. Alexander Adnett Garrett, secretary of the Society of Incorporated Accountants and Auditors of London, will be one of the delegates.

About 300 of the leading practicing public accountants of this country are expected to be present. The American Institution, which has 2000 members and associates, sets up ethical standards, and co-operates with 24 states in holding semi-annual examinations for certified public accountant degrees.

"The Fetish of the Calendar Year as a Fiscal Year" will be one of the subjects discussed at the four-day meeting. Other discussions will be on university accounting courses, corporation balance sheets, the relation of accountants to brokers in placing securities on the market, and on inventories, with particular reference to goods in transit and cash discount.

Other events will be meetings of the Council, the Examining Board, and the Trustees of the Foundation of the Institute; the election of officers, and the annual dinner. David L. Grey of this city is chairman of the Committee on Meetings, in charge of arrangements for the gathering. Other members are Victor H. Stempf of St. Louis and Frederic A. Smith of Kansas City.

VETERANS' BUREAU HAS TO TRANSLATE MANY LETTERS

Report Shows 1572 Foreign Communications Are Received During Month of July.

The composite nature of America and America's recent powerful war machine is well illustrated by the problems facing the United States Veterans Bureau through the receipt of letters, claims and affidavits written in practically every known language.

During the month of July, 1924, for example, the Translation Unit of the Bureau's Mail Service turned 1573 foreign communications into understandable English. Of these 523 were letters and the balance official documents.

The Bureau's translators report that the Italian language forms the most common means of communication with the Bureau, outside of English, with Spanish, Polish and French following in the order named.

During the month of July the following communications were received: 606 Italian, 307 Spanish, 187 Polish, 103 French, 67 Lithuanian, 58 Swedish, 57 Greek, 32 Russian, 31 German, 29 Danish, 24 Norwegian, 14 Serbian, 11 Finnish, 10 Magyar, 9 Dutch, 8 Croatian, 6 Latin, 5 Yiddish, 3 Czech, 2 Armenian, 2 Arabic, 2 Syrian, 1 Ukrainian, 1 Slovene.

ADDITION TO OLD FOLKS' HOME

Cornerstone Laying Ceremony to Be Held Sept. 7.

The cornerstone laying of the new $250,000 addition to the Jewish Orthodox Old Folks' Home, Grand boulevard and Blair avenue, will be held on Sept. 7. The home was established 16 years ago, starting with 10 inmates, and this is the third addition added to the original building, an old mansion, in this period.

The new building will have a Turkish bath, sleeping porches, self-operating elevators, a synagogue and an auditorium. The home now has 72 inmates and a large waiting list.

Rudolph Valentino in "Monsieur Beaucaire," Missouri.

Pauline Lord at the Orpheum.

After Seven Years, Municipal Theater Now Turns to Grand Opera

"Carmen" to Be Given Tonight on Stage Where "Aida" Was Produced in 1917—Seven Performances, With Stellar Cast, Chorus of 175, Ballot of 50, Orchestra of 75.

THE Municipal Theater in Forest Park, which was inaugurated with "As You Like It" in 1916, which began its career as a musical amphitheater the next summer with "Aida" and "I'Pagliacci," and which then underwent six seasons of musical comedy stippled with operetta, reverts to grand opera tonight with the first of a series of seven performances of Georges Bizet's lyrical tragedy, "Carmen."

The production will be of massive dimensions, in keeping with the monumental proportions of the open-air stage. There will be a double cast of principals recruited from the Metropolitan, Chicago and San Carlos Opera companies; a community chorus of 176 or more volunteer singers from the city's vocal societies and studios; a ballet of 50 St. Louis dancers, and an orchestra of 75, mostly members of the Symphony Orchestra.

THE executives chosen by General Director Guy Golterman include Ernest Knoch, a distinguished operatic conductor and chorusmaster; Isaac Van Grove, formerly Mary Garden's personal coach and for four seasons an assistant director of the Chicago Opera Company; Oscar Sanne, stage manager, who has been connected with the staff of the Metropolitan for some 40 years; and Giuseppe Bonfiglio, first dancer at the Metropolitan.

Knoch to Direct Tonight.

The cast which will be presented tonight, with Mr. Knoch directing, will be led by Frances Peralta of the Metropolitan and Manuel Salazar, formerly of that organization. Both these singers appeared in the Municipal Theater stage in 1917. Mario Valle, of the San Carlo and Cincinnati Zoo companies, will be the Escamillo, and Miss Elda Vettori, St. Louis soprano, will sing the role of Micaela at all performances. The first cast is as follows.

Carmen	Frances Peralta
Micaela	Elda Vettori
Frasquita	Elizabeth Kerr
Mercedes	Gladys Swarthout
Don Jose	Manuel Salazar
Escamillo	Mario Valle
Dancairo	Natale Cervi
Remendado	Francesco Curci
Zuniga	James Wolf
Morales	Lodovico Oliviero

Change of Cast Tuesday.

The same company and conductor will be heard tomorrow night, according to present plans, and the second cast will appear Tuesday night, with Mr. Van Grove directing. The companies will alternate during the rest of the week in an order not yet announced. The changes in line-up will be as follows:

Carmen	Maria Luisa Escobar
Don Jose	Ulysses Lappas
Escamillo	Max Panteleiff

Among the singers, Miss Peralta has been heard here frequently, not only in opera, but as a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra. Miss Vettori sang leading roles at the Odeon during the San Carlo Co.'s last visit, among them Tosca, Santuzza and Mimi. Miss Swarthout, a member of the Chicago Opera Company sang here last season at a popular symphony concert. Miss Kerr, also of the Chicago organization is a newcomer here.

Salazar Sang in "Aida."

SALAZAR is well and favorably known in St. Louis, having appeared repeatedly at San Carlo performances. He sang Radames in the Municipal Theater production of "Aida." Valle and Cervi are also favorably known as members of the San Carlo troupe. Oliviero has had five seasons with the Chicago Opera. James Wolf is a member of the Metropolitan.

Miss Escobar has never sung here before, but has appeared in the East with the Metropolitan and San Carlo companies. She began

Woodward Actors At Empress and Pershing, Too

THERE will be two companies of the Woodward Players acting in St. Louis this season, it is announced—one at the Empress, and a new one at the Pershing Theater. The two companies together, according to present plans, will present some 80 different plays. The management promises that the standards aimed at during the last two years at the Garrick and Empress will also be operative at the Pershing. A new play will be presented weekly at each theater.

The Empress Theater Company will open next Saturday night with a comedy, "Just Married." Hazel Whitmore will return as leading woman, and other familiar members of the cast include Sylva Farnese, Raymond Brown, Edward Schilling, Bobby Reed and Clare Hatton. There will be a new leading man, J. Glynn McFarlane, who has played in stock in many cities. Other newcomers wil be Leo Lindhard, in second made parts, and Lorna Rogers, in character roles. Francesca Rotoli, a member of the troupe when it played at the Garrick, returns for second female parts.

Pershing Opens Sept. 6.

THE Pershing will open on the evening of Sept. 6, with "Civilian Clothes." Leading male and female performers for this troupe have not been announced; others in the company will be Leah May, second woman; Lillian Dean, character woman; Eleanor Martin, ingenue; Lyle Clement, second man; and Sherrold Page, who played at the Empress last year, as juvenile. Harry McRae Webster will direct the Pershing company, and Frank Hettrick will be stage manager.

After "Just Married," at the Empress will come "The Gold Diggers," "Two Fellows and a Girl," and "Polly Preferred." Following "Civilian Clothes," the Pershing company will present "Lawful Larceny," "Lombardi, Ltd." and "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Among the plays listed for production during the season are "Under Cover," "Clarence," "Smilin' Through," and "The Rose of the Rancho." Matinees will be held at the Empress on Sunday, Thursday and Saturday, and at the Pershing on Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday.

The scale of prices will be the same at both houses.

Pauline Lord at Orpheum.

THE distinguished dramatic actress, Miss Pauline Lord, who created the title role in Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer prize play, "Anna Christie," leads the opening bill at the Orpheum today in a miniature drama, "For Five Thousand Dollars," by Hillard Booth. She has the role of the distressed wife of an avaricious secret service man.

On the bill also is Mme. Bernice Pasquali, prima donna, who will offer a list of grand opera selections. Benny Rubin and May Usher will appear in a comedy called "How It Happened." Lester Kane and Josephine La Voie have an acrobatic dance turn entitled "A Study in Youth." Other acts are those of Eddie Ross and his trained banjo; Mulroy, McNeece and Ridge, roller skaters, with a new double-valse clog; Moore and Freed, and Martinet, with his educated chow.

The musical stock company at the Liberty Music Hall is presenting this week "Mama Love Papa," with Donna Monrose, Delaine Chalmers and Rica and Roy Hughes. There will be vaudeville acts and a

"Monsieur Beaucaire" Goes Into Second Week—Other Features Are "Butterfly" and "The Woman Who Sinned."

Frank Lloyd's screening of the Sabatini novel, "The Sea Hawk," is featured this week at the Grand Central, Lyric Skydome, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters at regular prices.

The cast includes Milton Sills as Sir Oliver Tressillian; Lloyd Hughes as his brother, Lionel Tressillian; Wallace Beery as the rogue, Jasper Leigh; Marc McDermott as Sir John Killigrew; Enid Bennett as Rosamond Godolphin; William Collier Jr. as Marzak, son of the basha of Algiers, and Wallace McDonald as Peter Godolphin.

The story is laid in the days of legitimate piracy, when galleys of England, Spain and Algiers preyed upon one another, capturing human prizes to be sold in the slave market. In this way most of the male captives became galley slaves and were chained to an oar until exhaustion resulted in their being thrown overboard. Sir Oliver Tressillian, an English gentleman attempting to protect his brother's crime and suspected himself, is double-crossed by the brother, who employs Jasper Leigh, a rogue of a seaman, to sell him in slavery.

Leigh Vessel is taken by the Spaniards and both Sir Oliver and Jasper become Spanish galley slaves until a Moorish vessel in turn captures the Spaniards. Then Sir Oliver, renouncing the Christian religion because of the cruelty countenanced by its representatives, becomes a Moorish chieftain known as "The Sea Hawk," whose feats of daring make him the most feared leader on the seas.

A film version of Kathleen Norris' novel, "Butterfly," is shown at "King's." There are four leading characters, two sisters, a wealthy manufacturer and a famous violinist. These roles are played by Ruth Clifford, Laura La Plante, Kenneth Harlan and Norman Kerry. Other players in important roles are Freeman Wood, Margaret Livingston, Cesare Gravini and T. Roy Barnes. The story presents a picture of a girl nicknamed "Butterfly" and her older sister, the latter sacrificing every personal desire that the younger may be happy and achieve the success as a violinist which their mother on her deathbed had prophesied.

The Delmonte has a double bill this week with the feature picture, "A Woman Who Sinned," and a condensed version of "Il Trovatore," sung by F. L. Molino, Mme. Molino and a large cast. There will also be a single reel comedy on the bill and other short subjects.

Mae Busch and Irene Rich head the cast of "A Woman Who Sinned" and others in the company are Morgan Wallace, Lucien Littlefield and the old-time vaudeville favorite of a generation or so ago, Cissy Fitzgerald. The story deals with a minister's wife who is placed in an embarrassing position by an unscrupulous man. Rather than return to her home, where she fears she will bring disgrace upon her husband and baby, she lets her friends believe that she has lost her life in a storm. Actually she goes away with the man who caused her downfall. Twenty years later she comes face to face with her son, who has become an evangelist, and the story is brought to a close with what is described as a "powerful ending."

The stage and screen stars attending the opening of Loew's State Theater make their final appearances at the theater today, leaving for Culver City and New York late tonight. The opening program, however, continues until next Saturday, the day chosen for a complete change in pictures, music and stage novelties.

"Revelation," the Metro-Goldwyn production, continues as the stellar attraction. The story deals with a girl model of the Paris Montmartre who found her soul when posing as the Madonna of an old legend. An unusual cast has been used in the True-Life Comedy of Embattled Pianists

By MORIZ ROSENTHAL.

IN the spring of 1902, when the critics of Vienna, taking themselves very seriously, presented a solid front against me, I was invited, as a representative of Austria, to become a member of the jury organized to bestow the Prix Diemer.

Diemer, then professor at the Paris Conservatoire, had instituted a prize of 4000 francs, the contestants to be limited to pianists who, during the previous 10 years, had graduated from that institution. It did not matter under which professor they had studied. The contest soon developed into a guerrilla war, ending in a hot piano battle which lasted for two days. It raged from early morning until late at night.

"That Little Levy."

THE jury included some brilliant names: Massenet, Saint-Saens, Plante, Wormser (the composer of "L'Enfant Prodigue"), Paderewski, Pugno, Paladilhe, Philipp, Chevillard (conductor of the Lamoureux Orchestra) and the Belgian pianist, De Greef. Before the fight began, gossip of the conservatoire's corridors had it that Diemer had established the prize with the confident expectation that it would be awarded to his favorite pupil, Levy; and it must be admitted that the illustrious teacher's behavior was not calculated to give the lie to this rumor.

When he saw me, he came forward with the exclamation: "Oh, le petit Levy qui a une peur tellement affreuse malgre son grand talent." ("Oh, this little Levy, how frightened he is in spite of his great gift.")

It must be explained that "talent" in French signifies not only gift, but also implies positive ability.

Pity the Poor Judges.

THIS partisanship of Diemer's, which later became really grotesque, was not difficult to understand. His prestige as a teacher was partly involved, for most of the other contestants, especially Joaquin Malats, from Spain, were pupils of his competitor Marmontel, who had studied under Chopin.

The concert hall of the Conservatoire was crowded with an expectant multitude which maintained very good spirits. The jurors were not feeling equally happy, for we had to consume in 10 consecutive portions the following heavy musical menu: Beethoven's "Appassionata" Sonata, Schumann's Etudes symphoniques, the Fantasy or F Minor Ballade of Chopin (the player was permitted his choice), besides a prelude or mazurka by Chopin, and finally either Liszt's "Campanella" or Saint-Saens' Etude en forme de valse. Most of the contestants, including "le petit Levy," had unfurled the standard of Saint-Saens, while Malats selected the "Campanella."

Expert Pianistic Swimmer.

PUNCTUALLY at the stroke of nine, his name having been drawn first—the haggard Malats of Barcelona stepped to the platform. After listening to about 20 bars, Paderewski and I nodded to each other. He who was playing was neither a timid German nor a hotspur fearlessly attacking difficulties, but a real artist, who skillfully swam through Beethoven's [illegible] stream.

At the very beginning of the "concours" it struck me that the distinguished, but nonpiano playing composers present were not very confident of their ability to judge. Massenet, in particular, made no bones about it. Several times he asked Paderewski and me: "C'est bien! Hein?" Frequently he wanted to know whether the passage had been played strictly according to the notes. Paladilhe was often quite astonished at the ease with which a comparatively easy passage was performed; and only Saint-Saens, one of the best piano authorities, did not seek to read the facial expressions of the others, but held a piece of paper on which he continually jotted down notes.

A Useful Formula.

CONCERNING the second day of the great battle, the following little episode, occurring during a pause, dwells in my memory. I said to Paderewski:

"If you want to know whether an artist has been successful or not in any city, don't ask anyone, don't read any criticisms, but ask him whether the public and critics there understand much about music. If he answers affirmatively he was successful. If he replies in the negative, he failed to please."

Hardly had I finished speaking when Pugno, with true southern expression and gestures, exclaimed to Saint-Saens:

"You ask me, dear Master, whether the —— are musical? I can answer that they are ignorant, unmusical and untrained."

Paderewski and I burst out laughing, while Pugno stared at us in astonishment.

Sing, Oh Muse, of the victorious Barcelonian, Joaquin Malats! After a half-hour's debate the Don received the prize, the vote standing 11 to one. It was Saint-Saens who voted for the "little Levy." The decision was received by the public with enormous enthusiasm. It struck Diemer with the force of a thunderbolt. The fighting-cock of the afternoon was paralyzed. It was with difficulty that he could force himself to smile languidly and benignly.

Massenet Got Them Mixed.

A DINNER in honor of the victor awaited us at Diemer's aristocratic home and, exhausted by the long (much too long) conference, we proceeded thither in [illegible]. I accompanied Massenet. He [illegible] to me how unjustly Massenet was decried as an opportunist, an accusation that seemed to me outrageous. I told him how much the other jurors and I thought of his impartiality, for, notwithstanding his intimate friendship with Diemer, he had voted for Malats.

Suddenly Massenet stood still; there was a look of consternation on his face, and in a hoarse voice he exclaimed: "Heavens! What have I done? It's terrible—it's awful!"

His distress went to my heart, and all my attempts to console him only seemed to pour oil on the fire.

Wired All Over the World.

ARRIVING at Diemer's, another surprise awaited us. The table was beautifully set for the victor, but the victor failed to appear. Diemer apparently could not persuade himself to invite Malats.

Did the Barcelonian regard this as an insult? Had he determined to find satisfaction in some other way? At all events, he made straight for the telegraph office and remained there several hours wiring news of his triumph to every quarter of the globe, particularly Barcelona.

Would not Alexander the Great have telegraphed his triumph over the Persians to Athens if at that time the telegraph had been invented? Intoxicated by success, the Spaniard must have deviated a little from historical clarity, for the Barcelonians understood the dispatches to indicate that he had triumphed, not merely in the presence of a jury, but over the jury. Anyway, the Spanish papers stated next day that Malats had triumphed over his "rivals," Saint-Saens, Massenet, Plante, Paderewski, Pugno, Rosenthal, etc.

Killed by Kindness.

THE news created indescribable enthusiasm, and when he returned Malats was received by civic delegations. A torchlight procession followed and banquets were given in his honor. The ovations lasted for weeks.

When, years later, I played in Madrid, I met Malats, who was looked upon as the greatest Spanish pianist. He attended all my concerts and also wrote (rarissima avis!) an enthusiastic article about me in Vanguardia, the leading Barcelona newspaper.

Tuberculosis ended, much too soon, the life of an original and interesting artist. At that time it was said the smiles of the Andalusians killed him.—Translated by Jacques Meyer for Musical America.

"The Best People" Is Trite But Amusing Play

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.

AN amusing show is "The Best People," by David Gray and Avery Hopwood, which Charles Frohman presented Tuesday night at the Lyceum. A reviewer is in a difficult position when he has a good time at a play and is unable to find a rational reason for his enjoyment. That is my predicament in regard to this play. I can think up ever so many causes why I should have been bored and alienated.

Here for the hundredth part in the last two seasons is a comedy concerning the younger generation. There is hardly a twist of the story which is not altogether familiar. Again and again a line pops out precisely like something read from a comic magazine instead of a speech by a recognizable human being. At least half the characters are stock figures of the theater.

But I laughed often and without trouble, and I was interested to watch the story work out, even though I had a pretty clear prevision of each turn it would take. Some of the lines are puffed and then shot from guns, and still they landed. The cast is not uniformly good, but at least one performance is brilliant. The most truthful criticism which can be recorded by me is that I had a good time.

Chorus Girl Reforms Hero.

THE playwrights have said in this play of theirs that it may be an excellent thing for members of the Junior League to marry chauffeurs, and for rich young men to ally themselves with chorus girls. At any rate, Henry was an excellent influence for Marion, the debutante daughter of the Bronson Lenoxes, and Bertie Bronson Lenox would certainly have drunk himself to death if Alice had not promised to reform him.

I believe it is generally accepted in novels, plays and campaign speeches that worth and morality preserve a ratio to wealth which is inverse. It may also be true. I doubt very much whether David Gray is particularly interested in the truth or falsity of his theme. Probably he is not actually engaged in an effort to raise the marriage rate between chauffeurs and the daughters of their employers. The theme may then be dismissed as a mere playwriting subterfuge.

Florence Johns as Comedienne.

YET the play is not without somebody. In lines here and there a shrewd, tolerant and intelligent attitude toward life is presented. Most of these lines fall to Charles Richman as the father of the young girl and boy. Mr. Richman does only indifferently well with an excellent role.

The character which brings out the best performance is that of a tough chorus girl. Here there is not much first-hand observation or invention although a wealth of amusing gag lines. However, the role falls to Florence Johns who made a brilliant appearance last season in "Children of the Moon." She is seen now as a superb comedian. It is broad, low clowning for the most part, but expert clowning. In addition to being funny it is often credible. There are no false moves. The gestures are quick and even the smallest of them is definite and counts for something. Florence Johns is an exceptionally talented actress who can do a great many things in the theater and deserves a first rate role in a fine play. Her present job is easy, but that doesn't hide the fact that she does it well.

James Rennie as the Chauffeur.

THE authors have been willing to let their hero marry a chorus girl for the sake of salvation, but they have arranged that she shall be an exceptional chorus girl. Indeed, the character has an excellent chance of standing up throughout the season as the primmest and most altogether obnoxious young woman fashioned by any dramatic author. Fortunately this part is written in only to give the hero somebody to marry. The tough chorus girl does all the talking.

The chauffeur is played by James Rennie, and this is an extremely able and interesting piece of work. I also like Margaret Dale as Mrs. Bronson Lenox.

"The Miracle" Reopens.

AT THE Century Theater, "The Miracle" reopened Monday night after a recess of seven weeks, with Rosamond Pinchot again playing the nun, and Elizabeth Schirmer substituting as the Madonna until the return of Lady Diana Manners next month.

Eugene O'Neill's "All God's Chillun Got Wings," was presented Monday night with children in the cast for the first time, by special permission of the Mayor. It is now at the Greenwich Village Theater instead of the smaller Provincetown Theater, at which it was first given.

The last score which Victor Herbert wrote is "The Dream Girl," a musical version made by Rida Johnson Young from her play, "The Road to Yesterday." Mrs. Young was collaborator with Herbert in "Naughty Marietta." "The Dream Girl" was offered Wednesday night at the Ambassador, with a cast including Fay Bainter, Walter Woolf, Edna May Oliver, Billy B. Van and George Lemaire.

The second production of the Independent Theater, Inc., is "The Easy Mark," by Jack Larric, which was presented Wednesday night at the Comedy. Walter Huston heads the cast.

son's big English sheep dog which she recently brought over from Europe. The animal contracted pneumonia two days after arriving at her farm of Croton, N. Y. The entire household was grief-stricken.

Fourteen lions, ranging from small cubs to full-grown beasts, are members of the cast of Betty Compson's next starring picture for Paramount, "The Female," which James Cruze has produced. The story is an adaptation from Cynthia Stockley's novel, "Dalla, the Lion Cub."

What can you use a rattlesnake's skin for? Dorothy Mackaill would like to know. She brought the skin home with her from location in Arizona. It was regarded by the natives as the largest ever killed in the State. She was perfectly frank when questioned about how she happened to obtain it. "It almost scared me to death when I heard it rattle," she said, "in fact, I screamed and ran. The two men who killed it gave it to me. Some day, when I have more time, I'm going to sit down and count all those rattles. There are enough of them."

her operatic career in Mexico City, and appeared there in a galla performance of "Carmen" last Sunday night. She is a sister of Consuelo Escobar, coloratura soprano, who appeared here last season with the San Carlo troupe.

Ulysses Lappas is a dramatic tenor of the Chicago company, who has never sung here. He is said to have been chosen by Mary Garden as successor to Lucien Muratore. He has sung at many of the European opera houses, and is declared to have been complimented by Puccini and Leoncavallo for his performance in their operas. Panteleff, a protege of Chaliapin, was a member of the Russian Grand Opera Company, which fled across Asia and the Pacific to America after the revolution.

Maestros Knoch and Van Grove.

MAESTRO KNOCH began his career as a conductor at Carlsruhe, Germany, after which he was called first to Strassburg and then Cologne. For much of his musical education he was educated to Felix Mottl, for many years an associate of Richard Wagner. Through Mottl's friendship, Knoch was able to conduct for three seasons at Bayreuth. He won recognition not only as an expert Wagnerian, but as a sympathetic interpreter of French and Italian opera.

In 1912, he was appointed director of a world-touring troupe organized among artists of Covent Garden, in London. He directed performances in many lands, including South Africa and Australia. He was in the British Isles when the war began, and made his way to America.

He was director for one season with the Century Opera Co., two seasons at Ravinia Park, Chicago; a season with the Brascale company, in Mexico and Cuba, and he led the first performance of "Parsifal" ever given in Havana. He has directed for the San Carlo Company, and also for the German Opera Company, which visited this country in recent years.

He went to Berlin this year to conduct for six weeks at the Staats Opera, formerly the Royal Opera, and came directly from Berlin to St. Louis to train the chorus for the "Carmen" performances. In this work, it is generally conceded, he has worked something of a miracle.

Mr. Van Grove was introduced to the operatic baton by Mary Garden, and is to conduct the production of "Carmen" which the Chicago Company is planning for this season, with Miss Garden in the title role. He has conducted many new works in Chicago, and is well-known as a composer. He is a member of the faculty of the Chicago Music College.

Chorus Serving Without Pay.

THE chorus, which is giving its services without pay, is drawn from all walks of life. It has had about 10 evenings of musical direction, and six evenings of stage direction under Mr. Sanne. According to the executives, it was ready to give a well-routined performance as early as Thursday of this week. It will be led by 10 chorus captains, professionals from the Chicago Opera Co.

Bonfiglio has been training advanced students of dancing here for the last two weeks, and announces that his ballet of 30 is ready. The ballet will be given in the fourth act, and as Bizet wrote no ballet music for "Carmen," excerpts from his "L'Arlesienne" will be used. Miss Florence Rudolph, a prominent dancer at the Metropolitan, will give solo dances and a duet with Mr. Bonfiglio.

The settings for the four acts are after designs made by Joseph [illegible], scenic artist of the Municipal Theater Association, after the ideas and under the supervision of Armando Agnini, stage director at the Metropolitan and at Ravinia Park.

The performance will be given every night this week, and the series will conclude next Sunday night with a grand opera concert at the Odeon, in which most of the principals of both casts will appear.

HANOVER, Germany, Aug. 23.

IN our enlightened age, the once universal belief in vampirism—which survived in New England during the first half of the nineteenth century, and under which there were several trials in Baltic Germany as recently as 50 years ago—is dismissed as a Balkan superstition, improved by the machinations of medieval priests, who contrived to enlist against any recalcitrant spirit the aid of his own intimates by teaching that persons dying under ecclesiastical ban were kept alive by the devil to slay and devour their surviving friends. Scholars traced the myth to Lamia, Queen of Libya and beloved of Zeus. Juno was fabled to have transformed her rival into a monster with the amiable habit of strangling and eating children.

Like many superstitions, however, this particularly repulsive one had a basis in facts, which were accounted for according to unscientific theory. There are numerous well-authenticated instances of human beings who have reverted to this hideous form of cannibalism, retracing evolution not only to the most brutish savagery, but perhaps to animals as far down in the scale as the vampire bats. The most famous case, perhaps, was that of Gilles de Laval, Baron de Retz, a French nobleman of the fifteenth century, who fought intrepidly under Joan of Arc, but who was burned alive at Nantes for his diabolical cruelties, and survives in popular memory as the original of the character of Bluebeard, murderer of a series of hapless wives.

This is by way of introduction to the case of Fritz Haarmann, who in the year 42 A. D. (after Darwin) lies in jail in this city under indictment for 17 vampire murders, and who is the confessed assassin of eight or more additional victims—so many in all that he cannot remember their names. The authorities say the number may reach 50. The penalty for homicide here is decapitation, which recalls the practice, not so remote, of pinning the bodies of suicides and executed criminals to their graves with a stake driven through the breast, or of chopping off their heads with a grave-digger's spade. These expedients were supposed to prevent malefactors from wandering out of their tombs and becoming vampires.

Glories in His Notoriety

In the middle ages, Haarmann would have been burned out of hand at the stake, as one possessed of the devil. The same view is expressed in modern scientific language by Dr. Kopp, criminologist of the German Ministry of the Interior, who explains that Haarmann "is unquestionably strangely psychopathic, and presents a bewildering combination of unnatural impulses." There is some discussion of sending him to an insane asylum instead of the scaffold. Odd to say, the loudest objections to the former course come from Haarmann himself, who vigorously demands the ax. He has convinced his jailers that at the first opportunity he will take his own life. He is kept in heavy chains and watched day and night by guards. An iron bar has been fixed beneath his chin to prevent him from cutting his throat, if he should happen to get possession of a knife.

But he seems chiefly interested in the monstrous notoriety which has fallen upon his name, which has spread from Hanover all over Germany, throughout Europe and across the ocean to America.

"There has never been anything like it in America, has there?" he demanded eagerly of the correspondent, who interviewed him in prison a few days ago. "You had the Franks murder. I read about it. But that can't compare with what I have done.

"No Emperor, no King, was ever paid so much attention—is it not so? My name has gone all over the world, and people everywhere are talking about me."

The correspondent beheld a debonair, highly polite and well-dressed man of effeminate appearance, notwithstanding his little blond mustache. One could scarcely credit his abominable confessions, which he not only related but acted for the police, showing how, when his victims had fallen asleep, he would fall upon them like a wild beast, fastening fangs and claws in their throats, and clinging there until their struggles ceased, and he himself fell away in an exhausted and stupefied slumber.

This, as has been remarked, might have seemed unbelievable, if it were not for Haarmann's eyes. Large, staring blue orbs they are, with an expression almost hypnotic. They make one recall one of the principal attributes, next to their scarlet lips, by which the vampires of superstition were to be recognized. They always possessed a fixed and overwhelming glare, which irresistibly reduced victims upon whom they were turned to a state of helpless fascination.

Police Informer and Murderer, Too

The case has not only its pathological interest, but its tragic one, for parents all over Germany whose sons have disappeared in the last few years are writing by hundreds to the authorities asking whether their beloved ones might not have been among Haarmann's victims. It should be stated that he destroyed only men and youths. There is also a political phase, for the murderer most cleverly shielded himself from investigation by aiding the police as an informer.

He was principally used against the communists, who are, in consequence of the exposure, demanding the retirement of Gustav Noske, Governor of the Province of Hanover. As the iron-handed Minister of National Defense, after the revolution of 1918, Noske put down three communist uprisings, and was hailed as the savior of Germany from bolshevism. Noske, it is charged by his enemies, employed Haarmann as a spy.

Several police officials have resigned, and the populace is demanding a clean sweep in the Police Department, from top to bottom. This is because revelations brought out at the trial show that Haarmann ingratiated himself with the authorities by holding fantastic and indecent orgies at his house, to which his friends among the police were invited. As a consequence, it is charged, the police pooh-poohed charges and evidence brought against him long before accident exposed him, and thus were indirectly responsible for many deaths which might have been prevented.

The incredulity of the police was strikingly exhibited in the circumstances which finally brought Haarmann to a cell. A father and mother reported that their son was missing. His skull, recovered from the river Leine, on which Hanover is situated, was identified by means of dental work. The parents learned from a friend that their son had been seen at a circus with Haarmann the night before his disappearance. They demanded his arrest, but the police laughed.

"Your son has run away with the circus," they chortled.

Then Haarmann happened to be arrested in a brawl, and it chanced that the searching parents were at the police station when the witnesses in the case appeared. The mother instantly recognized a coat worn by one of the witnesses as having belonged to her son; and this witness, when questioned, declared that he purchased the garment from Haarmann. Compelled to act, the police grilled Haarmann in earnest for the first time. He was not only willing but eager to talk; he boastfully laid claim to one murder after another, and signed confession after confession without a qualm.

Magistrate's Suicide Follows Arrest

A strange feature was the arrest of Hans Grans, a young dealer in old clothes, who is charged by the police with having lured many youths within Haarmann's clutches in return for permission to sell the garments of the victims after they were dead. Some of Haarmann's boon companions belonged to wealthy families here; and exposures attending the case are said to rival those made by Maximilian Harden in connection with the Prince Eulenberg round-table.

What arouses indignation particularly against the police is the fact that Haarmann, who is 45 years old, has a prison record dating from his eighteenth year. He has been sentenced to imprisonment nine times, once for five years, in connection with various thefts and moral derelictions. Despite this fact—indeed, no doubt because of it—the police used him as a trusted stool-pigeon, and unwittingly protected him during years of fiendish bloodshed.

Immediately after Haarmann's arrest, a young Hanover magistrate, formerly connected with the Public Prosecutor's office and a member of the fashionable set, committed suicide. An investigation is being made to determine whether this act had any connection with Haarmann's confession.

Haarmann is by trade a butcher and ol' clo' man. In addition, thanks to friends in the police department, he was permitted to

THE UNUSUAL STORY OF THE JEW THE KU KLUX KLAN AND AN ENTIRE ILLINOIS COUNTY HONOR

FAIRFIELD, Ill., Aug. 23.

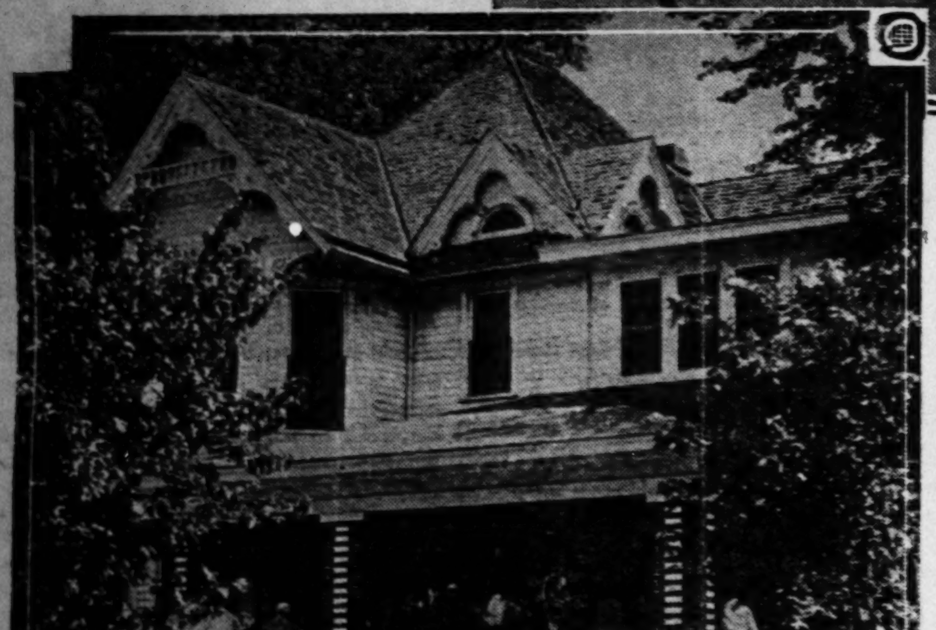
FOR 50 years Emanuel Steiner served his generation at the corner of Main and Second streets, supplying his neighbors with the clothing that they needed for work and play, and on the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of his little clothing store, Fairfield and Wayne County took a holiday in his honor and hailed him as honest business man, good citizen and patriot.

Stores and shops were closed and farmers left their fields in the midst of their harvests. There was a parade through Main street, headed by "Manny" Steiner on a float, surrounded by his grandchildren, and more than 15,000 gathered from town and country at Fairfield City Park as guests of the little clothier, applauded orators' praises, ate the barbecued meats he provided, had a day of reunion and merrymaking and at night the old folks and children crowded the courthouse square and listened to the band and watched the young folks dance on the pavement.

As a good citizen and patriot "Manny" Steiner has done his part, these 50 years, but it was as the clothier who had garbed the fathers and their sons and grandsons for 50 years that he was honored on "Steiner day" by the greatest outpouring of people in the history of Wayne County.

Not that his civic services were undervalued. It was remembered to his credit that he had ever been foremost among the men who had wrought for the community's good, measuring to the highest standards of citizenship, giving with a free hand when giving was needed, showing himself always a good American, prompt and lavish with patriotism when native-born men, with greater cause to be grateful, were lax.

EMANUEL ("MANNY") STEINER.



THE STEINER HOME IN FAIRFIELD.

But it was as "Manny" Steiner the merchant that he had impressed himself most upon his neighbors and townspeople and the yeomanry of the countryside. They gathered on Steiner day to honor him first and foremost as the man who sold them their clothes, at the little store on the corner, honest clothes at honest prices, and trusted them when they needed trust, and made no complaint if they took their own time to pay.

A Jew of the Jews, Steiner was honored by the Gentiles, for in Fairfield and Wayne County there are few Jews and few foreign-born of any race, for Wayne County is peopled by the descendants of the pioneers. And, strangest tribute of all, 40 robed and hooded Knights of the Ku Klux Klan saluted him as patriot, good citizen and honest business man, and presented him with 50 roses, a rose for each of the years that he has lived his life in Fairfield.

Started Life as Pack Peddler

When Emanuel Steiner was born 74 years ago in Austria his father was a pack peddler. He came to America, where pack peddling was better and when "Manny" was 12 he came with his mother and the other children and the reunited family lived first at Lebanon, Ill., and later at St. Louis. Manny's ambition was to be a pack peddler like his father. He tramped Illinois with his father and by and by they acquired a horse and wagon and became junk dealers. When he was 24 years old, with the backing of Isadore Bach, a relative, he started in the clothing business here. For 31 years Bach retained an interest in the business, but Steiner conducted it. Then Steiner bought Bach's interest and since that has been sole owner.

Fairfield, in the earlier days as now, was mainly American and Gentile. There was no Jewish group within which Steiner might have encased himself if he had been so disposed. So from the first he was a functioning member of the community in which he had cast his lot. He was a good "jiner." He joined the Masons and Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, helped organize the building and loan association, was for a term a member of the City Council and after a while became a bank director. For 37 years he has been treasurer of the Masons and for 33 years treasurer of the Odd Fellows.

He can have both jobs as long as he lives, for his idea of being treasurer is to pay the bills, whether the lodge has any money or not. For that reason lodge orders are always good in Fairfield. Everybody knows "Manny" Steiner is behind them. He pays the lodge bills the same as his own bills.

Meeting night when the report of the treasurer is called for, Steiner picks a little piece of paper out of his vest pocket or fob pocket and scrutinizes it and says: "Well, the lodge owes me so much," or, much less frequently: "I owe the lodge so much."

It's all the same, one way or the other. Nobody asks for a detailed statement. If the lodge owes Steiner money he waits until the dues come in. If he owes the lodge he pays by meeting the bills as they come in.

It is not as haphazard as it sounds. In fact, it isn't haphazard at all. That is why the lodge members never ask for details. They know Steiner is scrupulously exact in his financial affairs and as thrifty in handling the lodge funds as in handling his own.

With his synagogue membership in St. Louis, too far away for frequent attendance, he made fidelity to his lodges a matter of religion, and never missed a meeting, no matter how stormy the meeting night. And always he was the first to volunteer when there was a call for members to sit up with the sick.

"Steiner's Corner" a Town Institution

The years passed and Steiner prospered. How he did it was a mystery, for his prices were low and he was always throwing in extras at the slightest provocation. He married and established a home and his children, lacking a synagogue to attend, went to the Presbyterian Sunday school.

Steiner's "corner" became one of the institutions of the town. The Gentiles of town and country, unto the second and third generation, came to him to be clothed. His terms were cash if they had it and credit if they needed it. If a young man wanted a suit of clothes and did not have the price, he went to Steiner.

"Manny," he would say (nobody ever calls him anything but Manny), "I need a suit of clothes, but I've only got $3 to pay on it."

"All right," Steiner would say, "pick it out and pay for it when you can."

And he says now that he never suffered a loss worth mentioning and was never put to the unpleasant necessity of going to law to collect what was due him.

He took an interest in politics and for nearly half a century, thinking himself a citizen through the supposed naturalization of his father, he voted the Republican ticket, only to find, during the World War, when such matters were scrutinized, that he was not a citizen, a disability which he hastened to have corrected. In everything affecting the community's welfare his interest and activity and support were to be counted upon, but he was not the aggressive type of public man and it was as the diffident, soft-spoken, smiling little business man that he counted most in the community's affection.

With old age pressing upon him, his one ambition, often spoken of, was to live to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his business. And he promised himself and intimated to his friends and customers that if he lived that long it would be such a celebration as Fairfield and Wayne County had never had.

For weeks before the day Steiner, using his regular advertising space in the local newspapers, announced the progress of the preparations. The Chamber of Commerce cooperated in the planning for what, it was decided, should be called "Steiner day."

The program called for a reception "on the corner," a parade, a barbecue and picnic, speeches, games and contests and a community dance, all at the expense of "Manny."

The great day came and early in the morning the roads to Fairfield were congested with automobiles and farm conveyances. By 9 o'clock the town was filled with country people. Main street was all a-flutter with flags. The crowds converged at "Steiner's corner" and for an hour men, women and children surged in through the front doors and shook hands with "Manny" and received the souvenirs he had provided, and poured out through the side doors into Second street.

After the reception Steiner slipped away and was taken to the edge of town, where the parade was forming. The crowd, filling Main street, waited. Motion picture men took their station. An airplane hummed overhead. From the far end of the street band music floated faintly. Murphy's Band, the pride of Fairfield, was leading the parade.

Behind the band rode Steiner, seated on a decorated truck, with his grandchildren grouped around him. Then a long line of floats and decorated automobiles.

At the City Park 40 acres were packed with automobiles and old-fashioned family vehicles from the farms. Winding among these the parade ended at the speakers' stand and there, with thousands filling the natural amphitheater, the welcoming exercises were held, with B. F. Thomas acting as chairman and Thomas H. Creighton delivering the address of welcome in Steiner's name, for oratory is not in Steiner's line, commending him for his 50 years of service to the community, and bidding the people make merry while the day lasted. And Judge J. L. Cooper added his word of praise for the host of the occasion.

And there, to prove that "Manny" sold good goods, even if he did sell "at cost" or "below cost" and throw things in, a suit bought from him 48 years ago by Conrad Kern of Cisne, to get married in, was taken from its box and shaken in the breeze, long-tailed coat and flapping trousers, while the crowd cheered.

There were telegrams from Gov. Small and other State officials and more than 200 letters from friends who were too far away to attend the celebration.

For the barbecue 60 sheep, 20 beeves and 50 hams had been provided, ample to feed the multitude, but serving more than 15,000 took two hours, with crowds constantly about the trench and the cutting tables, receiving portions of meat and bread and pickles.

At 2 o'clock there were further exercises, with Congressman T. S. Williams, Senator C. L. Woods and H. S. Kraemer making the speeches, and E. A. Childress reading a biography of the host.

Woods told how he had been a customer of "Manny" ever since 1878, when he bought his wedding suit at the corner for $8.50, which he had accumulated by making railroad ties for 18 cents apiece, delivered at Keen's Station, and Steiner, learning what it was for, threw in a necktie and a pair of gloves, in addition to letting him have it "at cost."

There had been whispers that the Ku Klux Klan was going to do something and the crowd was keyed to expectancy. As the speaking ended Steiner was led by his son, Alvin, to an open space in the center of the park, where the peaked hoods of the klansmen were visible over the heads of the crowd that circled the area.

There were 40 of them, all robed and hooded, led by one on horseback. They grouped around Steiner and one, raising the cowl of his hood, revealed himself as the Rev. Herbert G. Markley, pastor of the Fairfield Presbyterian Church. Speaking as secretary of the local klan, he said:

"Mr. Steiner, we are met today as your friends. You have lived here 50 years. You have been an honest, upright man. The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan respect and revere you. It is the constitutional right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience. The Ku Klux Klan never has and never will try to violate that right. You have built up by your honesty, uprightness and integrity a successful business. As a citizen there is no better. You have always been behind every proposition for the community and its welfare. As American citizens the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan congratulate you for the many things that you have done for the flag and for the country.

"We remember that in the World War you gave your son to fight for his country, and that on last Armistice day the first flag that floated to the breeze was from the Steiner store on the corner.

"On behalf of the klansmen of Wayne County, who hold you in high [illegible] gard, we present you with this [illegible] ing that you are a man. We hope [illegible] go down the twilight trail you will [illegible] with kindness and generosity the men [illegible] masks."

operate a "private detective agency," and to display credentials in the way of badges and papers which often won the confidence of prospective victims.

According to his own story, the railway station was his principal recruiting ground for the shambles. There he often found young men of one of two classes. There were youths who had run away from home, but now found themselves penniless and friendless, in a strange city. To them Haarmann offered sympathy and money. Then there were well-to-do lads on the lookout for vicious adventure. To these he proffered wine, the opera, and, as a final bait, a beautiful 14-year-old daughter who did not exist.

Murder Chamber in His Home

By the promise of shelter or of disreputable orgies, and perhaps through the effect of his compelling eye, it was easy for Haarmann to lure such strangers to his house. This is a decrepit tenement, standing in an obscure part of the city, directly and conveniently on the bank of the Leine River. The room which principally aroused interest was the "murder chamber" in the basement. This is a low-ceilinged apartment, the arresting feature of which is its soundproof walls of boarding and thick paper. Several persons who accompanied Haarmann into this sinister chamber escaped with their lives. One succeeded in overturning the lamp with which it was lighted, and fled in the darkness.

"Sometimes," relates the prisoner, "I caught myself in time, and out of pity for the boy I sent him away."

But numerous others entered the room, only to be awakened in the night by the grip of fatal teeth upon their throats. Their bodies were cut in pieces and dropped through a trap-door into the river. The last murder was committed only eight days before Haarmann was arrested. In the murder chamber tell-tale crimson spots still lay on the floor, and one victim's blood-stained garments were found in a closet.

For five years Haarmann conducted his double career without suspicion. On the one hand, as one of the shady instruments of the law, he was running down supposed conspiracies, and landing alleged bolsheviks and communists behind the bars. On the other hand, thanks largely to his immunity as a spy and to his boon companionship with police and court officials, he was achieving a career of murder recalling the bloody fairy stories with which German folklore commemorated similar monsters of prehistoric days—for instance, "Jack, the Giant Killer."

The klansmen kneeled and a prayer was spoken. Then, with upraised left hands, they saluted Steiner as " citizen, patriot and honest business man."

Who Murdered 50, Infernal Immortality"

Not all the bodies were thrown in the river. Sometimes the human fragments were carried out of the house, to be buried in remote spots in the forests or cemeteries. From many such places, revealed by Haarmann, the police have recovered human bones. Several skulls and bones have also been recovered from the mud of the river, which is a shallow and languid stream.

According to the murderer, his crimes were committed in a state approaching unconsciousness. Psychologists explain that, when the impulse arose, millenniums of evolution were wiped out in the twinkling of an eye, and from the depth of the subconscious welled up the dark, primordial instincts of a beast of prey such as the repulsive weasel, which feeds not on the flesh of its victim, but upon the blood drained from its veins.

Some vague feeling warned him, Haarmann said, when these attacks were about to overpower him, and sometimes he was able to resist them, and permit his prey to escape. The crime was always followed by profound and exhausted slumber. When Haarmann awoke he would coolly and cleverly enough set about disposing of the bodies. He did not forget to sell the clothes of his victims, and any other effects that would bring a price.

A Frau Schulenberg of Berlin, who came here to look for her missing son, found his hat, handkerchief and tie in Haarmann's cellar. The murderer evidently had no opportunity to dispose of them. Haarmann did not recall this particular youth.

"I can't remember the names of all of my victims," he told the correspondent. "You see, they came so fast that I really did not have a good chance to get acquainted with them."

The vampire of mythology always attacked his prey while the latter was asleep; and Haarmann conformed completely to this tradition.

He boasts that his criminal career is an achievement never before equaled, and not likely to be surpassed in the future; he seems to be proud that he has won a sort of infernal immortality. He speculates on what scientists will find when they analyze his brain after his execution. His eyes become particularly baleful and brilliant when visitors flatter him with the assurance that his crimes are unique.

But at times, especially when he acted the murders in complete detail for the police, a sort of feeling appeared to come over him.

"It wasn't easy, I assure you," he would mutter on such occasions, feeling nervously of his throat, sending his fingers fumbling about his face, and pressing his temples as if they were bursting.

"No," he would gasp, "it wasn't always easy."

WHO KILLED WOMAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN KID M'COY'S APARTMENT?

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 23.

HE'S the same old Kid McCoy; the same old wise cracker. The police couldn't feaze him.

"So you still love 'em and leave 'em, do you, Kid?" they asked him.

"Oh, sure, sure," he came right back. "But I don't kill 'em. Get me straight, you guys. I didn't kill that woman. You say I was in her apartment. Sure I was! I paid the rent, didn't I? But she grabbed up the gun and shot herself, see? I didn't do it."

Then the Kid stuck out his jaw and narrowed his eyes as he used to do when he was fighting Tommy Ryan and Joe Choynski and the rest. They couldn't budge him an inch. What if he was in jail? What if they did say he shot Mrs. Theresa Mors? He'd been in scrapes over women before, the Kid had.

No, the police haven't been able to put anything over on Kid McCoy, so far. They're keeping him in jail here while detectives seek to learn who, besides McCoy, visited Mrs. Mors' apartment that night. Meanwhile, the Kid is sitting tight. Why, you know what he's doing? Writing his memoirs on a borrowed typewriter in his cell, cool as a cucumber. The Kid always did have nerve. "Maybe they will help someone else," he told the reporters. The Kid was always a great one for the uplift stuff.

From the latest evidence it begins to look bad for Kid McCoy. Mrs. Iva Martin, who was asleep in the apartment below Mrs. Mors' place, has told the police that she woke up and heard all that went on early last Wednesday morning.

"Oh, my God! Don't do that!" she said Mrs. Mors screamed. Then there was a shot.

After that, this witness has testified, she heard footsteps on the back stairs.

The Man by the Wall

"I am certain there were two persons running down the back stairs," she said. "They crashed through the back door making a loud noise. I ran to my kitchen window, which overlooks the back part of the apartment, and as I reached it I could distinctly hear running feet on the concrete of the back yard.

"I was still listening to these footsteps when I heard someone brush up against the wall of the next apartment house. I dashed to another window and saw a man leaning against this wall. He was facing me. I did not get a good look at his face, but I will know his figure and general appearance."

Mrs. Martin's story didn't track at all with the Kid's story about it being a case of suicide. Even detectives could see that. No woman would yell, "My God, don't do that!" and then kill herself. It stands to reason. But if Mrs. Martin queered the Kid's story she at least didn't give any damaging evidence against him.

The police took her to see the Kid and he didn't bat an eye. He leaned up against a wall while she gave him the once-over and she said: "No, that isn't the man I saw." Still, it looks bad for Kid McCoy.

The grand jury has indicted him. More than 30 witnesses were ready to testify. One of these was the Kid's own sister, Mrs. Jennie Thomas, who has told police of a conversation with McCoy the night of the murder, in which he said: "I just had to kill that woman." Another witness was Albert Mors, the dead woman's divorced husband, to whom she left all her money, more than $200,000, it is said. Left it to him "with love," too, so maybe the Kid hadn't stood so well with the lady of late. Other witnesses testified that the Kid had shot up Mors' store after the murder. They all made it pretty black for him, but the Kid's friends think he will get out of it. Kid McCoy always had good luck in breaking through mix-ups with women.

He has been married to seven women and every one of them divorced him. Not that the Kid—his real name is Norman E. Selby—cared about the divorces. Twice he married one of his wives over again, which caused some newspapers to print that he had been married nine times. That wasn't fair. The Kid was married only seven times, as the two extra remarriages don't count, he thinks.

Anyway, they wouldn't be kicking up such a fuss about this latest hard luck of the Kid's if he hadn't been a prominent prize fighter at one time, nor would anybody have paid so much attention to McCoy's personal affairs—his marriages and the times he was arrested—if he hadn't once been middleweight champion of the world. Just like the Kid often says, "Boys, it's hell to be great. They get you on the rise and on the fall and you're not on top long enough to matter." The Kid was always a great guy for philosophy.

In his prime Kid McCoy was just about the most popular champion in any class. Corbett and John L. and Lanky Bob were there, too, but for downright fighting meanness the Kid walked off with the fan's money any time.

The Kid's Reputation

Here's what Robert Edgren said about him once in the New York World:

"Kid McCoy was known as the cruelest man in the ring, was proud of his reputation and made a specialty of living up to it. Once his man was started, the Kid usually took his time in finishing the job. He could calculate an opponent's recuperating powers to an infinitesimal fraction. He would let his enemy of the moment recover just to the verge of being dangerous, then hit him hard enough to render him helpless again without quite knocking him out. The knockout blow would come when McCoy wearied of his cat-play.

"Against a very dangerous man the Kid naturally took fewer risks and tried to finish the fight as soon as possible, but he had a well-studied knack of delivering blows that cut and seemed never so happy as when inflicting a lot of damage. His sneer was famous. With his pale, tallowy face and that sneer, McCoy in the ring was a picture of ruthless cruelty."

That stuff got the public every time. The Kid knew it and played up. He'd take them from their seats shouting when he laid a man's eye open or tore his ear. It was bloody fighting and the fans ate it up.

The Kid was a self-made man, too. He was born in Rush County, Indiana, and ran away from home when he was 13. After knocking about railroad yards and laborers' camps over the country he showed up in Cleveland in 1894 and joined a fight manager's stable. Jimmy McGlade, Col. Jim Buckley and Frank Penny, leading Cleveland sports, looked him over and decided he was due to pass out from T. B. or anemia and would never make a fighter. But the Kid showed them differently.

The First Knockout

After winning several fights from prelimboys, the Kid suffered a spell from a swelled head. He was matched to fight Billy Steffers at the Cleveland Athletic Club. "I'll knock that stiff to hellangone," the Kid told his followers. "He won't last a round with me."

The note written by McCoy the night of the murder, which seems to indicate that he and Mrs. Mors might have had a suicide pact and that he welched on it after he saw the woman dying.

When they entered the ring McCoy sneered at Steffers and scowled. The gong sounded, but McCoy made no move toward his man. Instead he stood stock still and stuck out his jaw. "Hit me," he taunted. Sure enough, Steffers hit him and knocked him cold. The Kid was always a great joker.

But he made up for this mistake by fighting Steffers again and simply cutting him into raw meat. After this fight the Kid joined Tommy Ryan's camp. Ryan was then driving toward the welterweight championship.

Here the Kid came up against a tough proposition. He was one of Ryan's sparring partners and Tommy made the going rough for the hams he hired as punching bags. McCoy hated Ryan for the punishment he gave him and soon quit the camp, vowing to get even. "I'm gonna camp on this guy's trail and lick him some day," the Kid told his friends. And this is how he did it:

He went to Boston and fought several easy men, letting the word get out that he was about through because of consumption. Then he sent a challenge to Ryan, saying: "I know you can lick me, Tommy, but it'll make a good fight and we'll both clean up." This gave Ryan the idea that the Kid would be easy picking. So the champion signed to fight McCoy at Maspeth, L. I., March 2, 1896. The word had got around that it was a grudge fight for the middleweight title and thousands of fans turned out.

All McCoy's friends who saw that fight knew that he was a sharp, clever guy. He had fooled Tommy into thinking that he was weak from sickness and Tommy had neglected to train. Imagine the champ's face when he saw McCoy climb into the ring nicely ripe for the battle of his career! Ryan saw at once that he had been outcheated and that he'd be lucky to get off with a quick knockout. But that wasn't Kid McCoy's way of fighting. He meant to make Tommy pay for the cut lips and black eyes he had inflicted. The Kid was always sort of mean that way.

Well, they fought for 15 rounds and after the first one Ryan didn't have a chance. It was just a matter of watching the Kid slowly batter Ryan into a pulp. They didn't stop fights at the first show of blood in those days and Ryan was an ugly looking specimen when he was carried from the ring at the end of the fifteenth.

After this fight all the boys knew they'd have to watch Kid McCoy. The next time McCoy showed he could use his head was when he fought young Jim Stewart. The Kid knew that young Jim had it on him unless he outslicked him at the start.

"I knew I had a tough proposition," the Kid said afterwards, "so I figured I'd have to trick him." And this is how the Kid tricked him:

Once More McCoy Uses Trickery

The men were in the center of the ring and the referee was explaining about hitting with one hand free in the clinches. Although the Kid knew that Stewart understood the rule perfectly he pulled him aside, in an offhand way, and said: "Maybe you don't get this rule, Stewart. It goes like this:" And suddenly McCoy socked Stewart a terrific blow on the jaw. How was that for getting the jump? The sport writers went wild over that stunt. This trick bluffed the youngster and McCoy stood him off to no decision.

Another time the Kid used his brains was when he fought Jack Madden in England. He hadn't trained any too well for the fight and found Madden a tougher pug than he expected. Madden had McCoy groggy in the fourth round. Backing into his corner, the Kid took a knockdown, and while the referee was counting he reached for a bottle of whisky. He drank a heavy swig before the count of nine and was on his feet with new life in him. Before the bell he had punished Madden so terribly that a knockout was easy.

McCoy's great mistake was in becoming conceited and fighting out of his class. He took on heavyweights. Sailor Tom Sharkey was going great guns about this time and the Kid boasted he could lick him. That was just like the Kid. Always boasting. "He won't lay a glove on me and I'll bust his nose for him inside of six rounds," McCoy said. Just before the fight the referee, who admired the Kid, warned him that Sharkey was no egg. But McCoy wouldn't listen and went swaggering around the ring. Sharkey knocked him out in the tenth round.

Knocked Out by Corbett

In 1900 McCoy fought 'Gentleman Jim' Corbett. This was a mistake which the Kid fell into because he was jealous of Corbett's reputation for gentility. "I'm as genteel as him," the Kid would say, "and I'm a better fighter." They fought in New York and Corbett was accredited with a knockout, but the thing looked rotten. The fans thought the Kid had slipped something over; they didn't know just what.

From 1898 until 1911 he fought 46 times and lost only five fights. The Kid always had good publicity and was rated a "superman of the ring" in the sport sections. He used real good English and wasn't such a bad looker, and dressed up to snuff whenever he had money. Naturally the women fell for him.

"They like a guy with plenty of muscle and guts," he would tell the reporters who came to interview him. And they'd go back and write, "Kid McCoy says 'The ladies are attracted to a fighter, an athlete. They have been since the Greek games.'"

The Kid's marriage record is as follows:

Married Lottie Piehler in 1894. Divorced 1895.

Mrs. Julia Crosselman, 1897. Divorced 1900. Remarried 1901; divorced 1901; remarried in 1902 and divorced for the third and last time that year.

Indianola Arnold, 1903. Marriage annulled 1904.

Mrs. Estelle Ellis, 1905; divorced 1910.

Mrs. Edna Hein, 1911; divorced 1920.

Miss Dagmar Dahlgren, 1920; divorced 1920.

Miss Lottie Piehler was working in a millinery shop in Middletown, O., when the Kid met her. He met her one Thursday and she married him the next Wednesday. His friends didn't figure that they'd stay married long. The Kid had high ideas about women, and wanted to move in the best society. His first

LEMON JUICE BEST TO WHITEN SKIN

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It cannot irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It cannot be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

USE CANTHROX Shampoo

AFTER THE SWIM

Sunshine is an excellent tonic for the scalp, but it should not fall directly on the hair until the dampness is gone.

And in washing the hair you should be very careful about the cleansing preparation you use.

Beauty experts agree a cleanser made for all purposes will not do. You need one specially prepared for shampooing. Often the simplest preparation—one you can make yourself—such as a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, is the best. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear and lustrous, fluffy, beautiful hair results.

You can get canthrox at practically any good drug store.—Advertisement.

Cadum Ointment for Children's Skin Troubles

Cadum Ointment can be applied to the tender skin of infants and children suffering from tetter, rash, eczema, chafing and similar troubles. It stops the itching at once, and much suffering from skin troubles may be avoided by the timely use of this wonderful remedy. Cadum Ointment is also good for pimples, itch, blotches, scaly skin, eruptions, sores, scabs, cuts, burns, ringworm, etc.

WHO KILLED WOMAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN KID McCOY'S FLAT?

wife and he lived together three years, until the Kid saved some money from his fights. Then she went West and got a divorce.

"I told her she might as well go," the Kid explained to reporters. "She wasn't giving me the lovin' I was used to." The reporters went back and wrote, "Kid McCoy, meeting newspaper men yesterday, with quiet dignity said: 'My wife and I decided it was best for us to part.'" The Kid always got good publicity.

The next woman who fell in love with the Kid was Mrs. Julia Woodruff Crosselman of New York.

This is how McCoy described the meeting:

"I was showing in Brooklyn with the Pacific Mail troupe and was coming to New York on a car late one night when two toughs started to beat up the crew. With this lady present, too. I stepped in and finished it. The fair Julia—well, you know how it is—hero of the occasion and that kind of stuff, especially with Julia. We both got divorces and married."

Some class to the Kid. The second Mrs. Selby was well connected. They hit it off first-rate until the first divorce and off and on were friendly while they were remarrying and divorcing the next two times. Finally Mrs. Selby eloped to Japan with Ralph Thompson, a millionaire patron of the Kid's training camp.

He Philosophises.

The reporters came around and asked Kid McCoy about his philosophy of love. "Which? Aw, yeh. I get you. Sure I got ideas about it. Listen: There ain't nothin' to love, see? Not a thing, except you run around with a woman an' get to like her, see?" So the reporters went back and wrote: "Kid McCoy says 'Love is only a habit developed by association.'" That got a big laugh on the front page and it helped the Kid with his fans.

McCoy's third wife was an actress, Miss Indianola Arnold. In her suit for annulment, she alleged irregularities as to the marriage.

At this time the Kid was gradually getting more genteel. He had a swell farm at Saratoga, N. Y., where wealthy people came to take courses in physical culture. One of those patrons was Edward T. Ellis, a rich young Yale man. His fiancee, Miss Estelle Earle, often came to visit him while he was trying to win back his health and she saw Kid McCoy in big white sweater and running trunks. That finished her. Shortly after she had married Ellis he died, and in a few months she became the fourth Mrs. Norman Selby.

The Kid did not defend her suit for divorce. A football player had trailed him through the tenderloin and had got admission to McCoy's Oriental suite in a Broadway hotel. What she saw there gave Mrs. Selby ample grounds.

"How can a guy promise to love a woman all his life?" the Kid complained, when reporters interviewed him.

McCoy was flying high. His next wife was Mrs. Edna Valentine Hein, an heiress to millions. This marriage lasted nine years, from 1911 to 1920. Then Mrs. Selby sued setting forth a visit her husband had made to a hotel with a pretty blonde.

"Good Lord," ejaculated the Kid, disgustedly, when reporters interviewed him on the failure of his sixth marriage. "My wives all married me to reform me, see? That was their big mistake. They wouldn't like me after I reformed. T'hell with that reform stuff." This paragraph, judiciously deleted, was added to Kid McCoy's marriage maxims.

By this time the Kid had got so famous the movies wanted him. He made a hit out at Hollywood immediately. His characterization of the brutal father in "Broken Blossoms" was praised by all the movie magazines. The Kid was there when it came to bad-acting, all right.

In 1920 Kid McCoy, at the age of 49, married Miss Dagmar Dahlgren, a dancer and motion picture actress.

The sixth Mrs. McCoy said on the occasion of her successor's marriage, "Mr. McCoy is a good fellow, but he's not the kind of a man who should ever marry. He belongs to the public."

The seventh Mrs. McCoy decided that she was right before many months. Her charge was infidelity.

Once more Kid McCoy was called upon to air his views on marriage and women. His talk ran about like this: "Do I believe in divorce? I sure do. Women are the only ones that like marriage. It gives 'em meal tickets and they get a home for their old age, see? The more women you know the less you want to marry any one of them, see?"

The reporters wrote:

"Kid McCoy says: 'Am I in favor of divorce? I think you can count me among the chief defenders of this important liberty. Women are the real defenders of marriage. It provides them with meal tickets and old-age insurance. The ladies are all so charming nowadays a man soon develops that modern disease, elastic heart. Don't forget that women suffer from it, too. The more women you know the less you become permanently fond of any one.'"

These wise cracks got a big laugh from the public.

"The same old Kid," they said around cigar stores and saloons.

It was announced in 1922 that McCoy would wed Mrs. Jacqueline MacDowell of Baltimore as his eighth wife. But when on her way to the wedding Mrs. MacDowell found a telegram by mistake. This telegram, addressed to the Kid and signed "Red Head," discouraged the lady.

A few days after she broke the engagement McCoy filed petition in bankruptcy, listing $9000 debts and $200 assets. He always had been a free spender and his various wives had taken his money as alimony.

Today he's the same old Kid. Lucille Joy, hostess at a Los Angeles cafe, has told police that before his arrest in the Mors murder case Kid McCoy had often boasted to her.

"Just before I married my third wife," she says he told her, "a girl I'd been out with a few times shot herself in front of a cafe in New York when she saw me with another woman. They found my picture on her, but the case was hushed up."

And again: "A girl jumped into the Hudson when I told her I was going to marry my sixth wife. They never found the body."

And finally, "Y'see, I believe in lovin' and leavin' 'em."

Sure. He's the same old Kid.

Three-Story Structure in Block Changes Hands— Purchaser Not Na

By Berry Moore.

An interesting deal of the week involved the three-story building at 110-12 North Eighth street, embraced in the Stratford Hotel block at the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets. While the consideration was not announced, the building was listed at $100,000.

The identity of the purchaser has not been disclosed, but title to the property has been taken tentatively in the name of W. E. Buckman, presumably a lay figure in the transaction. William Bagnell was the grantor. W. W. Butts, president of the Butts Realty Co., handled the transaction.

The building occupies a lot 40 by 127 feet, bounded on the south by the east-west alley of this block. Though a separate building, it forms an integral part of the Stratford Hotel, which has a 12-year lease of the two upper floors. The first floor is occupied by a barber shop.

The Feldman Realty Co. has a 99-year lease of the Stratford Hotel building and site proper, comprising 50 by 127 feet at the corner of Eighth and Pine, owned by the Bradford estate, and 19 by 127 feet adjoining on Eighth street, owned by Thomas Dunn.

Planned New Hotel.

About two years ago the Feldman Realty Co. announced plans for replacing the present Stratford Hotel building with a lofty hotel structure, but nothing further was heard of the project. The lot acquired through the Butts Realty Co. is essentially a part of the site embracing the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets, which otherwise would not be available for hotel purposes on an extensive scale. Butts did not advance the idea that the plot had been purchased on behalf of promoters with hotel plans for the corner.

This site, including these three buildings, is regarded as constituting one of the most eligible in the central business district for an elaborate hotel structure. It was formerly held by Isaac T. Cook under the 99-year lease under which Feldman acquired it.

Concensus of opinion of realty circles is that the plot in question has been quietly bought by speculators who know that it soon will be wanted to complete a site for a large hotel, or for an office building for the corner, occupying as it does the northeast corner of the alley of this quarter of the block, which gives it a highly strategic value in connection with the corner.

This quarter of the business district has been one of the most buoyant centers of the real estate market during the last year, especially on Eighth and on Pine.

Industrial Loan Buys Building.

The Industrial Loan Co. recently purchased the Wellington Hotel Building at 715-17 Pine street, which eventually is to be converted for its occupancy. The transaction was effected by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, which had just concluded the sale of the northeast corner of Ninth and Pine streets, for the account of the Industrial Loan Co., the transaction recording a substantial profit on an investment of only a few months standing.

Through John W. Gibson, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, N. Pelligreen president of the Pelligreen Construction Co., acquired from the John E. McKinney estate, 42x60 feet at 818-20-22 Pine street, adjoining 51x60 feet at 816 Pine street, which he already owned. A fireproof office building with stores has been erected on the combined frontage.

Pelligreen made a strategical move when he acquired the McKinney lot, the adjoining lot at the southeast corner of Ninth and Pine streets, being only 21 feet 4 inches by 64 feet, which would not be available for a large improvement. The Pelligreen holding, which the Pelligreen holding, which now is the dominant factor in the situation, so far as the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets is concerned.

Several months ago the Security National Bank bought the building at 316 North Eighth street, adjoining the bank's quarters, which is to be enlarged to include that building, while the southwest corner of Eighth and St. Charles streets was acquired by Preston Bradshaw, architect, for the 18-story Mayfair Hotel in course of construction there.

Three-Story Structure in Stratford Hotel Block Changes Hands—Identity of Purchaser Not Named.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports negotiations in full swing for the stores comprising the ground floor of Loew's State Theater building at the northeast corner of Eighth street and Washington avenue, the prospective tenants being of a character that will add diversification to this section, in addition to that given by this theater, which is expected to heighten the metropolitan atmosphere of the city.

Contracts of sale have been executed for a skyscraper in the central business district but details will not be available until organization has been perfected of the syndicate, which is to acquire it. While the building is being acquired on a conservative basis, the price to be paid under the sale contracts, will give the present owner a liberal profit, he having only recently acquired the property at a relatively low price. It is understood, however, that he will retain the fee to the site, which he holds separate from the building.

There is much speculation as to where the Shuberts will buy for a site for a theater to replace the Shubert-Jefferson, at the southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street, which is to be taken over by the Union Electric Light and Power Co. to provide for extension of its offices. It is understood that the Shuberts have been casting about in the vicinity of Grand and Lindell boulevards for a site for a new theater structure, which is to surpass, it is declared, the most sumptuous west of New York. According to reports, the Shuberts, for a while, had an option on the old Scruggs homestead on the north side of Olive street, just west of Grand boulevard and the Beers Hotel, for this project, bu tne delays of the Probate Court, where the estate was lodged, made it necessary to forego this site.

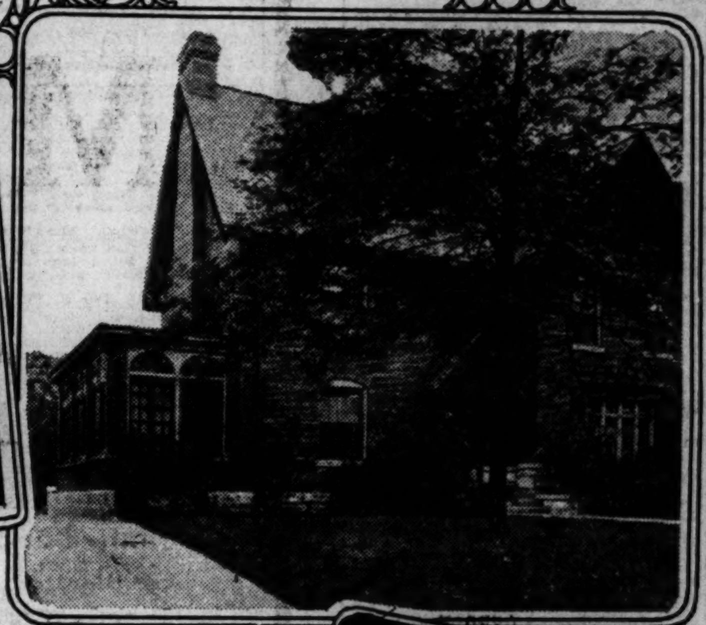
SHERWOOD FOREST HOUSE AT THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF SHERWOOD AND BAKER DRIVES, WEBSTER GROVES, CONSTRUCTED FOR E C RAUTH



5376 WATERMAN PURCHASED BY J C JONES

NEW HOME OF E. C. RAUTH IS OF COLONIAL ARCHITECTURE

The new residence of E. C. Rauth at Sherwood and Baker drives, Webster Groves, is one of the most attractive in that section. It is reminiscent of New England colonial houses, with wide clapboards overhanging second story walls and weathered shingle roof, relieved with green blinds. The garage is grouped to the house by covered porte-cochere. All principal rooms have wood-burning fire places, and the hall has wrought iron grille hand rail. Rooms are paneled and are to have hand-blocked colonial scenic panels.

The house was designed by Maritz & Young, architects.

BUILDING AND LOAN CAPITAL INCREASED

20 Per Cent of Total in Missouri Made Gain, Semiannual Report Shows.

The semiannual report for the State Finance Commissioner from all building and loan associations of Missouri, including the larger institutions in St. Louis, Kansas City, and St. Joseph, will disclose the fact that fully 20 per cent increased their working capital during the last fiscal year by sums ranging from $15,000 to $2,000,000.

Fourteen of the 38 building and loan associations of St. Louis city and county are capitalized for $1,000,000 or over; two for $2,000,000 or over; three for $3,000,000 or over; one for $4,000,000; four for $5,000,000 but under $6,000,000, and one which has its main headquarters in the State for $100,000,000.

A year ago 224 associations, the major portion of which are members of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations, had assets totaling $75,376,038. The value of the installment stock was then officially placed by the State Finance Commissioner at $37,689,826, and that of the full paid or prepaid stock at $19,526,929, or a total of $57,216,755.

Advance information from numerous larger associations of the State, taken from statistics compiled from their reports, suggests that the total resources then will reach $93,000,000. The value of the installment stock, figured on the same basis, is placed at $46,500,000, of that full paid or prepaid at $23,300,000, an approximate total of $69,800,000.

The State Finance Commissioner will base his 1924 official report to the Governor on the standing of the 224 associations of Missouri on this coming official return, to be issued in printed form at the close of the year.

The September issue of the Missouri Building & Loan Advocate, the official publication of the Missouri State League of Building & Loan associations will be read for distribution at the end of the week.

The St. Louis Incorporated League of Building and Loan Associations, A. F. Leonhardt, has its headquarters in the International Life Building.

Officers of the Midwest Savings & Loan Association announce that on authority of Secretary of State Becker that by a unanimous vote of its stockholders, the company has increased its capital stock from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Federal Reserve Bank Has A Self-Supporting Wall

Setting of Massive Blocks of Bedford Stone Is Watched by Many Pedestrians.

Many pedestrians are stopping to watch the ticklish task of setting wall stones in the new Federal Reserve Bank Building, Broadway and Locust street. Some of these stones are said to be the largest ever set in St. Louis, weighing as much as 15 tons, with faces 4 by 16 feet. The blocks are Bedford stone from Indiana, planed and cut like huge chunks of wood.

The walls are self supporting, instead of hanging from the reinforced concrete framework of the structure, as is usually the case. This allows the use of smaller exterior columns than usual. The picture shows how the stones are set by derrick and hand power, and how frames are fixed for the concrete floors, as well as giving an indication of the massive beauty the building will have.

Mauran, Russell & Crowell are the architects also and are directing construction of the $6,000,000 home for the B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co. on land to the north of the Federal Reserve Bank Building, embracing both the southeast corner of Broadway and St. Charles street and the southeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue. The south half of the site, extending through to Fourth street and including the southwest corner of Fourth and St. Charles streets.

Goodfellow Park—Jennings

McLaran Av. and Goodfellow Boulevard

Take Bellefontaine car at Grand and Florissant and transfer to motorbus at Robin Ave. loop. Get off at Jennings Road and McLaran Avenue, or motor out Goodfellow Boulevard direct to McLaran Avenue.

The last and choicest remainder of the famous old Southern Plantation of John Jennings has been subdivided and is now being sold at only

$15 Per Foot

One-third cash and balance $10 per month

Churches, schools, stores within one or two blocks; $100,000 worth of newly constructed brick and stucco bungalows face this property. Absolutely nothing in this vicinity at anything near this low price.

Only 64 Lots—One-Third Sold

This subdivision offers the best opportunity for quick profits that I have ever seen. Although the property has only been on the market two weeks, one-third of the lots have been sold.

Right now values are advancing owing to the Goodfellow Boulevard extension recently provided for by city ordinance, and for which taxes have already been paid.

There is positively no property in this vicinity today that can be bought at anywhere near my prices. Investigate this opportunity today.

In Studio and Gallery

"AUTUMN GOLD," the landscape painting by Edward Burgess Butler of Chicago, which has been presented to the City Art Museum by Mr. Joseph Barroll of Butler Brothers Wholesale Company in St. Louis, is recorded in the summer bulletin of the museum, among important acquisitions. The painting is now installed in Gallery 25 of the Museum, where Albert Groll's "Enchanted Mesa," Frank Brangwyn's "Return of Columbus" and other prominent pictures are also hung.

The painting by Mr. Butler is characterized by its candor, its simplicity, its directness. Its subject is frank and the handling is swift, clear and outspoken. Two immense forest beauties grow as if in relief before a purpling hill in the distance. In green and gold dignity they stand as if for comparison. No underlying subtleties nor veiled significances are to be found in this painting. Nature's poetry, often found by painters and poets in rosy dawns or blue-gray twilights, is rather taken for granted in the strong, midday sunlight. No sensitive shadows in tender tones reduce the strength of the picture; instead, forceful contrasts of green and gold and clear-cut outlines bespeak the direct manner of the artist. The painting, rather than a lyric, is best designated as "a portrait of two trees." Mr. Butler's colour is as clear and sure as is his manner of painting. Few modulations of the predominating scheme have been employed.

Two additional opportunities for art study are included in the classes offered in the Extension Division of Washington University for the following year. A course on The Principles of Art Appreciation is offered under Mr. Muerpel, director of the School of Fine Arts. This series of talks is expected to prove exceedingly popular among club women and those interested in general cultural opportunities, as well as teachers and educators. Courses in Commercial Design under Mr. [illegible]son, Drawing for Illustration under Mr. Carpenter and a Life Class with Mr. Geotsch complete the series of classes to be held in Fine Art Division.

Five classes in interior decorating, beginning at the elementary principles and continuing through practical courses in design, freehand drawing and instrumental drawing will be conducted as previously under Professors [illegible] and Valenti.

Nine courses in architectural understanding and drawing are again presented under Professors [illegible], Valenti, Fitch and Chaffee.

The total number of these courses offered signify the additional interest being displayed in St. Louis, in pursuit of art knowledge.

The Kocian galleries at the present time are occupied by the group of paintings by Tom P. Barnett which belong in the north lounge of the Hotel Jefferson. The pictures have been removed from the hotel during a period of redecoration, and will remain on exhibition for several weeks at Kocian's until they are returned.

Oscar Berninghaus' "Sun Showers, Taos," which will be remembered from a past Guild show, was the first prize picture from Missouri at the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia. The first prize of $100 was awarded this painting for its general superiority. Second prize, $75, went to Kathryn Cherry's painting, "Forest Park in Winter." "March Seventeenth," by Tom P. Barnett, received third prize for oil, $50. Fourth prize, $25, went to Frank Nuderscher's painting, "Glowing Hills." In the division of water colors and pastels, Mr. Gustave Goetsch's water color received first prize of $50; second prize of $25 going to Carl Gentry of Columbia, Mo.

Twenty-five jewelry designs selected from those submitted in competition for the 1923-1924 Cartier scholarship prize of $1000 comprise a small exhibition which will remain on display in gallery 32 of the City Art Museum until Sept. 2. The designs shown here are very elaborate and are suitable to execution in the most costly materials: Platinum, white, yellow and green gold, diamonds, white and black pearls and other precious stones. Several designs are for enamel jewelry, very [illegible] according to modern taste, yet rather interestingly reminiscent of the antique enameling from which they take their inspiration. Thus it will be seen that the designs are not overly remarkable, their distinction being gained, when executed, by the splendor of the materials and the fineness of workmanship.

The competition in which these designs were entered is open to any craftsman, jewelry worker or designer in the United States, the scholarship prize of $1000 being offered for the best jewelry design of the year by Mr. Cartier of New York. Another prize is offered for the year 1924-1925, May being the final month of the contest.

"The Art Center" of New York is responsible for this selection of the drawings having been formed into a traveling exhibit available for display in art institutions. Details of the contest may be secured through that society.

Fred Gray, a former St. Louis painter now residing in [illegible], Cal., has recently completed a significant portrait commission. Before Mr. Gray left this city, the majority of his attention was given to figure painting, but life in California has turned his interest to landscape, as well, and he is now in the process of assembling a number of his landscape and figure paintings to form an exhibition which is to be held in New York in the fall.

Agnes Lodwick, one of the [illegible] local painters from whom splendid work is predicted, has spent the summer studying among the colony of painters at Nantucket. [illegible] the end of each summer working season, an exhibition of the artistic accomplishments of the season is held, and in this year's display, recently, five of Miss Lodwick's pictures were included, two of them being among the first sold.

SEAT OF OUR GOVERNMENT FOR A DOZEN DAYS

This is all there is to it—the entire village of Plymouth, Vt., and "those blue remembered hills" of home where, just now, President Coolidge and his family are spending their vacation.

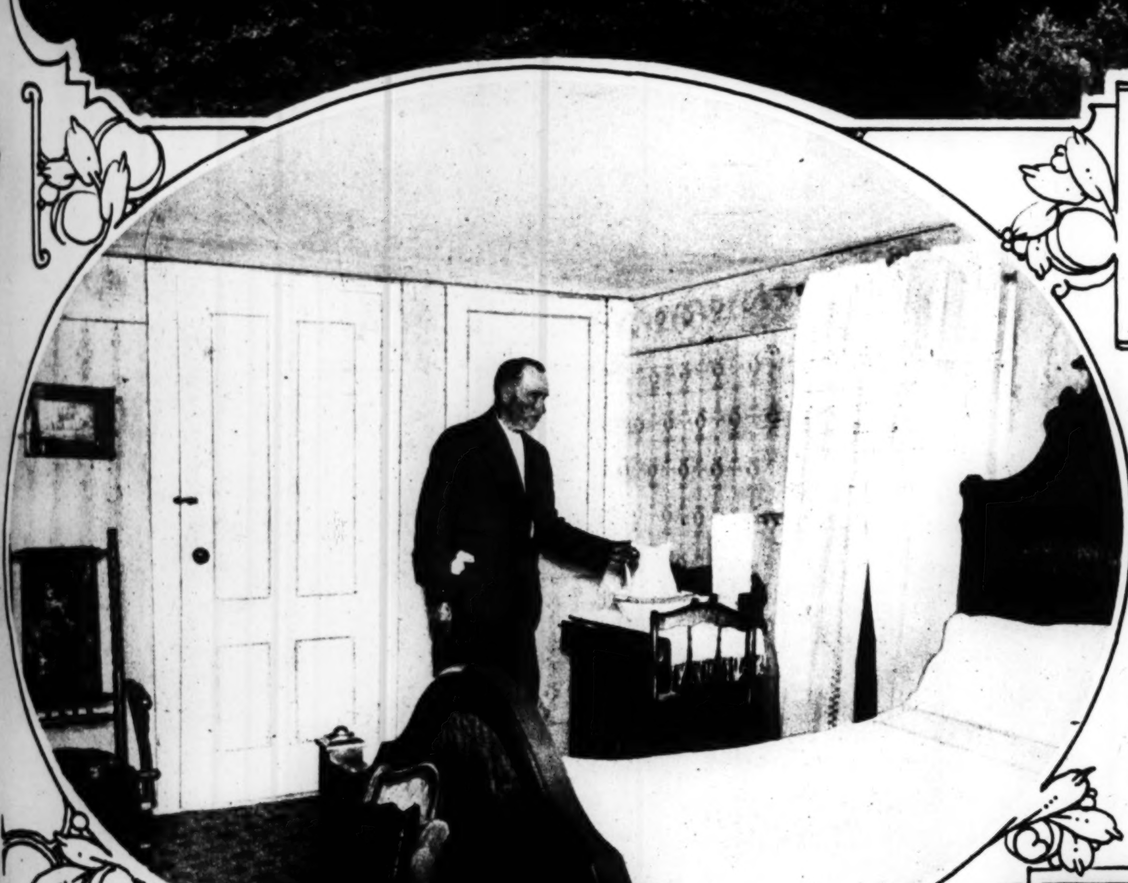
This photograph was taken just before President Coolidge and his working staff arrived and got down to the business of administering the executive affairs of the United States of America for a dozen days in this room above the village postoffice and store at Plymouth, Vt., in the house where the President was born. The pine tables are covered with oilcloth. Simplicity is the keynote.



Col. John Coolidge saw to it that things were ship-shape for the arrival of his son, the President of the United States, even to filling the water pitcher in the bedroom now being occupied by the President during his brief vacation. Col. Coolidge's present home, where the President and his family are visiting, is across the street from the Plymouth Postoffice, where the "summer capital" is located in a room upstairs.

In the room above the postoffice at Plymouth the President and his assistants are running the United States just now. President Coolidge was born in this building. That sign on the big tree reads: "Home Town Coolidge Club, Plymouth, Vt. Join Here."

In the center is Miss Gladys V. Trowbridge of Maplewood, N. J., who will serve as Queen Titania, reigning over the thirty-third annual baby parade and carnival on the famous boardwalk at Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 27. At the left is Princess Flora, otherwise Miss Evelyne Kane of Asbury Park, and at the right is Miss Helen Golden of Princeton, N. J., who will be Princess Cinderella at the big event.

on teeth—learn how millions now combat it

It is film that makes teeth dingy, film that ruins teeth. Now millions fight it daily, and the glistening teeth you see everywhere show what that means. Accept this test and watch your teeth improve.

The great enemy

Film is the teeth's great enemy—that viscous film you feel. Under old-way brushing much of it clings and stays. It becomes discolored, forms dingy coats, then teeth lose their beauty.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Few escaped those troubles under old ways of teeth cleaning.

Dental science has lately found two ways to fight that film. One disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities have proved those methods effective. So a new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Leading dentists everywhere advise it, and careful people of some 50 nations use this method now.

Many new effects

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant. Thus every use gives new power to those great tooth-protecting factors.

Send the coupon for a test. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film coats disappear.

As long as you live you'll be glad that you did this. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

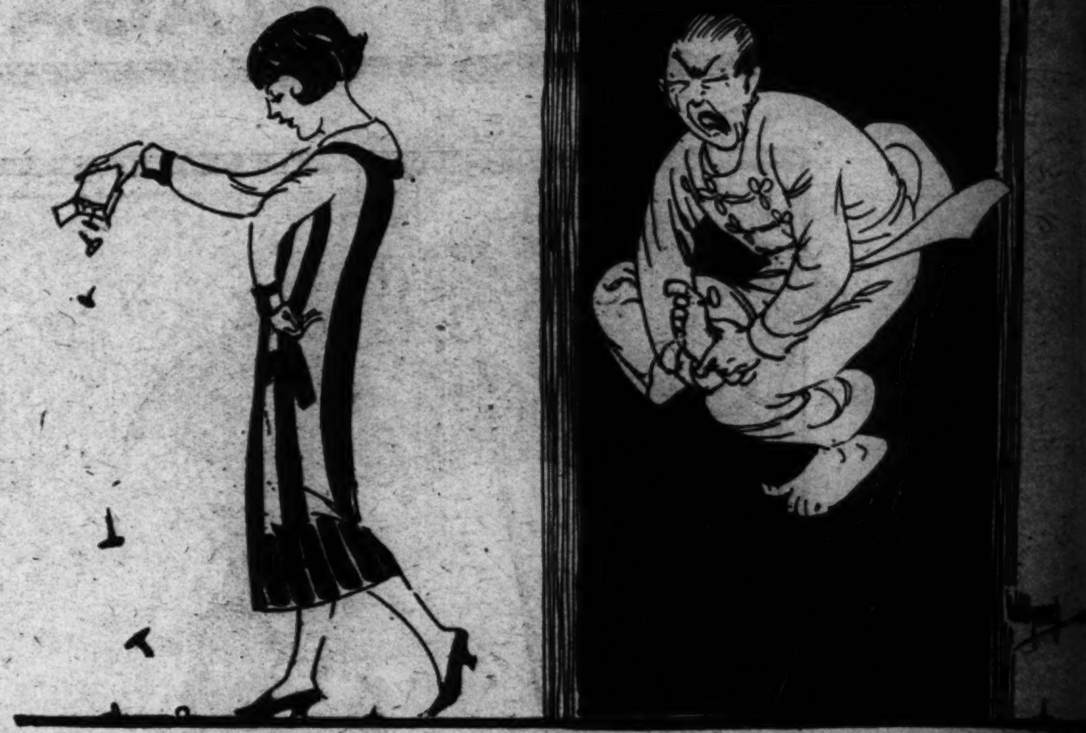
Things They Tell The Divorce Judg

A husband complained that his wife strewed tacks on floor so he would step on them with bare feet—A wife removed the obnoxious crunch of celery by boiling it, and mate hit her in the eye—Another woman sued because of her husband's shaggy whiskers and the strange objects which tumbled out of them—Other causes of action have included bobbed hair, eating with a knife, too many jazz records and refusal to take poodle walking :: ::



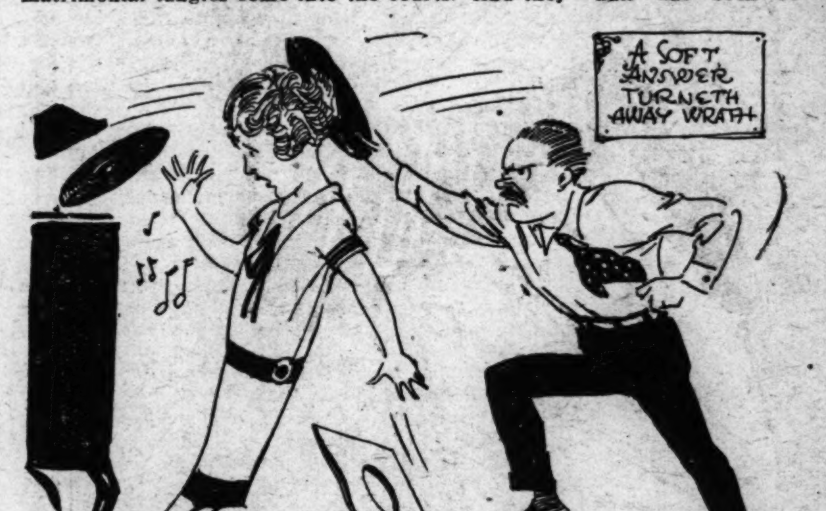
"Judge, she throws tacks on the floor so I will step on them with my bare feet."

WITH one slash, Alexander the Great enhanced his reputation considerably, and, at the same time, gave posterity an example of how a difficult knot should be handled. It is true that he made a few preliminary fumblings with the Gordian kink. But when he discovered that the intricate interlacings might baffle him permanently he unsheathed the cutlery and gave the knot a side swipe which eventually landed it in a lasting historical niche.

Today the divorce court Judges, the modern Alexanders, are confronted by knots far more complicated than the Gordian. All are tied in the matrimonial noose, and the Judge must decide whether or not to ease the strain.

Judges, no doubt, in many divorce cases would like to emulate the example of Alexander the Great, but modern methods of coping with knots have lost some of their old simplicity. The lawyers for the principals now do the preliminary fumbling, and the Judge, if he sees fit, delivers the "coup de grace" when he hands one of the aggrieved persons a final decree.

Every day, in all sections of the United States, matrimonial tangles come into the courts. And they come in increasing numbers each year.



A SOFT ANSWER TURNETH AWAY WRATH

Wearied of jazz, the exasperated husband finally said it with music, in the form of a handy record.

Those who wish to attain their "before-taking" status present a wide and varied collection of reasons. Here are a few which remove the curse from the more sordid charges. Some of them even provided a few chuckles for the presiding Judge.

"Your Honor," complained a seedy-looking little man, "I want a divorce from my wife. She throws tacks on the floor so I will step on them with my bare feet."

"In other words," remarked the Judge, who is not above making a monstrous pun, "she attacks you?"

"No, no! Your Honor," replied the man, "she never hit me with nothing. She just puts tacks on the floor."

"Well, my good man," said the Judge, "you go home, and keep your shoes on as much as possible until I have time to think this over. Come and see me in about a week."

As this man never returned, the Judge figured that an amicable agreement had been made between husband and wife.

"The absence of shoes," he explained, "will sometimes provoke anyone to scatter pointed hardware."

A woman in an Eastern state recently sued her husband for a divorce because he ate celery. She testified that he ate it three times a day, and that she couldn't stand the noise any longer. It was making her a nervous wreck. She declared that, when she attempted to remove the obnoxious crunch from the celery by boiling it, her spouse registered his dissatisfaction with the cooked product by popping her in the eye.

And here was her poor eye, and there was her contemptible husband, and what was the Judge going to do about it?

It is rather unusual for the husband of a pretty New York showgirl to send someone else to meet her each night after the show. One particular Follies girl thought so, too, and as a result the negligent husband was given an opportunity of telling the Judge what he did with his evenings.

Bobbed hair and shaggy whiskers have brought many a couple into court.

The bobbing of hair has been responsible for the filing of innumerable divorce suits. As this style of hair dressing became the accepted mode among women, a very perceptible increase of separation demands was noted throughout the country. Hundreds of irate husbands rushed to court because the wives chose to have their locks shorn.

The wives waited complacently for the Judge to render his decision and, in most cases, when the decision arrived the defendants had the chance to give their spouses an added laugh. Occasionally the laugh would cause another divorce suit. But this time the wife would file it and the grounds would be brutality.

At least one case is on record where an unhappy woman clamored for separation papers because her husband wouldn't part with his shaggy beard. She told the Judge she felt she was married to a member of the zoo; and she complained of the many times she was humiliated when they went out in company together because of the strange objects which would come tumbling out of her husband's whiskers.

The Judge refused the woman a decree, but cautioned the husband that he must keep his beard well combed.

"All right, Your Honor," the man replied, "but you tell my wife to quit calling me Mr. Ostermoor, or the Broom-faced Kid."

Snoring, too, has caused enough unhappiness and loss of sleep to warrant many women in seeking freedom from mates who run the scale on their nasal organs.

Some time ago, in Baltimore, a weeping and angry woman insisted she be given a divorce because her husband, the brute, refused to take her pet poodle for a walk. The Judge, a person of discernment and one who could see the fitness of things, offered a decree to the man. Pets, not loved by the spouse, have figured in other cases, too.

A Chicago woman, with social ambitions, asked to be divorced from her husband because he ate with his knife, and because he violated other accepted rules of etiquette. Just what rung of the social ladder she was [illegible] upon can be surmised when she made this statement:

"Judge, I've traveled [illegible] enough with that tonsil stabber. He ain't doing me no good, and I don't like his looks any too well, either."

"To cut them or not to cut them."

A New York man recently was given the choice of either cutting his toenails or paying alimony. He chose to [illegible] his toenails.

A North Carolina man was haled into court to give reasons why his wife shouldn't have a divorce because of cruelty on his part. He was charged with beating her over the head with victrola records.

"I never got a moment's rest at home," he said to the Judge. "My wife would play jazz records incessantly. Finally, unable to stand it any longer, I did give her a few playful taps with a record."

"Oh, I see," drawled the Judge, "you were just saying it with music."

Cases similar to the foregoing are aired in the courts every day. Sometimes the Judge, playing the role of mediator, is able to persuade the disgruntled husband or wife that the grievances are but imaginary ones, and a reconciliation is effected. In other instances the Judge is unable to reason with the principals and the split is final.

Since the war the dockets of divorce courts have been bulging with suits. In San Francisco alone [illegible] suits were filed during the fiscal year ending June 30. The same situation exists in other large cities and the small ones, too.

Americans who obtain their divorces in foreign countries swell the total of decrees by quite a [illegible]

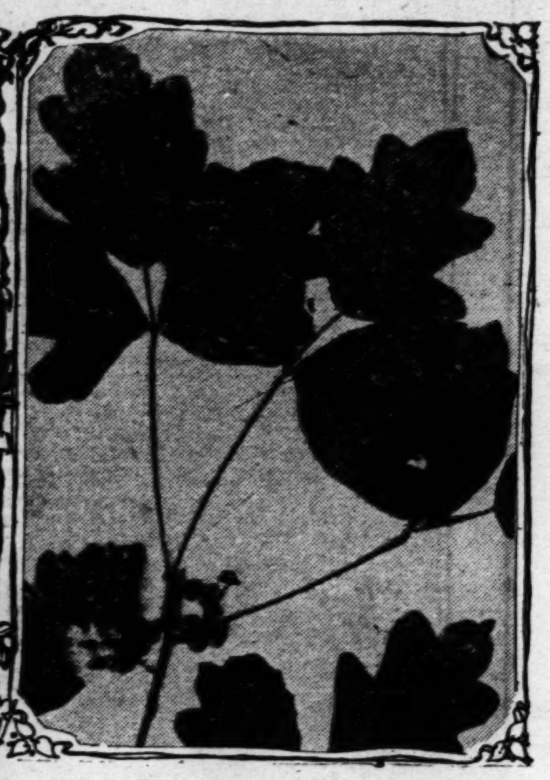
At Last, A Remedy for Poison Ivy

"Iron Treatment" Neutralizes Harm of Woodland Pest

Poison ivy, the most common scourge of the woods

It's cheap, the materials can be bought at the nearest drug store and anybody can make it—Scientist, after thorough study and experimentation, finds that a five per cent solution of ferric chloride, in half-and-half mixture of alcohol and water or glycerine and water, is a sure cure—Also, if face and hands are bathed in it before going to a place where ivy grows, no ill effects can follow.



Poison sumac, which grows in bogs and wet places.

WHEN a scientist, after long research, evolves a cure or a preventive that conquers a deadly disease, he receives, justly, great acclaim. Insulin, for example, has made its discoverers famous forever, for the Goliath of diabetes is no more, and Banting, McLeod, Best and the other early workers have saved—not slain—their thousands.

But there are other Davids, conquerors of other terrors, who go unsung, simply because their Goliaths were pests that have seldom killed their victims, but only tormented them more or less grievously. Yet, where the deadly diseases have slain their thousands, these lesser plagues have afflicted their tens of thousands; and surely the men who overcome them deserve high praise for benefiting many people at least a little.

It is for this kind of service that Dr. James B. McNair is being acclaimed by medical men, by botanists and by rovers of the woods, for he has overcome poison ivy. Working at the University of Chicago and the University of California, he has made a thorough study of the effects of the poison, and of the methods by which it is spread.

He has found out its chemical nature, and having discovered this has been able to devise simple and sure means for neutralizing it, thereby robbing the dreaded vine of its terror. And finally, he suggests better methods of treatment for those so unfortunate as to have become poisoned despite the new means for avoiding such a calamity.

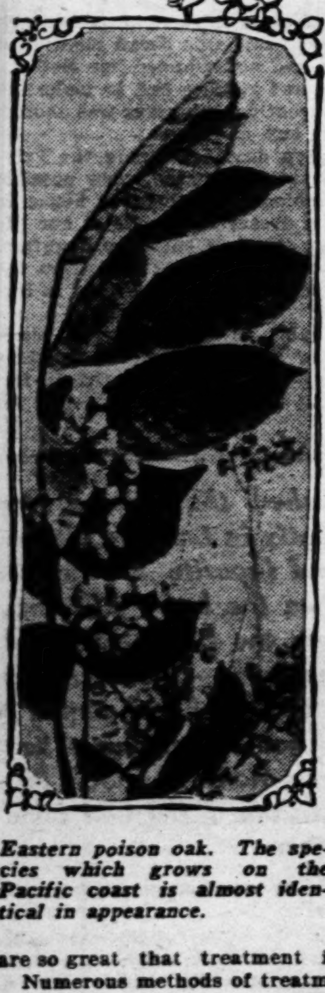
Of all woodland pests this plant, and its kindred species, poison oak and poison summac, are the most hated and dreaded. Except for those fortunate persons who are naturally immune to its effects, it requires only the slightest contact with the leaves of the plant, or with the sap from cut or broken branches, to cause the most painful irritation and itching of the skin.

Some persons are so sensitive that merely handling things that have come into contact with poison ivy, like garden tools or the clothing of someone who has walked through a poison ivy patch, will give rise to a case of poisoning.

The extreme sensitiveness of many people to even the slightest contact has given rise to the widespread opinion, at times held even by scientific workers, that the mere "breath" of the plant could poison people, and that if the plant were burned the smoke carried the poison. Dr. McNair, however, showed conclusively that the poisoning is not due to the evaporation of some volatile substance.

In one of his experiments he fastened a glass vessel containing a leaf of poison ivy against the body of a susceptible person, in such a way that the leaf was close to, but not in actual contact with, the skin. There were no results; but when the experiment was repeated, with the leaf in actual contact, poisoning followed. He also showed, by the use of smoke filters, that it is not the smoke but probably particles of leaf in the soot, that carries the poison when the vines are burned.

Further studies showed that the actual poisonous principle is a nonvolatile substance contained in the resinous sap of the plant, and that the only way poisoning can occur is to get a trace of the sap on one's person, either by direct contact with the plant or by contact with some object that has in its turn been rubbed against the plant.



Eastern poison oak. The species which grows on the Pacific coast is almost identical in appearance.

Then indeed the consequences are serious enough. There may follow a period of several hours in which no symptoms are observed, but sooner or later the afflicted place turns red and begins to itch intolerably. Later, blisters may appear. One attack does not confer immunity, as with some diseases; on the contrary, it usually leaves the victim more susceptible than ever. Left to itself, the trouble will pass away in time, but the discomfort and suffering to the patient are so great that treatment is usually demanded.

Numerous methods of treatment for ivy poisoning have been used in the past. There has been no real cure, and no real preventive that would enable one to "dope himself up" before starting on a picnic or a hike, and to go ahead and have a good time without fear of consequences. Dr. McNair has supplied both a remedy for the already poisoned and a preventive by which the prudent may forestall any chance of poisoning.

He proceeded in truly scientific fashion, by first catching his poison. There has always been a great deal of dispute as to what causes ivy poisoning. Various scientists and physicians have claimed that the active principle in the plant is a volatile oil, a heavy oil, a resin, an acid, and a dozen other kinds of things. Various experiments and analyses have tended to bear out one or the other of these theories, but no conclusive results have ever been reached.

Dr. McNair set to work with a lot of poison ivy leaves, extracting and distilling. He put his material through five different steps, each time getting nearer to a pure extract. Each time his distillate was nonpoisonous. This put a quietus on the idea that the poison, whatever it may be, is volatile.

In the end, he had a gummy, brown substance that was poisonous.

With this residue he went to work. First he tried to analyze it, and though it resisted complete chemical investigation, he found out enough to set it down as belonging to the hydrocarbon series, like the heavier, nonvolatile oils. Then he tried mixing it with various solutions to find what would combine with it to form a neutral, nonpoisonous substance. He found that various salts of lead and zinc, which had been used as poison ivy remedies in the past, did neutralize it to a certain extent, but not completely.

The best and most effective proved to be salts of iron, particularly ferric chloride.

This proved to be an absolutely complete neutralizing agent, leaving no trace of poisonous qualities in the toxin solution when it was added. Dr. McNair therefore suggests as a means of preventing ivy poisoning the use of a five per cent solution of ferric chloride in half-and-half mixture of alcohol and water, or glycerine and water. If the hands and face are bathed freely in this solution either before or immediately after one goes into a region known or suspected to contain poison ivy or its kindred plants, no ill effects can follow.

The beauty of this remedy is that it is cheap, that the materials are easy to get at any drug store, and that anyone can make it. And it is nonpoisonous and absolutely safe. Only GRAIN alcohol must be used. Any other kind is poisonous, even externally, and would cause grave harm.

This "iron treatment" for the prevention of ivy poisoning has received thorough tests. The botany classes at the University of Chicago made frequent trips into the Indiana dunes at the southern end of Lake Michigan, where poison ivy and poison sumac abound. Up until the time when Dr. McNair's treatment was announced, students frequently developed cases of ivy poisoning, and one of the professors, Dr. George E. Fuller, being exceedingly sensitive to the weed, almost invariably carried a small crop of blisters on his hands throughout the botanizing season.

Since adopting the "iron treatment" ivy poisoning has become a thing unknown in the botany department at Chicago University.

Dr. Fuller has developed a modification of his own on the "iron treatment," using a strong solution of ferrous sulphate in water instead of the ferric chloride in water-alcohol. There seems to be no definite strength of solution—anything short of saturation will do. Dr. Fuller states that the sulphate solution is cheaper to make than the chloride and that it keeps better. The method of use and the results obtained are the same. Sodium sulphite is another remedy recommended by Dr. McNair and tested, with good results, in the Chicago botany classes.

Dr. McNair's treatment of poisoning cases that

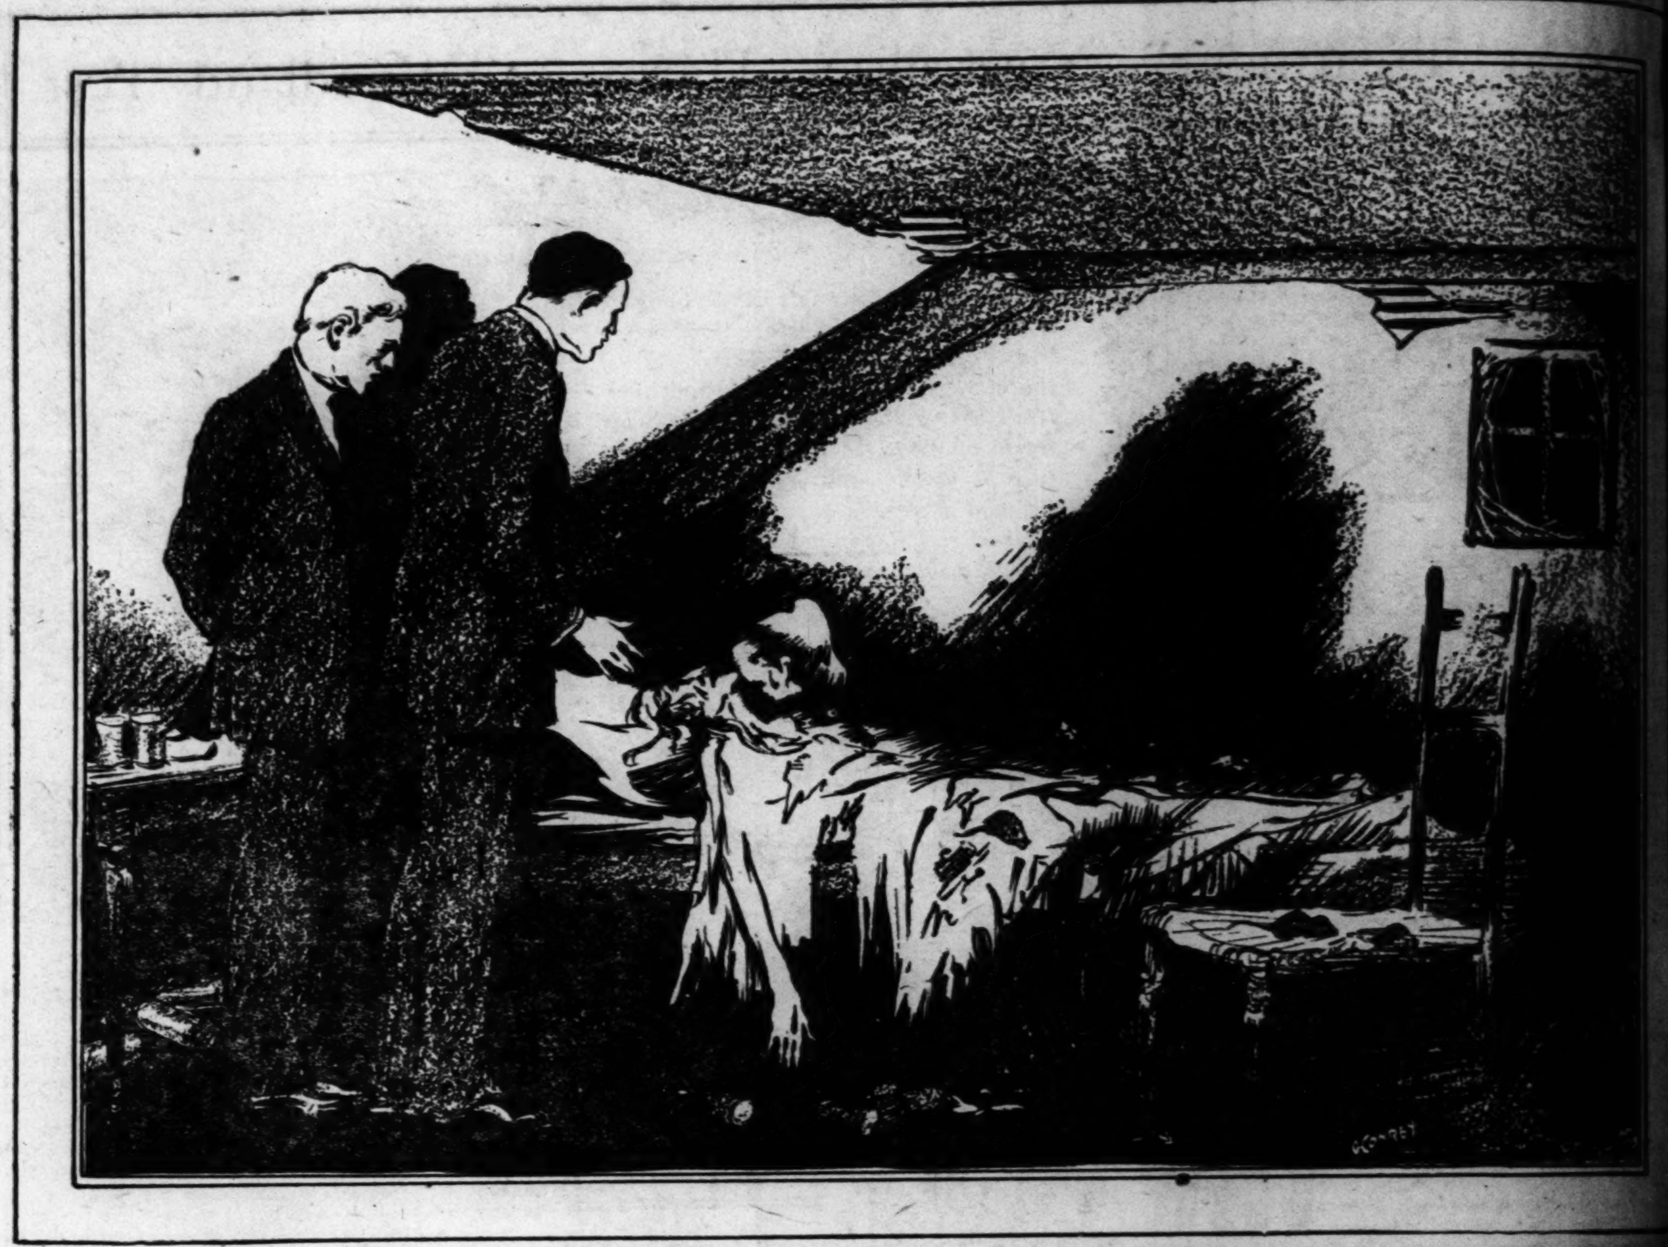
When a Princess Slowly Starved to Death



Utter destitution marked the closing years of woman who died recently in London, although she had been a beauty and favorite at the court of Czar Nicholas I—When the body of Princess Orloff was removed from the filthy deathbed, mice scampered all over the room—She once figured in a famous Russian scandal, and had owned jewelry valued at $500,000—About 62 at time of her death, sorrows and privations made her look 90—With last husband, an Englishman, she had been living under horrible conditions :: :: ::

AN OLD woman—shabby, undernourished and eccentric—died in London the other day. Her clothing was filthy and verminous, and the bed upon which she had slept was the hiding place for dozens of mice, which scampered all over the room when a representative of the Coroner's office removed her body to the mortuary.

In the squalid little room where the woman and her aged husband had lived for years there was no food whatever, and only nine pence in money. The condition of the feeble, unkempt old man was such that the police took him to a hospital.

At the inquest upon the woman it was stated that she had died from syncope, due to a cancer of the lungs. But everything indicated that the underlying cause of her death was slow starvation.

It was the dreadful end, amid the shadows of direst poverty, that come to a woman who had been a beauty of the Russian court, who enjoyed the affection of Czar Nicholas I, who married a Prince and who, in her days of prosperity, owned jewelry valued at $500,000.

As nearly as could be ascertained from friends of the dead woman in London, the Princess Silvia Orloff was 62 years old. But she looked like a woman of 90 at the time of her death. Grief in earlier years, and the want and actual privation which saddened the last years of her life, left their ravages on face and form.

There have, of course, been many cases of Russian aristocrats who died in exile and in straitened circumstances. Since the World War, especially, the reading public has been almost surfeited with accounts of the indigence to which Russians who once held titles and wealth have been reduced.

But the Princess Orloff's tragedy was not one of shabby-genteel poverty, and a tale of slim, patrician fingers working at menial tasks to earn the daily bread. With the Englishman who was her last husband, and who was an invalid, to care for, Princess Orloff could not have joined the wage earners, even if her own age and infirmities had permitted.

During their last years together, Princess Orloff and her husband had paid $3.50 weekly for their room, and how they managed to secure even that modest sum was a mystery to their acquaintances. Mrs. Edith Kent, their landlady on a back street of Mayfair, testified that she had not seen the man in 12 years, for the door to the room was always locked, and she left food for the couple on a tray outside.

The Coroner himself, well used to scenes of woe, stated that the pair had been living in circumstances too horrible to be described. One detail mentioned was that the Princess had not changed her clothing in 15 years. Darning and patches had to make the garments last, for apparently there never was enough money with which to buy new ones.

Even when destitution descended upon the Princess, she clung to whatever contact was possible with the world of fashion. The lodging house in which she endured the dreary last years of her life is on Little Grosvenor street, a back thoroughfare, but in Mayfair, and only a stone's throw from the fashionable square where once she had lived in luxury.

She acquired the habit, in those last sad years, of going out from her little lodging and ordering various things at the shops as Princess Orloff, forgetful of the fact that she was unable to pay for them. The tradespeople upon whom she called soon came to learn of this peculiarity. They continued to treat the poor old lady respectfully and to handle her "purchases" without comment, merely omitting to deliver the goods which she ordered.

There was no doubt, of course, that sorrows and hardships had somewhat affected her mind. And she was such a pitiable object that nobody ever thought of making trouble for her.

Landladies are not usually classed as philanthropists. They cannot as a rule afford to be, since they are landladies for the purpose of supporting themselves. But Princess Orloff and her husband often were in debt to Mrs. Kent. One time, when the room rent had not been paid for more than 20 weeks and had mounted to a total of 18 pounds sterling, Mrs. Kent told Princess Orloff they must go.

But the Princess begged for permission [illegible], pleading that they would have to sleep in the [illegible] if they were not allowed to remain. So the [illegible] lady kindly consented. From that time on, [illegible] knows how, the couple managed to keep up their weekly rent. However, Mrs. Kent had to give them food every week, or, apparently, they would have starved.

Friends of this Russian aristocrat in [illegible] times, themselves refugees from the land of the Czars, used to bring gifts of money and food occasionally. After 1917 and the revolution, these friends were not able to render much assistance.

And so, from a variety of causes, misfortune and actual misery pressed more and more closely [illegible] the Princess. The splendors of her girlhood gave way to the luxury of early married life, then [illegible] long years of middle-class comfort, followed by a period of limited means and then by poverty and squalor. Princess Orloff's [illegible] touched first the summit and afterward the lowest depths of fortune's favor.

Prior to her marriage to Prince [illegible] Orloff, 40 years ago, young Silvia was a great favorite with the royal family of Russia, to whom she was distantly related. Especially was she a favorite of Czar Nicholas I, at whose court she was a [illegible] beauty and who went out of his way to [illegible] her a suitable husband.

Prince Dmitri, himself descended from a once-reigning family of Russia, was [illegible]ble in many respects, such as wealth and station. But unfortunately he was [illegible] years the senior of Princess Silvia, who soon grew restive at living with a middle-aged and insanely jealous husband. Quarrels occurred between the two. After a year of mingled bliss and discord, Prince Dmitri took her to his estates in the Caucasus, where he made his bride practically a prisoner and isolated her from her friends.

There a son, Dmitri, was born. The child compensated to some extent for the mother's loss of the social gayeties to which she had been accustomed in St. Petersburg and Moscow. Although making [illegible]sional reappearances in the old circles, Princess [illegible] grew more and more discontented. Before reaching the age of 30 she was a disillusioned, bitter woman.

Early in the 1890's, about the time that Nicholas II came to the throne, the Princess returned to St. Petersburg, having practically separated from her husband. The Prince made her a generous allowance and for about a year Princess Orloff's life flowed along smoothly. Then she became involved in a love affair with a Col. Ivanoff of the Soumsky Hussars.

This affair reached the ears of the Czarina, and

A New Quest for Secrets at the Bottom of the Deepest Seas

Some five-sevenths of the earth's surface, that covered by the oceans, is practically unexplored—Now the U. S. Government plans expedition which will begin gigantic and important task—Biologists say that the briny deep contains more plant and animal life capable of furnishing food for man than ever could be raised on the dry land — Map of the sea will show its bottom, currents and distribution of life—Some strange facts already known

"DARK continents" are not nearly as dark as they used to be. Regions strange and unknown in our fathers' time are familiar now, in magazine and book and movie film. Former wilds are under cultivation, many of the great open spaces have been fenced. Both poles have been conquered. It might look as though the explorer's work was about finished.

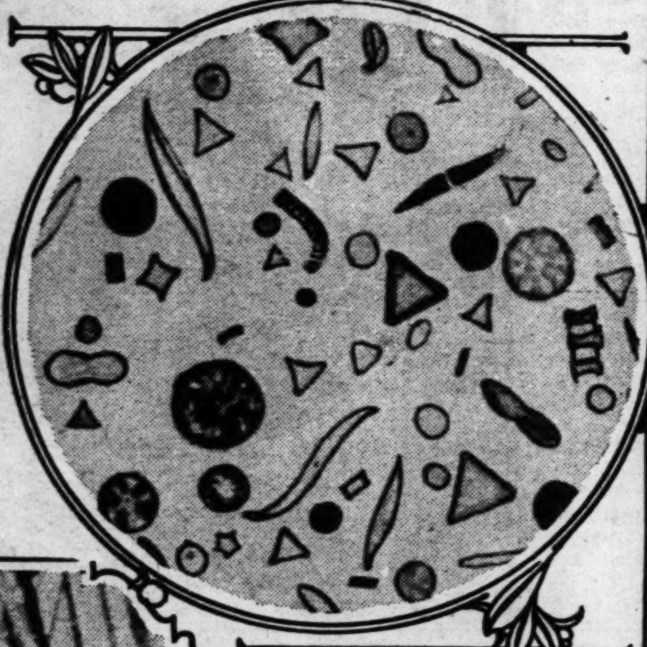
But take another look at the map. More than two-thirds of the earth's surface—five-sevenths, to be exact—is practically unexplored. That five-sevenths is under water; it is occupied by the oceans. And, strange as it may seem, although ships have sailed the "seven seas" for ages, little is known about the sea itself.

The Hydrographic Office of the United States Navy, with the help of scientific branches of other departments of the Government and allied institutions, is now planning an expedition to explore the ocean from top to bottom, with a thoroughness never before attempted. The deep is to be forced to surrender its secrets. Hidden life mysteries, which now baffle the best of biologists, will be solved. Stock will be taken of that vast reservoir from which the food supply for the world's multiplying population may, in the future, be largely drawn.

The poet who sang about the "old ocean's gray and melancholy waste" evidently had in mind its appearance. Beneath its surface, biologists estimate, there is more plant and animal life capable of furnishing food for man, than ever can be produced on all the farms and cattle ranches of all the land on earth, even when what are now unproductive wilds have been reduced to intensive cultivation.

Of course, even the casual sea voyager, who has seen porpoises playing about the ship or sighted whales in passing, recognizes that there are inhabitants of the seas. But when his ship plows along for days without encountering any life, little or big, he is apt to look on the sea as a sort of desert of wetness. If he is a poor sailor, at such times he may long to see just one tree or some green grass.

Yet, at that very time, he may be passing through one of the rich meadows of the sea, filled with green plants vastly more numerous than blades of grass. In these sea pastures are grazing creatures which in number would make the "cattle on a thousand hills" seem insignificant in comparison. Preying upon these wild herds of plant-eaters are the submarine meat-eating forms; the lions, wolves and tigers of the under-water world.



Different species of diatoms as seen under a high-power microscope. These tiny plants form part of the plankton, or "soup," of the sea, and millions of them may occur in a single quart of sea water.

Plankton net, made of silk and used to collect the tiny marine plants and animals which are found in sea water penetrated by the sunlight. Here the biologist is carefully draining the net and getting the plankton caught in it.

Just as all land animals depend either directly or indirectly on vegetable life, so all sea animals also depend on vegetable life, which flourishes most abundantly in the first hundred feet below the surface. In this sunlit region, subject to great variations and changes from the effect of winds, waves, surface currents and sunshine, live a vast multitude of different kinds of tiny plants and animals which collectively form the plankton or "soup" of the sea.

So small are these tiny forms that sometimes as many as a million occur in a single quart of sea water. Without roots and leaves like our familiar land plants, but absorbing their nourishment from sea water with their entire bodies, the microscopic marine plants depend upon the sunlight and their green coloring matter to form the food materials necessary for all animal life. In the last analysis, therefore, it is the sunlight which controls life in the sea as well as on land.

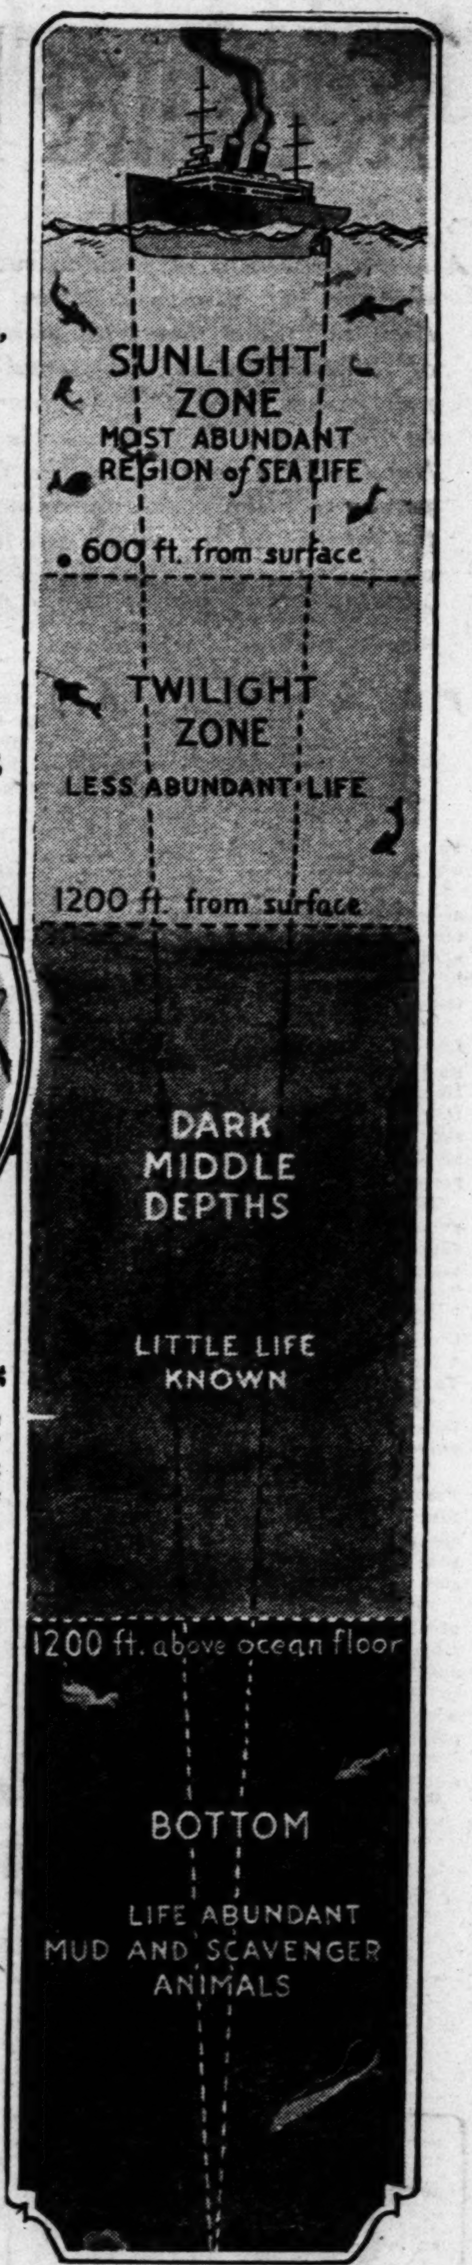
For instance, nutrition experts have found certain necessary factors, called vitamins, which animals must have to grow properly or reproduce their kind. Such apparently unlike things as milk and cod-liver oil contain certain of these vitamins. But the vitamins in the milk come from the green grass which the cow eats, as the vitamins in the fish liver come from the tiny green sea plants that form the primary food of all fish.

While the sunlit layer is filled with more varieties of animal life, some feeding on plants and others on other animals which feed on plants, it is by no means the only region inhabited. In the quieter depths are other animals more widespread in their range, while near the bottom are still other and different forms adapted for living in the cold, nearly lightless region which is little changed winter or summer, day or night.

There live the carnivorous creatures which feed on other animals of the deep. There also are mud-eaters and scavengers, which exist on the dead matter that is ceaselessly raining down from above.

In some deep sections of the sea, the ocean has what might be called a false bottom—a region where the water becomes too dense for the small life forms to sink rapidly and where they hang suspended to furnish a sort of submarine roof garden, where the mud-eating, bottom-living forms can come up and get a rich meal of their favorite food. Many of these bottom-living creatures have bodies adapted to great changes in pressure and migrate upward at night for considerable distances.

Some of these deep-sea fish have rows of lights along their bodies, others even have headlights with a reflector behind to throw the light in front of them as they swim. These natural lanterns must be very useful to creatures in the inky blackness of the great deep—but, strange to say, it has been noticed that in most cases the lights carried by fish nearer the surface are larger than those down below, while almost all of the surface-living forms are phosphorescent.



Diagrammatic cross-section of the sea, to illustrate the distribution of life. The dotted line from the ship to the ocean floor and back again shows the course taken by sound sent down from the ship and returned to it as an echo from the bottom.

But while such vague general facts about ocean life have been gathered by expeditions in the past, the exact relationships between the different plants and animals, the extent of their range, their numbers and the laws that govern their lives are unknown. Expeditions like that of the British ship Challenger, in 1873-6, and our American boat Albatross, from 1883 to 1920, have discovered much in a broad way, by extensive surveys and voyages which took them around the world.

The scientists of early expeditions

"Treasure Hunts" Through City Streets

A new amusement of London society's younger set disclosed when the Hon. Lois Sturt, beautiful member of the nobility, is summoned to police court for traffic violations—In motor cars, they "chase clews" from point to point, and the first person to solve puzzle and locate the substantial "treasure" gets it as a prize—The game was devised to embody the thrills of a detective mystery story :-: :-:

TRAFFIC LAWS ARE DISREGARDED WHEN THE CHASE IS ON.

THE latest amusement of the gay, younger set in London society was disclosed to the public when the Hon. Lois Sturt appeared recently at the Marylebone Police Court. There were two charges against her, in connection with an automobile dash through Regent's Park. And then the story of the fashionable "treasure hunts" came out.

The Hon. Lois Sturt resides at the aristocratic address of No. 38 Portman Square, and is the sister of Lord Alington. Next to Lady Diana Manners, if there is indeed any exception, she is said to be the most beautiful, the most photographed and the most painted woman in England.

With other young people of fashion, including Lady Diana, she took part in producing the film play, "The Glorious Adventure," a year or two ago, Miss Sturt being assigned the role of Nell Gwyn. Her debut in the movies had been preceded by much experience in private theatricals. Also, she is an accomplished artist and considered one of the most versatile young women in society.

So, when the Hon. Lois Sturt was summoned to police court, the news item blossomed forth on prominent pages of London papers. "Treasure hunts" is one name given to the new game, and "chasing clews" is another.

Mr. Muskett, the prosecutor, informed the Court that the game of "chasing clews" was organized by a fashionable group known as the Society of Bright Young People.

"I hope," he added, "that it will soon cease. Otherwise inoffensive users of the streets will have another terror to face.

"In passing through the Outer Circle (of Regent's Park), while engaged in the chase the Hon. Lois Sturt passed through a police control at a speed of 51 miles an hour, and in order to pass three other cars she went on the off-side of the road.

"Police Constable Fisher, at the end of the control, signaled to her to stop, but after slackening slightly she went on. She was traced to the Zoological Gardens, which was one of the points of vantage.

"When she was told that she would be summoned she said: 'It is ridiculous; I did not know there were any speed limits.' "

Miss Sturt, testifying, stated that she was going at a speed of between 40 and 45 miles an hour.

"When I saw the officer signal, I began to pull up," she added. "But I was told by my friend, Miss Irene Brown of Bentinck street, that the constable did not want us to stop. I therefore went on."

Hay Halkett, Magistrate, who heard the case at Marylebone Police Court, characterized the affair as "an outrageous performance."

"If people play games of this sort in the streets of London, we must not be surprised if they are not safe," he commented, farther.

Miss Sturt was fined 3 pounds sterling for driving at a dangerous speed, another 3 pounds for not stopping at the request of a policeman, her license was suspended for three months and in addition she was ordered to pay costs of 3 pounds 3 shillings—a total of about $40.

She gained third prize in the "treasure hunt," during which traffic rules were violated in Regent's Park. Whether the value of the prize equaled the sum total of the police court fines has not been made known.

One of the London newspapers with a large circulation says that "treasure hunts" have been popular for several months with the younger generation of Mayfair. They were devised to embody the thrills of a detective mystery story.

Each of the treasure hunters, or clew chasers, contributes to a common pool. All of them start from the same place, provided with clews, usually a few words written or printed on a piece of paper. As the hunters reach successive places on the line of search, other clews await those who are quick-witted enough to find the additional clews and to understand their meaning.

The hunter who first traces the treasure to its hiding place is the winner, and carries off the treasure as his prize. In some of the more elaborate hunts, second and third prizes have been provided as well. Obviously, success depends on quick thinking and on quick movement from point to point. Thus, motor cars and fast driving.

As an example, the world Elgin on a piece of paper would be a legitimate clew to guide an ambitious treasure hunter to the British Museum, where the famous Elgin marbles are on display. There, among the beautiful Greek sculptures, if the interpretation were correct, he or she would find another clew. It is a condition that all the clews thus traced be left where found, for the benefit of other treasure hunters who might arrive later.

This use of public buildings as hiding places for clews has been quite extensive in the fashionable new game. One wonders how they managed in the last hunt reported, which began at 2 a. m. in Belgrave Square!

Some interesting details about the origin and usages of the "treasure hunts" are given by Miss Viola Tree, who has engaged in many of them, in a recent issue of the Daily Express. She writes:

"First of all, I want to sweep away the fallacy that there is any such society or club known as 'The Bright Young People.' If there were they would be zanies. Whoever invented the phrase was at heart a zany.

"The word 'bright,' except as applied to sunlight, mirrors or spoons, is an insult in itself, and if one is young one does not draw attention to the fact. If a set of people wish to dub themselves with a particular title it should have a magnificent sound, or an eerie sound, like the Klu Klux Klan.

"The beauty about the treasure hunt until now has been its obscurity, its vagueness, its almost stealthy progress, through the thickest traffic.

"That one of the members, Miss Lois Sturt, should have drawn upon herself the attention of the

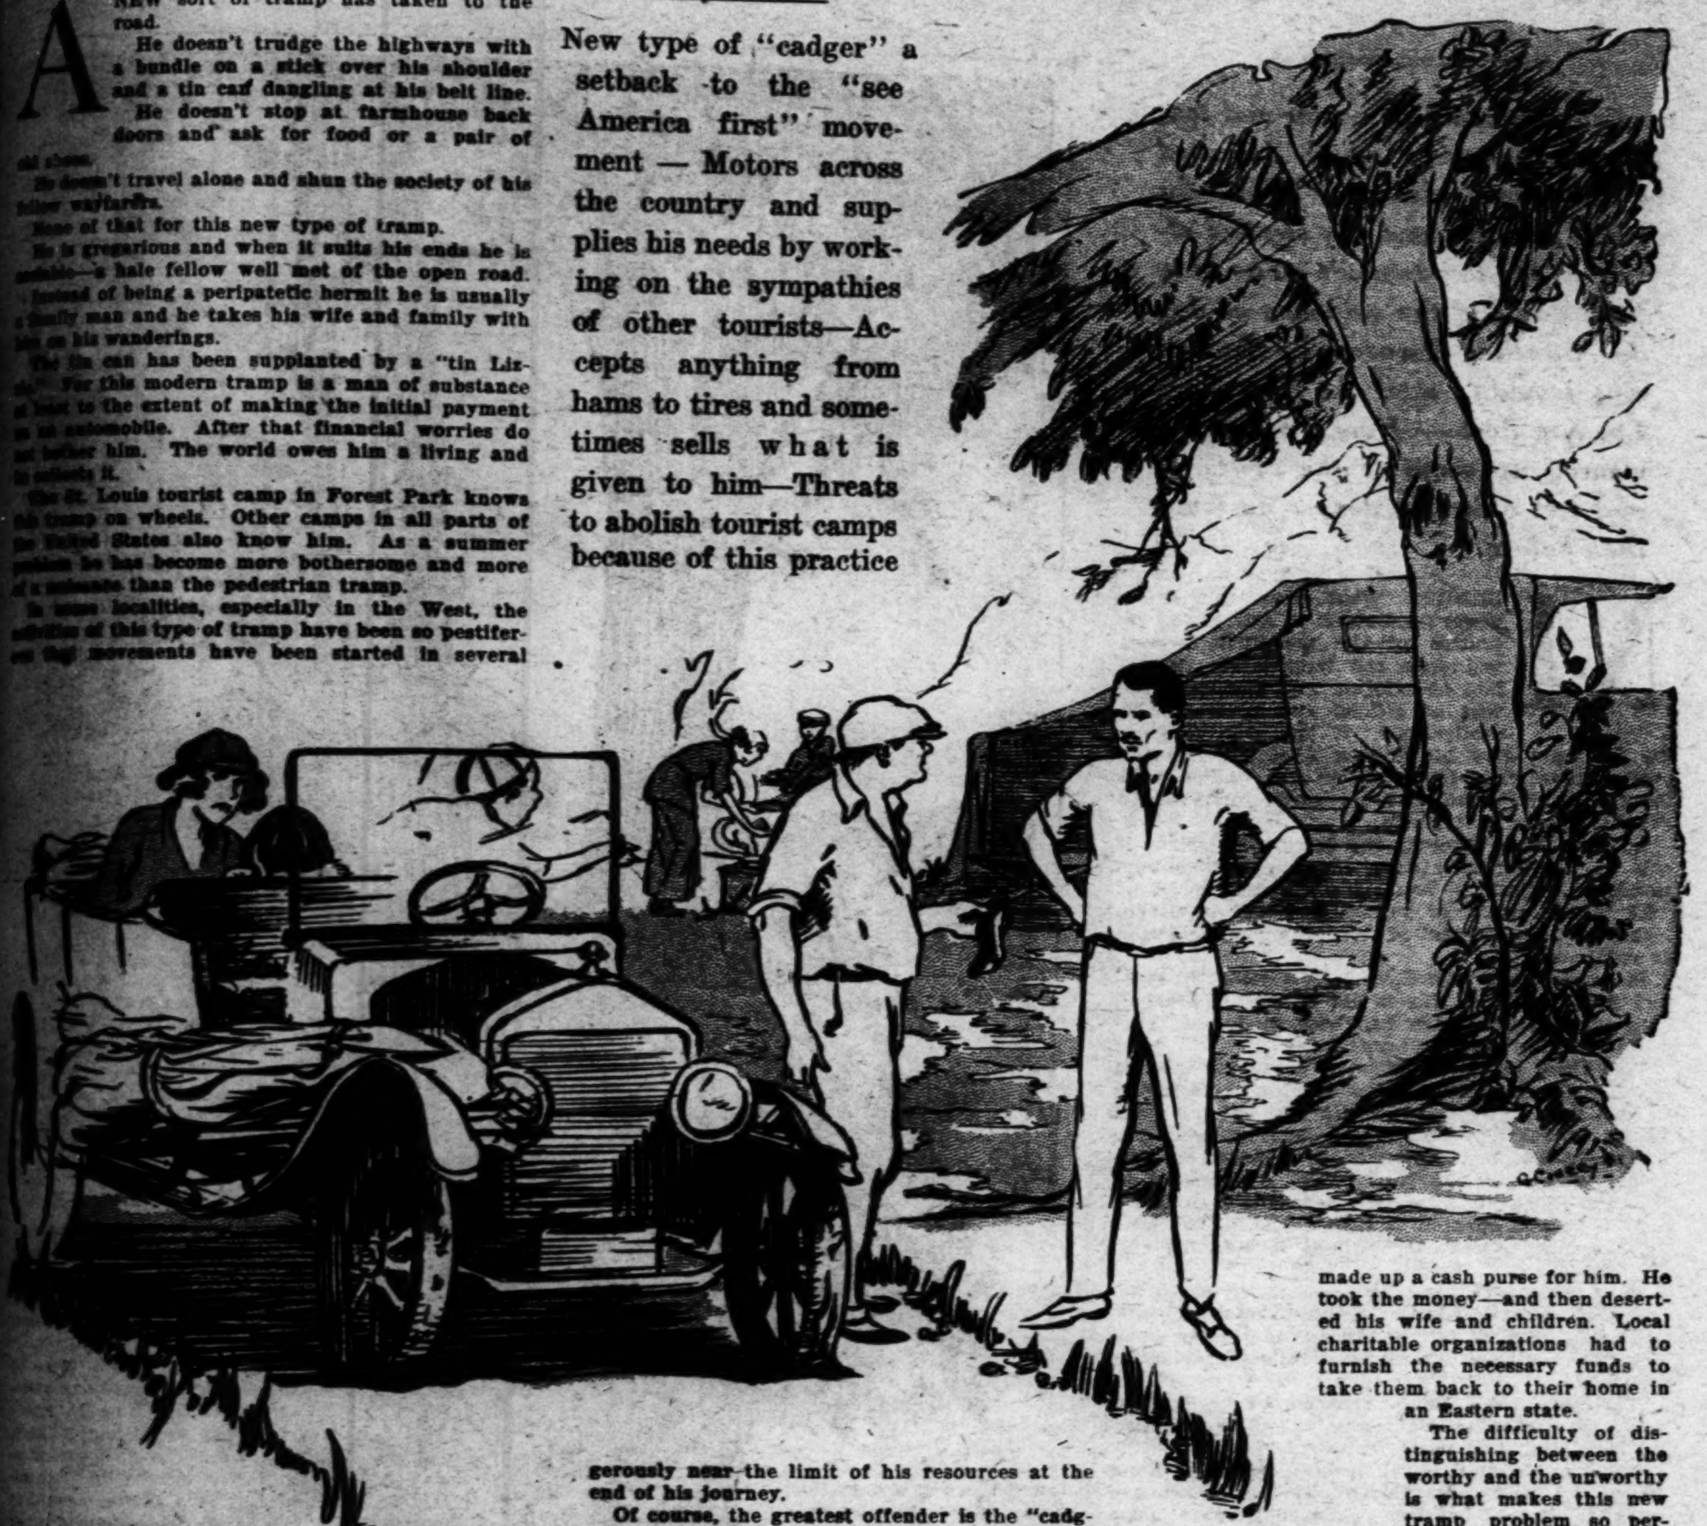
Tramp on Wheels the New Road Pest

New type of "cadger" a setback to the "see America first" movement — Motors across the country and supplies his needs by working on the sympathies of other tourists—Accepts anything from hams to tires and sometimes sells what is given to him—Threats to abolish tourist camps because of this practice



A NEW sort of tramp has taken to the road.

He doesn't trudge the highways with a bundle on a stick over his shoulder and a tin can dangling at his belt line.

He doesn't stop at farmhouse back doors and ask for food or a pair of old shoes.

He doesn't travel alone and shun the society of his fellow wayfarers.

None of that for this new type of tramp.

He is gregarious and when it suits his ends he is sociable—a hale fellow well met of the open road. Instead of being a peripatetic hermit he is usually a family man and he takes his wife and family with him on his wanderings.

The tin can has been supplanted by a "tin Lizzie." For this modern tramp is a man of substance at least to the extent of making the initial payment on an automobile. After that financial worries do not bother him. The world owes him a living and he collects it.

The St. Louis tourist camp in Forest Park knows this tramp on wheels. Other camps in all parts of the United States also know him. As a summer problem he has become more bothersome and more of a nuisance than the pedestrian tramp.

In some localities, especially in the West, the activities of this type of tramp have been so pestiferous that movements have been started in several communities to exclude him, and it has been seriously suggested that the best way to do it would be to abolish the tourist camps established by the municipalities as agencies of hospitality.

It has been said that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. The automobile tourists have another version. It has been their experience that one-half the tourists have to help the other half live. The collection to help some wayfarer to fare farther on his way has come to be a too frequent feature at the automobile tourists' camps at all important points on the transcontinental highways.

Sometimes the recipients of this charity are worthy. Sometimes they are not.

Often the plight of the "camp cadger" is the result of bad judgment and too much optimism. He has started out to find the end of the rainbow and the journey has turned out to be longer and more wearing on his purse and tires than he thought it would be.

It is one thing to load your wife and four or five children in an automobile in Secaucus, N. J., and wave good-by to your friends, if any, with the announcement: "We're off for California."

But it is quite another matter to complete the journey with your bankroll, your flivver and your family all together and ride into Los Angeles triumphantly proclaiming: "Here we are."

Some men are born tramps, others achieve trampdom and others have trampdom thrust upon them.

All three classes are to be found upon the open road in the good old summer time. All are burdens on the responsible, well provided and foresighted tourists who from time to time are called upon to help them.

Sometimes the charity drain on the originally well-equipped tourist is so great that he himself is dangerously near the limit of his resources at the end of his journey.

Of course, the greatest offender is the "cadger" who deliberately sets out with the resolution to spend as little of his own money as possible and to play upon the sympathy of his fellow tourists for nearly everything he needs.

Automobilists who have stopped at the St. Louis camp for tourists have told many stories of this species of road tramp. Those returning from the West are especially emphatic in their assertions that unless something is done to abate the evil there will be a serious setback for the "see-America-first" movement, so far as automobile tourists are concerned.

A recent arrival at the camp here said: "It's just one collection after another. In nearly every camp we hit some tourist and his family are stranded and asking for help. Of course, in some cases they are really deserving, if you grant that a man oughtn't to be penalized for his own bad judgment. At any rate, his wife and children shouldn't suffer for it. We don't so much mind helping out the deserving tourists, but it makes us lose faith in human nature when we find we've been imposed upon.

"Out west in the mountain country the cadging by tourists has become a pest. I believe some of them make a calling of it. With their automobile for a home they have no house rent to pay and for their sustenance and equipment they rely on the generosity of other tourists.

"I have seen a camp almost stripped of spare parts, even including spare tires, to help some shiftless or worse than shiftless fellow on his way. Out in Colorado I gave one of them a spare tire. At the first town I reached after leaving camp I found he had sold the tire. There it was, with an identification mark which I had put on it. To get it back I had to pay an advance over the price for which he sold it. I have heard of cases where the same thing was done with provisions. A man who cadged on a camp out in Nebraska and got a ham and five pounds of coffee for his 'starving family' was found to have sold the ham and coffee at the next stop."

At the St. Louis camp a man touring with his wife and family told a story of temporary poverty which melted the hearts of the other campers. They made up a cash purse for him. He took the money—and then deserted his wife and children. Local charitable organizations had to furnish the necessary funds to take them back to their home in an Eastern state.

The difficulty of distinguishing between the worthy and the unworthy is what makes this new tramp problem so perplexing.

When tourist camps were set apart in nearly all large cities they were regarded as a means of extending hospitality to tourists who were motoring for pleasure. The road tramp at that time was not known as a troublesome factor in cross-country touring.

Even then it was understood that not all availing themselves of the camp hospitality were driving solely for pleasure. Some were crossing the country in search of new homes—successors to the pioneers of the covered-wagon era, but these in the main were self-reliant folks with resources and equipment enough to take them to their destinations without aid from strangers.

In the last season or two the wandering job-seeker has joined the transcontinental caravan. Usually he was a happy-go-lucky chap whose philosophy in life was "Work won't come to you. You've got to go where the work is." Looking for work became their principal occupation. On any sort of tip or prospect they were ready to load their wife and children into the "little old bus" and travel a thousand miles toward the end of the rainbow. When their gasoline and provisions ran low [illegible] only way of carrying on was to beg or borrow.

Lowest of all in the scale is the deliberate cadger. Campers report that the roads are full of them this year.

"Yes, there are lots of them," said Henry Hehl, custodian of the Forest Park camp. They are not as bad around here as they are out West.

"About the time they reach the Great Divide everybody has to divide with them. I understand that it is so bad out West that the authorities actually give these road tramps gasoline on condition that they will get out of the state as quickly as possible."

Even the self-proclaimed job seeker is not always so eager as he pretends to be in his quest for employment. There have been cases in which camp attendants have hunted up jobs for campers and have been cursed rather than thanked for their friendly interest. The motto of some road tramps seems to be: "Why work when you can cadge?"

Most Mystifying Murder [illegible]e You

Amazing sequence of events and tangle of circumstances which followed Uncle Amos' dream — What the ghost revealed and the strange affair of the two toenails—The busy little dog and the evidence he dug up—Startling discovery by the man who wouldn't read the New York Evening Post — How a kidnaping cleared up some of the mysteries and left others in deeper darkness than before :: :: ::

MURDER! What other word has a power so sinister to attract the attention of the multitude, arouse and feed the imagination, stimulate speculation and challenge the wits of official and unofficial investigators? It has been so from the day Cain slew his brother Abel down to the present time when the world is still ringing with the echoes of the hue and cry which followed the Franks murder in Chicago.

Looking back through the history of crime it will be found that always, in some part of the world, a murder is being done, solved, or dealt with in the courts of justice with the inevitable focusing of the interest of some community, nation or continent.

In nearly every case there is an element of mystery and sometimes this is not entirely dissipated, even after a confession has been made and sentence of death has been pronounced.

Was there ever, for instance, a murder case so fraught with mystery at every turn and so amazing in its climax as the one in which Stephen and Jesse Boorn, brothers, were charged with killing their brother-in-law, Russell Colvin, at Manchester, Vermont, more than 100 years ago? A recountal of this mystifying and literally astounding case makes one of the best chapters in a book just off the Macmillan press, "Studies in Murder," by Edmund Lester Pearson.

Even the supernatural figures in this true story—one of the strangest in the history of criminal jurisprudence. And as for the climax, nothing so startling has ever been devised by the most imaginative fictionist.

This remarkable denouement must take its place in its regular order in this retelling of the wonderful story, but it is worth waiting for.

Right at the start there was deep mystery. Amos Boorn and his brother, Barney, lived in Manchester in 1812. Barney had three children, Stephen, Jesse and Sally. All were married. Sally was the wife of Russell Colvin. For a long time Colvin had been considered "queer." He had a way of disappearing and leaving his wife and two children for months at a time. Once he remained away a year.

On May 10, 1812, Colvin again dropped out of sight. It was not a matter of great concern to the general public. A war with Great Britain had just started, troops were being mobilized and the community had more important things to think about.

Seven years passed. The war had long been over and the public mind was again attuned to more or less commonplace topics. The question went around: "Where is Russell Colvin?" He had never before remained away from home so long. Speculation developed into suspicion when it was bruited about that Stephen and Jesse Boorn, brothers-in-law of the missing man, had been making queer remarks about him. One was quoted as saying: "I know Russell Colvin is dead." The other was reported to have said: "Colvin has gone where potatoes won't freeze."

And then came Uncle Amos and his dream.

Contemporary writers described Amos Boorn as "a man of unimpeachable character" and "a gentleman of respectability." He was not of the imaginative type and had never before had a "vision."

One can, therefore, sense the tremendous interest aroused in that staid New England community when Uncle Amos announced that "in a dream thrice repeated" Russell Colvin stood at his bedside and told him he had been murdered and that he could lead Uncle Amos to the spot where he was buried.

The place of burial, the apparition said, was an old cellar hole about four feet square over which a house had formerly stood. At the time of Colvin's disappearance, seven years before, it had been used as a place for burying potatoes, but it had been filled up.

Following Uncle Amos' announcement of the vision, the potato pit was opened up and in it were found a large knife, a pen-knife and a button. Mrs. Colvin identified the large knife and the button as having belonged to her husband. No one claimed the pen-knife.

At this stage of the investigation a dog did some detective work. He rushed to a hollow stump near the potato hole and began to dig. Villagers followed the dog and in the hole under the stump they found two human toenails and several bones. Three doctors said the bones were human bones. One said they were not.

It was recalled that several years before a Mr. Salisbury had suffered the amputation of a leg and the leg had been buried.

The bones of Mr. Salisbury's leg were dug up and the bones found under the stump of the tree were laid beside them. It was the unanimous decision that the newly found bones were not human bones. That left the presence of the toenails an unsolved mystery.

On the strength of the finding of the knife and the button on his premises, Jesse Boorn was arrested. His brother, Stephen, had moved two years earlier to Denmark, New York, 198 miles distant.

Jesse was about to be released when a jail keeper heard him mutter as if talking to himself: "The first I knew that Stephen had killed Russell Colvin was when he was here last winter and told me." Stephen was then arrested and brought back to Manchester in chains, vehemently protesting his innocence.

After the brothers had been in prison, several months a grand jury indicted them on first degree murder charges. One of the principal witnesses was Lewis Colvin, 17-year-old son of Russell Colvin, who told of witnessing a fight between his father and the two Boorns.

The young man had run away while this fight was in progress and so could not say that he had actually witnessed the killing of his father.

Another important witness before the grand jury was Silas Merrill, a fellow prisoner, who told of a confession made to him by Stephen Boorn.

Before the grand jury met, Stephen Boorn had made the written confession here given verbatim:

"May the tenth, 1812, I, about 9 or 10 o'clock, went down to David Glazier's bridge and fished down below Uncle Nathanial Boorn's, and then went up across their farm [illegible] sell and Lewis was [illegible] nighest way and [illegible] began to talk and [illegible] me how many [illegible] he had been to father, and I told [illegible] damned fool; and he was mad and [illegible] we set close together, and told him [illegible] little tory; and there was a piece [illegible] about two feet long, and he catched [illegible] at my head as I sat down; and I [illegible] struck me on one shoulder, and I [illegible] his hand and struck him a back-handed [illegible] ing on the north side of him; and [illegible] on it about one inch long. point began the remarkable series of cir-which made this murder case stand out as the most remarkable in American criminal history—so remarkable that five books, some of which ran into several editions, were written about it. Every subsequent step was unusual and productive of astounding results.

The first link was an advertisement inserted in the Rutland, Vermont, Herald, by Leonard Sargeant, of counsel for the defense, against the advice of his associate counsel. This advertisement was as follows:

"MURDER

"Printers of newspapers throughout the United States are desired to publish that Stephen Boorn of Manchester, in Vermont, is sentenced to be executed for the murder of Russell Colvin, who has been absent about seven years. Any person who can give information of said Colvin may save the life of the innocent by making immediate communication. Colvin is about five feet five inches high, light complexion, light colored hair, blue eyes, about forty years of age.

"Manchester, Vt., Nov. 26, 1819."

This advertisement was reprinted in several newspapers and about the same time someone interested in the case sent this clipping from the Albany Daily Advertiser to the New York Evening Post:

"Messrs. Editors—If you judge the following worthy of a place in your useful paper, you will oblige a subscriber by admitting it into your columns. It is a most striking example of "divine agency." It satisfactorily demonstrates that we are watched over by a guardian providence, and verifies the old proverb (which is so universally found to be correct) that "murder will out." I have no hesitation in saying that it can be implicitly relied on, as it came from a gentleman of the first respectability.

"In the village of Manchester, Vermont, several years since, a man of respectable connection and character suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. All search and inquiry proved futile and vain till, within a few weeks, a person dreamt that he had appeared to him and informed him that he had been murdered by two persons whom he named, and that he had been buried in such a place, a few rods' distant from a sapling bearing a peculiar mark, which he minutely described. The same dream occurred three times successively before he awoke. Each time the deceased seemed very solicitous for him to follow. Upon awakening his feelings were wrought up to such a pitch, and he was so impressed with a belief of the fact that he determined to collect some friends and follow the directions laid down in the dream. He did so and discovered to his surprise a tree marked precisely as described, also the appearance of a grave, and upon digging found a human skeleton.

"After this discovery the two persons implicated in the dream were apprehended and put into confinement and after a few days confessed the deed. (They have since been tried and convicted, and are now under sentence of death, and to be executed on the 18th of January, next. Their names are Stephen and Jesse Brown, and the name of the person murdered was Russell Colvin.")

It will be noticed that the name Boorn was misspelled in this clipping as reproduced in the New York Evening Post, but luckily Russell Colvin's name was printed correctly.

The happenings which followed the reprinting of this clipping were so strange that to some they will suggest Providential direction while to others they may appear as coincidences.

There lived in New Jersey a man named Taber Chadwick. One of his deep-seated prejudices was a dislike for the New York Evening Post. He would not permit the paper to enter his home and he had frequently told friends that no inducement could persuade him to read that paper.

Suppose Mr. Taber Chadwick had been at home on the 26th of November when the Evening Post reprinted the clipping. He certainly never would have read it. But it so happened that he was in New York city. Neither would he have read the Evening Post there. Now, of all possible places in New York, where did he chance to be on the evening of that fateful day? He was in the lobby of a hotel, and he was so placed in that lobby that he was within hearing distance of another guest, a total stranger to him, who read aloud to a friend the New York Evening Post reprint of the account of the Colvin murder.

Even then, suppose Mr. Chadwick's prejudice against the Evening Post had remained so firmly intrenched that nothing could have induced him to write a letter to the paper which he hated. This story might have had a very different ending.

But Chadwick put duty above prejudice and on his return home he wrote this letter to the Evening Post:

"Shrewsbury, Monmouth, N. J., Dec. 6.

"To the Editor of the New York Evening Post.

"Sir—Having learned from your paper of Nov. 26, last, of the conviction and sentence of Stephen and Jesse Brown, of Manchester, Vermont, charged with the murder of Russell Colvin, and from facts which have fallen within my own knowledge, and not knowing what facts may have been disclosed on their trial, and wishing to serve the cause of humanity, I would state as follows, which may be relied on:

Some years ago (I think between five and ten) a stranger made his appearance in this county and, upon being inquired of, said that his name was Russell Colvin—(which name he answers to at this time), that he came from Manchester, Vermont. He appeared to be in state of mental derangement, but at times gave considerable account of himself, his connections and acquaintances. He mentions the name of Clarissa Rufus &c. Among his relations he has mentioned the Browns above, and Chase as judge, I think. He is a man rather small in stature, round favored, speaks very fast, has two scars on his head and appears to be between 30 and 40 years of age. There is no doubt but that he came from Vermont, from the mention that he has made a number of places and persons there, and probably he is the person supposed to have been murdered. He is now living here, but so completely insane as not to be able to give any satisfactory account of himself, but the connections of Russell Colvin might know by seeing him. If you think proper to give this place in your columns, it may possibly lead to a discovery that may save the lives of innocent men. If so you will have the pleasure (as well as myself) of having served the cause of humanity. If you give this an insertion in your paper, pray be so good as to request the different editors of newspapers in New York and Vermont to give it a place in theirs.

"I am, sir, with sentiments of regard, yours

(sig) TABER CHADWICK"

Now for another turn of Providence, coincidence, or what you will.

A man named Whelpley had also been in that New New York hotel lobby and had heard the Colvin murder item read from the Evening Post.

When Chadwick obtained important information he wrote a letter to the newspaper.

But Whelpley was a man of action. Without stopping to write a letter he started out to do something.

He kidnaped the murdered man!

Whelpley hurried over to New Jersey. On the farm of William Polhemus, a brother-in-law of Chadwick, he found a farmhand who answered the description in the clipping and who seemed to be suffering from a delusion that he owned the farm. He denied that his name was Colvin, but when pressed with questions he said his name "used to be Colvin." He also denied knowledge of Manchester, but remembered the names of several persons who had been his neighbors there and who had been mentioned in newspaper accounts of the trial.

Whelpley prevailed on the farmhand to accompany him to New York. Then he worked a trick

SIGHT UNSEEN

by Ledyard M. Bailey

FROM the time she wore freckles and pigtails, Arvilla had been a gambler. Not that she played poker, or bet on the ponies, or even bought oil stocks. She had only the vaguest idea of the difference between bridge and baccarat. All the same, Arvilla was a gambler.

At seven she gambled away her new slate with the red felt on the corners for an old brass locket that would not open. It was quite well understood that there was nothing much to be said for this locket, as a locket. What fascinated Arvilla was that it would not open, and therefore might contain hidden treasure. When at last her brother pried it open with his jack-knife and revealed nothing more precious than a rather ratty-looking wisp of hair, Arvilla was disappointed but not cast down.

At nineteen she gambled away her maidenly estate and the safety and comfort of her father's house for an under-size traveling man whom she had met three times. Arvilla knew well enough that as an immediate husband he wasn't much; but she was simply certain that within his rather cheap and battered outer case there beat a heart of gold. Also, that he seethed inwardly with hidden powers which would one day make him a leader in the world of men and money.

Arvilla made a killing this time, so far at least as the heart of gold was concerned. It was really there, and for eight long years she held the only key to it. But she never succeeded in cashing in on any of the hidden powers. Perhaps it was only because they were so thoroughly hidden. She never admitted, even to herself, that they did not exist at all.

When at last a railroad wreck snapped shut the cheap and battered outer case forever, Arvilla stopped thinking about hidden powers. She took the life insurance which the heart of gold had scrimped so patiently to carry, and the money which the railroad claim adjuster offered for the battered case, and bought a small brick building. It had two storerooms on the first floor and two apartments on the second. She rented one-half to a druggist, kept the other half for herself, and established a snug little millinery shop downstairs and a snug little home upstairs. She said to herself that she was all through—and would gamble no more.

Her cure was short-lived. In tracing her husband's baggage, she learned that the railroad and express companies held at regular intervals auction sales of unclaimed baggage and express. Henceforward no sale was complete without her presence.

Seafaring men tell us that a derelict is easy to deal with so long as it floats in plain sight. It may be seen and avoided, or blown up and safely sunk. But when it becomes submerged and invisible—when all trace of it is lost, lurking just below the surface—then it becomes a menace and a horror to all who sail the seas.

Something like this had happened to the derelict son of the house of Littleton. At least the telegram sounded like it. A long message it was, fast day rate, signed by a firm of New York lawyers who were never known to look at a retainer of less than five figures. Crickmay read it slowly, leaning back in his swivel chair, on a sunny morning of late October.

"We should be obliged if you would undertake quiet investigation present whereabouts and condition of Donald Littleton. Left here six months ago. Have traced movements as far as Cheyenne, Wyoming. Left there June thirteenth, buying ticket for your city. Had in his possession considerable amount high-grade bonds secured in irregular manner. So far as we have been able to learn has made no attempt to dispose of same, but possession of securities subjects him to danger of robbery or swindling operations. Fond of associating with questionable characters. Our clients insist upon importance of avoiding all publicity. Forwarding full particulars by mail. Please acknowledge by telegraph."

After a few minutes' communion with an English briar Crickmay summoned from his lair a long, pale, sandy-haired, and harmless-looking young man.

"Henry," Crickmay ordered, "I want you to find this man." He pushed a slip of paper across his big, littered desk to his henchman; he said nothing about the missing securities. "I don't want to see him, you understand—not yet, at least. But I want to know where he is, and what he is doing, and what he has been doing—what money he owes, and what deviltry he has been up to, if any. And no noise about it, Henry, not a rustle in the grass. Understand?"

Henry read the name and the date, and one or two added particulars.

"June thirteenth," he said slowly. "Lots of things have happened since then."

On the morning of the fourth day, when Crickmay breezed into his office, Henry was waiting for him.

"Lots of things happened, like I told you," he retorted. "He landed here June fifteenth and put up at that Greek deadfall down at the station, at first. He got in touch with some of the old gang right away, or they nosed him out, maybe. He didn't show any money to amount to anything, and had only one suitcase for baggage."

Crickmay made a memorandum in his small running script.

"They kept him busy for a few days, trying three or four of the old games on him, trying to get him to loosen up. They smelled money on him, but they couldn't find it. Then they let him win a little stake. They figured that would get him [illegible] and he would produce some real money. Instead of that, he throws them down, drives up to the Napoleon in a five-dollar-an-hour car, registers [illegible] his own name and gets himself all dressed up like a harness horse.

"Well, that couldn't last long. The gang let off him while he was up-town, but they kept [illegible] track of him, watching all the time for his money to show up. It didn't show up. After a few days at the hotel, what with automobile parties and other bills, he struck bottom. Then he went the rounds of the big mining offices, making a touch wherever he could on the strength of his name. That way he picked up a little stake again, and the gang decided it was no use waiting any longer. So they pulled him under one night and cleaned him, trying to break even, anyway. I figure they quit loser at that. But they finished the boy, good and plenty. Probably gave him too strong a dose of dope. Anyway, he woke up next day so badly shot to pieces and so wild that they got buffaloed and ran him up to the Junction in a car, and put him on the Overland at two in the morning, with a ticket to Frisco. Next day the trainmen took him off at Reno and sent him to a sanitarium there. That's where he is now, using the name the gang put on his ticket."

The Jackal had finished his story; a sordid story, but all too common.

"Did you find any baggage or valuables of any kind?" asked Crickmay.

"His suitcase and some new clothes are at the Napoleon, held for his last bill. Nothing of any value, the clerk says."

"Nothing in the safe?"

"No," said Henry. "Like I told you, he never did show any real money, this time. Here's the telegram from Reno," he concluded. Crickmay read it over. "'Partly rational, but not yet fit to be at large.' They must feel sure of getting paid or they wouldn't be so keen on holding him. However, that's all right; he's better off there than anywhere else, probably."

He said nothing about the missing securities. If Henry had found them, it was too late. And if, as seemed probable, he knew nothing of them—why, what he didn't know wouldn't hurt him.

He drew his checkbook from its drawer and paid Henry liberally. They always did business on a cash basis, and so kept on excellent terms.

"Thank you, sir. And any time you need me, you know which button to push." He slipped out into his jungle again, noiseless and sure.

Crickmay spent a few minutes studying the "full particulars by mail" which had arrived that morn

Arvilla and Her Quest for Hidden Treasure—A Love Story

The derelict had carried off with him a bundle of gilt-edged bonds of the face value of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. And the queer thing [illegible] it was that in a way they belonged to him. [illegible], they were part of his share of his father's [illegible], left in trust, however, until he should reach [illegible] of discretion, which his father, after many [illegible] disappointments, had fixed at forty. He was [illegible] well past thirty, and it seemed likely that his [illegible] had been too optimistic. He had been able, [illegible] shrewd trick, to get his hands on these securities for a moment, and had promptly disappeared. [illegible] family, shrinking from scandal, had not applied to the police, and, to do them justice, seemed [illegible] concerned over the dangers to which the [illegible] himself was liable than over the loss of the [illegible].

When Crickmay walked into the club dining-room [illegible] lunch, he picked out the table where the General Passenger Agent sat.

"Dave," he said, "I want to ask you a hypothetical question."

"Nothing doing!" said the G. P. A. "I've heard [illegible] those hypo questions of yours in court, and [illegible] always gets into trouble over them. Any [illegible] you want to ask me, you ask them straight [illegible] no frills."

Crickmay grinned over his chicken pie. "Glad to [illegible] you so agreeable today, Dave," he chuckled. [illegible] 'Courtesy First' circular of yours must have [illegible] on you.

"Suppose I checked a trunk at Cheyenne last [illegible] got into some trouble here, and dropped out [illegible], leaving my trunk in your baggage room. [illegible] do my heirs and assigns get hold of it?"

"They don't," growled the G. P. A. "We sold it [illegible] storage charges [illegible] ago."

The G. P. A. did not [illegible] politeness on men [illegible], and he liked Crickmay.

"Got a description of [illegible] trunk?" he added, [illegible] or anything to identify it?"

Crickmay quoted [illegible] little the full particulars [illegible] had contained.

The G. P. A. grunted. "Probably half [illegible] like it," he said. [illegible] we are supposed [illegible] a record of the [illegible] sold and the purchaser's address. Half [illegible] time they lie about [illegible] second-hand dealers [illegible]. I'll telephone [illegible] and have him [illegible] his record up to [illegible] office, and you see [illegible] you can dig out [illegible]."

Shortly after five [illegible] that afternoon, Crickmay tried the door [illegible] Arvilla's millinery [illegible]. It was locked, [illegible] conclusively so. [illegible] there was no response to his knocks, [illegible] to his punching of [illegible] bell button at the [illegible] of her rooms upstairs. A big Maltese [illegible] strolled from the rear of the shop [illegible] stared at him unblinkingly through the [illegible] window, but did [illegible] offer to open up. [illegible] youth at the drug [illegible] soda fountain next door had varnished hair, [illegible] nothing under it. He knew less than Crickmay did concerning Arvilla's whereabouts.

According to the station agent's record, Arvilla [illegible] bought a trunk, which might very well be the [illegible], just five days ago. Crickmay shrugged his [illegible] shoulders and walked slowly back to his car. [illegible] days late," he muttered cynically.

[illegible]—that cat had not acted as if it was hungry, [illegible] even lonesome.

One of the nicest things about Arvilla was that [illegible] never grew up. She locked her door behind [illegible] expressman who delivered the trunk and sat [illegible] flat on the floor in front of it, her trim feet [illegible] under her and a bunch of trunk keys in [illegible] hand. It was an ordinary little trunk, but it [illegible] an uncommon lock. Arvilla tried her keys one [illegible] the other. She was in no hurry, the suspense [illegible] delicious. Finally she had to get up and find [illegible] hammer and a heavy old chisel and force the [illegible]. She thrilled as the lid went up.

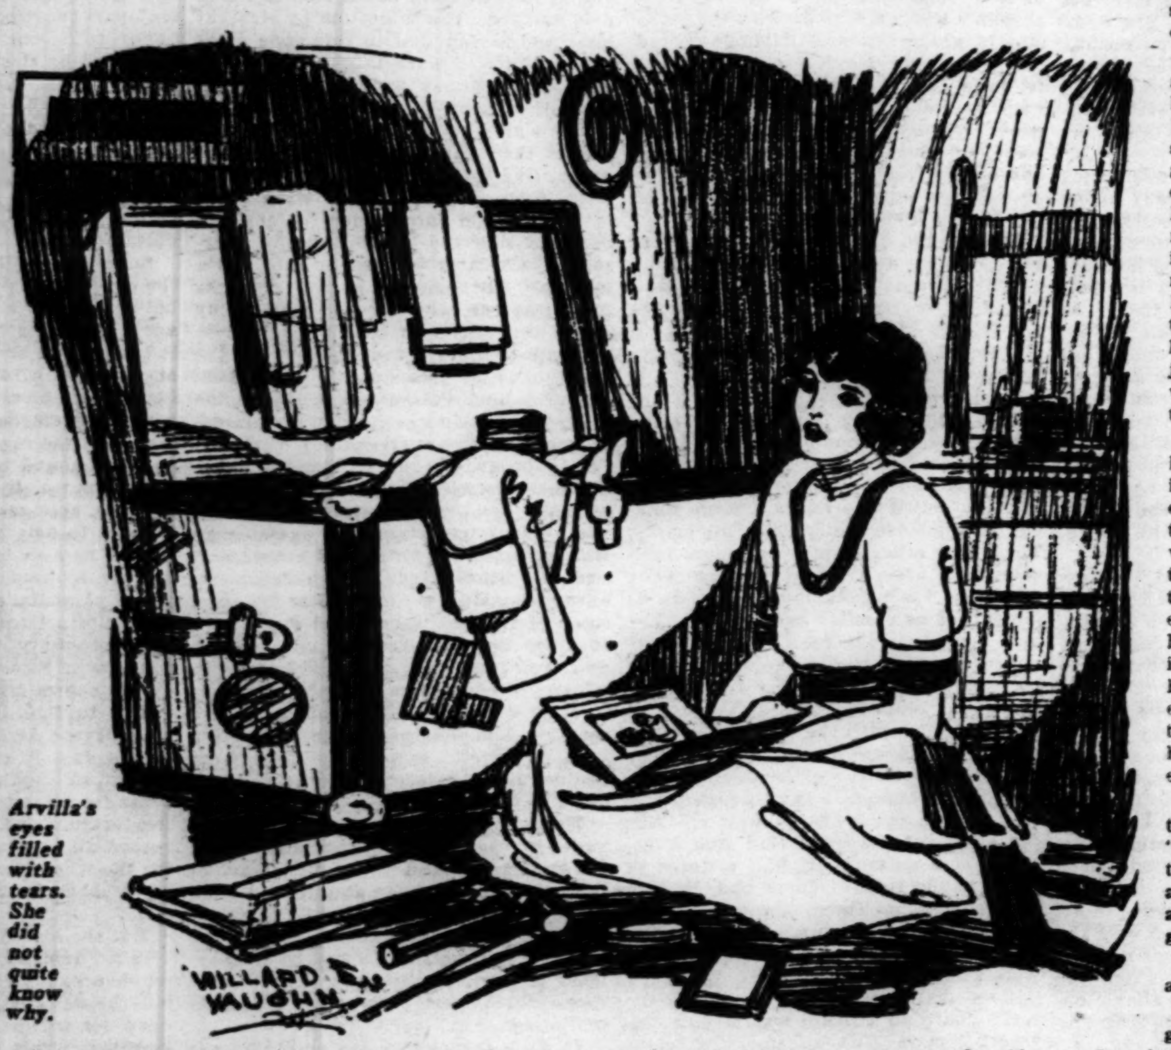
The contents did not look especially interesting, [illegible]. There was a jumble of hastily packed [illegible] clothing, some of it good and expensive; silk [illegible] and underwear, a tweed suit, a pair of riding [illegible]. Arvilla was systematic. She sorted the stuff [illegible] she went along, putting the salable articles in [illegible] by themselves. She would get her money [illegible] on this gamble at any rate. Presently she [illegible] upon a folding photograph case of hand-[illegible] leather, heavily ornamented with silver. [illegible] were two photographs. One showed a sweet-[illegible] mother with her arm about a handsome boy [illegible], both dressed in the fashion of twenty years [illegible] to Arvilla's knowing eye, but obviously people [illegible]. The other, taken not long since, showed the worn but still attractive face of the same woman—a woman of wealth and position, and of many bitter disappointments. At least Arvilla thought so, but Arvilla was romantically inclined.

Sitting there, flat upon her floor, with these photographs looking up from her lap, Arvilla's eyes filled with tears. She did not quite know why. As she folded the case, her fingers caught the crinkly feel of paper inside the leather, and examining it carefully she drew out from behind the second photograph two sheets of heavy linen note paper. As she read this letter she knew why the tears had come to her eyes. "To My Poor Prodigal, in His Far Country," it began; and ended, "Your father is gone, my dear, but his door and mine is always open to you. My heart runs to meet the very thought of your coming." Arvilla sat there and cried over it. She wondered what manner of man this prodigal could be and what had become of him.

At last she laid the photographs and letter away carefully, and opened a small but heavy oblong package, wrapped hurriedly in newspaper and tied with common string.

It has been said that Arvilla had never grown up. Nevertheless it must not be assumed that she was afflicted with that justly celebrated fourteen-year-old intelligence. When she saw her lap filled with crisp, folded papers, wonderfully engraved in yellow and green, each guaranteeing in the name of a great railroad system to pay to the bearer five thousand dollars, she knew just what had happened to her. Thirty of them, a hundred and fifty thousand dollars! Hidden treasure!

She sat perfectly still while the familiar room and its furnishings circled dizzily about her. A hundred and fifty thousand dollars, here, in her lap!



Arvilla's eyes filled with tears. She did not quite know why.

Footsteps on the stairs! She crouched low over her treasure, hiding it with her skirt, and held her breath. Only the druggist coming up to his rooms, but she could not keep it here. She looked at the clock. Seventeen minutes past four. The safe deposit vaults closed at five. She scrambled to her feet, stuffed the bonds into her handbag and snatched her hat and coat. If she could catch the next street car at the corner, she would just make it. The girls in the shop could be depended on to lock up. Arvilla ran for the corner.

It was almost six o'clock when she came home again, walking sedately, the key to the safe deposit box in her bag in place of the bonds. She had steadied now and was beginning to plan. It would not do to make any sudden change in her way of living that might attract attention.

The girls had locked up the shop and gone home—ahead of time as usual when they were left to themselves. Arvilla cooked and ate her solitary little dinner, and sat down at her west window to think things out.

There is this to be said for the gambling instinct, it certainly stimulates the imagination. All her life Arvilla had dreamed dreams and seen visions of the things she would do when the hidden treasure was found. Now she was bewildered by the array of them, hesitating to choose which should be the first to come true.

At ten o'clock she tidied up the room, laid the photograph case away in the bottom drawer of her dresser, closed the trunk, piled the salvaged clothing neatly, ready for the second-hand man in the morning, and went to bed. She did not sleep, but her wide-open eyes saw nothing in the room.

For three days she went about her accustomed concerns with careful attention. She scolded her assistants in the shop, she flattered the contractor's fat wife into buying a fifty-dollar hat, she wrangled with the traveling salesman over the quality of her last purchase of trimmings, and she drove a thrifty bargain with the second-hand man for the salvaged clothing. And all this time she was not really there at all.

For three nights she slept little, circling in the air, viewing all the kingdoms of the earth and the glories thereof, trying to choose between them. She decided at last upon Rio de Janeiro. She had read all about Rio in a magazine, and dreamed her dreams of it, long ago; and in the trunk had been a steamship prospectus, full of glittering allure. There she would go first, and feast upon beauty and romance and utter strangeness.

On the fourth afternoon, when she put away some clean clothes, she came upon the photograph case and opened it again. She set it up on her dresser, carelessly, and finished arranging the clothes in the drawer.

That night she slept, at first, then woke and lay open-eyed. And then, quite suddenly, without any warning whatever, Arvilla crashed. She collided with something as rock-ribbed and ancient as any hill—her own primitive, inbred, rugged honesty. She sat up in her bed, dazed, shaken. Arvilla knew the truth. This money was not hers.

Crickmay drove back to his office, feeling low in his mind.

His stenographer had gone home, but a woman was waiting for him, sitting quietly in the reception room. She rose as he came in, a woman of thirty, trimly turned out, her fall suit smartly tailored, a little hat to please the discerning eye, good shoes. Crickmay had an eye for women's clothes.

"This is Mr. Crickmay?" she asked, and as he assented, rather at a loss how to place her, she went on: "Can you give me a few minutes, on an important matter? My husband used to tell me that if ever I had any important business I must consult you. He had seen you in court two or three times when he was drawn on the jury. He always said you were the ablest lawyer there."

Crickmay sighed. He knew what this sort of introduction foreshadowed, some petty snarl in the affairs of a helpless woman, which would take a lot of valuable time and bring him neither cash nor credit. But he invited the woman into his office and asked her to be seated. Her eyes were clear and intelligent, and she carried herself steadily, whatever her worries.

She wasted no more time in introductions. "My name is Arvilla Carter," she said. "Five days ago I bought a trunk at a sale of unclaimed baggage."

Crickmay snapped to attention in his chair.

"The railroad agent gave me a receipt for the money I paid. As I understand it, I have a legal right to the trunk, and its contents?" She waited a moment. Crickmay felt his way cautiously—rather a joke that he should be called upon to prove this woman's right to the bonds he was looking for. "Ordinarily, yes," he answered slowly. "Go on, please."

"Ordinarily," agreed the woman; "but this is out of the ordinary, or I should not be taking your time. I found some valuable papers in the trunk, very valuable. And I do not feel that I can keep them. It would not be honest. I want you to help me find the person to whom they belong, so that I can give them back to him. I am able to pay you for your trouble."

This was simply too good to be true. "Where are those papers?" Crickmay asked.

"In my safe deposit box," said Arvilla.

Crickmay drew a deep breath and smiled. This woman had both character and intelligence. She knew what she was about. He decided on the instant to lay his cards on the table.

"A hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gilt-edged railroad bonds," he said. Arvilla jumped, stared, flushed, and went pale.

"You know all about it!" she cried, and shrank back in her chair. "Have I done wrong then, after all?"

Crickmay rose and held out his hand. "On the contrary," he said, "you have done the rightest thing possible. Will you shake hands?"

Arvilla shook hands, and smiled uncertainly, still pale. "I didn't mean to, at first," she confessed with childlike candor, "but last night I—woke up. I couldn't keep them. You know it wouldn't be the Princess was forbidden the imperial court. Prince Orloff also heard about it, and at once stopped his wife's allowance. The Princess wanted a divorce, but the Prince would not sue for it, and she could not.

When Princess Slowly Starved to Death

What Prince Orloff did do was to fight a duel with Col. Ivanoff, which created a great scandal in the highest Russian society. The meeting between the two men took place one December morning, in 1893, at Tsarskoe-Selo, not far from the imperial palace. The duel lasted for a considerable time, and in the end Col. Ivanoff received a wound which incapacitated him for life.

Having thus gotten the revenge that he wanted, Prince Orloff initiated proceedings for a divorce, and the Princess deemed it advisable to leave Russia and go to London, where she had many friends. The Princess' own family strongly resented her behavior. She left everything behind, including the son, and made her home in England.

Col. Ivanoff probably would have married her, but he had a wife still living from whom he had been parted for a good many years. The Colonel was compelled to resign his commission in the Russian army, and about two months after Princess Orloff reached London, he joined her there.

For approximately the next three years Princess Orloff and the Colonel lived together in expensive apartments in Grosvenor Square, Mayfair. The Colonel was not rich, and the Princess had only an income of about $6000 a year, which she received from the estates of a relative in Russia; also some magnificent jewels which had come to her on the death of her mother.

Although—not overburdened with money, the pair lived a blissfully happy life, and Russian people in London who knew the full story of her life treated the affair in a broad-minded manner which somewhat recompensed the pair for what they had left behind them. In 1896 Col. Ivanoff died and left her all his money. It was not a fortune, but with her own income she managed to keep up a good deal of state and to entertain quite frequently.

"She was still invited to all the big society functions in London, and the different Russian Ambassadors who came here always treated her with the utmost friendliness," states News of the World, published in London.

But the fact remained that she was almost alone in the world, and certainly had nothing to go back to in Russia. To intimate friends she remarked more than once that some day she would end her own life.

Several years after Princess Orloff made her home in London she paid a visit to Petrograd and saw her son Dmitri, then a handsome young army officer with a commission in the Imperial Guard. Dmitri knew all about his mother's past history and felt nothing but sorrow over the event which had driven his parents apart.

The father, however, frowned upon any attempt at a reconciliation, and the Princess had to content herself with an occasional visit to her son, which the latter returned at the first available opportunity, and with a constant correspondence.

Prince Orloff died in 1903. The son came to London immediately afterward and brought his mother the family jewels. There was nothing else, for all the money had been willed away. The young Prince Orloff could help his mother financially only to a moderate extent, but there was enough for her to live upon in considerable comfort.

Then, in 1905, Princess Orloff lost the income from her family's estate in Russia and she began to sell the famous Orloff jewels. Everybody in Mayfair knew her, and the magnificent gems that she wore. As the years went on, the jewelry gradually disappeared. Beautiful rings and necklaces went into pawnbrokers' shops and never were redeemed.

Among other treasures, she had a diamond girdle which must have been worth fully $25,000. It was pledged for $7500 and never redeemed, for the reason that Princess Orloff never had enough money to do so. She replaced the jewels with imitations and tried to make as brave a show as possible, but it was a losing fight.

For about 12 years the Princess occupied the same lodgings in Mayfair, and it was during this time that she first met Edward Pearson, a widower. Both were lonely people, who had nobody to care very much what happened to them. So they were married, although the Princess continued to use her title. Mr. Pearson possessed a small income and the Princess had her jewels. The pair took rooms and lived quietly until the World War began, in 1914.

Dmitri Orloff, who had been his mother's only hope, joined a cavalry regiment and was killed in October, 1914, in the fighting in East Prussia, under Gen. Rennenkampf. All that the mother received was his sword and a few private papers, which were returned to the Russian War Office by the German Government.

This final blow from the bludgeon of fate seems to have broken the heart of Princess Orloff. She and the elderly husband then were living with Mrs. Kent, in Little Grosvenor street. After the son's death, they shut themselves up in their room and even the Princess, with her lifelong fondness for society, went out but rarely.

And now the most abject poverty descended upon the couple. All the Princess' influential Russian friends had quitted London as soon as war was declared, the jewelry was gone and, except for the fact that Count and Countess Benckendorff occasionally assisted her, she would have found it very difficult to make both ends meet.

The Princess' expensive clothing deteriorated, with age and wear, and she could not replace it. She used to mend her garments as neatly as she was able, adding little pieces of lace and patches of silk. The condition of her wardrobe probably had much to do with the seclusion in which Princess Orloff now lived. "Everybody in Mayfair still continued to know her, if only for the extraordinary hats she wore," says the London paper. "They were of the style which Napoleon Bonaparte made so famous, and on the front of these hats the Princess always wore a silver bugle, and on the back a fleur de lys."

Up till the Russian revolution of 1917, which deprived all the nobility of their property, Princess Orloff now and then received assistance from some old friend. But from this time on, it did not happen very often. There were infrequent gifts of food and wine from London friends. Upon the death of the Princess the police found in her room dozens of empty wine bottles with labels that denoted rare and costly vintages.

In that hideous room of filth and vermin the police also found a large number of condensed milk cans, all empty. These and other empty containers indicated that when the Princess had ready money it was her custom to buy up as much food as possible and store it. The only articles in the room even remotely suggesting food were a moldy packet of cocoa and a box of chocolates, apparently several years old. These things had been hoarded until they became spoiled.

The abject poverty of the Princess did not prevent acts of kindness to animals. Her humanity in this regard was well known in the neighborhood. She fed every cat she could find, and sometimes kept as many as half a dozen of them in the room. There had, in fact, been complaints about it, and more than once she had been summoned to police court on the charge of maintaining a nuisance.

Some little time before Princess Orloff's death an attempt was made to interest certain Russian soviet officials, then in London, in her sad case. The officials declined to do anything, saying that Princesses were no concern of theirs.

Advices from London say that there is no Princess Orloff answering her description in the Almanach de Gotha. But she had figured in a great scandal, which brought down upon her the resentment of powerful persons and of her own family, which may be the explanation. Mail received at the little lodgings in the back street of Mayfair always bore the title which she claimed.

A Quest for the Secrets of the Sea

were the Columbuses and Magellans of the ocean, but a map of the sea, its bottom, currents and life, based on their finds would be as vague and inaccurate as some of those old land maps based on the first expeditions to this hemisphere.

On first thought, it would seem that the fish in the wide, wide ocean, able to move at will in all directions through the water, enjoy a freedom that is practically unlimited. But neither the poor fish nor marine mammals are so favored. Marine life is restricted in much the same way as the distribution of plants and animals on land.

As on land we do not expect to find polar bears or reindeer moss in tropical jungles, nor monkeys and bananas in the arctic; so in the sea we do not look for codfish and herring in warm waters or tunny and flying fish flocking around icebergs. Some forms of life must have very salty water, others cannot exist in such salty seas. On land there are mountain plants and animals which do not thrive in the lowlands, so in the ocean there are depths to which certain forms are adapted and into which others cannot go.

But it is not a simple matter of dividing the sea from north pole to south pole and from top to bottom by straight lines and saying that in this zone or at this latitude live certain species of warm-water plants and animals, and in this other zone or latitude live other colder water kinds.

For there are great rivers in the ocean, like the Gulf Stream or the Japanese Current, which carry wide strips of warm water into colder regions and currents like the great Labrador current which carry cold water into warm latitudes. Beneath the surface currents there may run other streams originating under very different conditions. These currents are important factors in the distribution of plants and animals, fish, mollusks and what not, and the region in which certain species can live is determined by the current.

The ocean, of course, has its long-distance travelers. As insects, birds, animals and even certain people go south in winter or north in summer, so whales, salmon, codfish and a thousand and one other kinds of sea creatures, have seasonal migrations. For instance, some of Boston's sacred cod are known to move down the coast to New York and even to Old Virginia and beyond in winter, while others probably migrate in other directions. Some of the whales may rival in distance covered that sea bird, the arctic tern, which flies from the arctic to antarctic and back every year.

Even natives of our inland streams make journeys to the sea. Salmon that spawn from inland water live most of their lives in the ocean and depend upon ocean life for their food, while the common fresh-water eels are hatched in the sea near Bermuda and spend their babyhood as tiny, almost transparent creatures which form part of the plankton of the sea.

In their movements sea creatures are evidently restricted as are land animals by barriers which they cannot easily cross. Just as there are deserts and mountains which have stopped the spread of land animals, there are deserts in the sea where food to sustain life is scarce or where there are cold or warm currents which serve to cut off the spread of certain kinds of ocean organisms.

The expedition being organized by the U. S. Navy's Hydrographic Office will collect evidence which will throw much light on the laws which govern this sea food supply. The ship to be sent out will be equipped with all the latest apparatus for probing the [illegible] of the sea. It will probably contain a complete laboratory for the preliminary examination of different kinds of sea animals and complete analysis of the chemical contents of the water in which they live.

The temperature and salinity of the water will be taken at all depths with the most delicate modern instruments. Samples from the bottom all along the route will be secured, fish and other large ocean forms as well as microscopic plants and animals will be caught.

Some of the tiny creatures may even furnish important fundamental facts about the universal problems of life, death, reproduction and nutrition. For many of them are transparent, so that their internal anatomy is more readily studied than their outer form.

The emphasis of the expedition will not be on the intensive study of the creatures themselves, but upon their relation to their environment. Of prime importance in the study of that environment is a knowledge of the actual lay of the land at the bottom of the sea. Just as mountains and valleys determine the flow of our rivers, so submarine peaks and hollows play an important part in directing the flow of those under-water currents which will be measured by the expedition.

The depth, temperature and movement of the bottom waters also determine the kind of creatures that dwell on the ocean floor and these in turn have a bearing on those nearer the surface. Mapping the ocean bottom will be one of the most important tasks undertaken by the explorers.

Soundings will be made not only by the old method of dropping a line to the bottom of the ocean and reeling it up again, but also by measuring the time it takes for a sound, made under water at one end of the ship, to go to the bottom and be reflected back as an echo which is detected by a mechanical ear placed at the other end of the ship. The speed of sound traveling through water being known, it is a simple matter for delicate, split-second time-recording apparatus to determine the depth.

This new sonic method of depth-finding can be used when the boat is going ahead at ordinary speed and instead of taking widely separated soundings, as were necessary under the old system, a continuous record can be taken and accurate charts made.

But to find the amount of sunlight at different depths and different times of the day, to catch the little and big fish at all depths, to measure the currents from top to bottom, as well as the temperature and density of the water, to record all this vast data, and analyze it for the whole ocean is a task that would be crushingly heavy and take untold time.

But the expedition will be a piecemeal affair. Instead of trying to cover the whole ocean, a comparatively small area will be selected. Probably the Caribbean Sea will be chosen for the first expedition. This will be thoroughly and intensively surveyed. But it will probably be only the first of a series by this country, and the first of a still greater series by all the leading nations of the world. It is more than probable that other countries will send out similar expeditions to survey the waters off their own shores.

An international bureau for the exchange of the vast amount of data which will be collected is one of the possibilities foreseen. In the years that lie ahead, the ocean and its food resources and the laws which govern them will be thoroughly explored.

As these explorations progress the peoples of the earth will come more and more to think in terms of the sea. The almost instinctive horror which many inlanders feel for sea creatures will be dissipated. Animals now considered strange or grotesque will gradually become more familiar and with familiarity their beauty of form and color will be recognized. Great discoveries in the dark recesses of the sea in the future will be as eagerly followed as was the opening of the tomb of the buried Pharaoh Tutankhamen.

Society notes of the years ahead will probably speak of debutantes draped in diatom lace over squid silk or [illegible] nautilus shell hats or gulf-weed [illegible]

Rapid Manufacture of Paper Barrels

A NEW paper-barrel machine is claimed to offer great possibilities in the production of containers. Though made of paper, its product is light, strong and durable, and can be made rapidly in a great variety of shapes. The machine consists essentially of a cylinder in two parts, which can be separated to produce barrels of different shapes and the two halves are rotated together on a horizontal axis.

Tough "chip-board" paper from a roll, passing through tension rollers and an adhesive coating device, is wound tightly on the cylinder in a predetermined number of layers. The depth of the barrel is adjusted by the separation of the cylinder halves. When the required thickness has been laid on, a slitting wheel divides the paper into two equal portions, which are drawn apart, and the middle receives an additional winding to form the bilge. It is stated that the usual form can be produced at the rate of a barrel a minute.

Water glass, or silicate of soda, which sets so quickly that the barrels are ready for immediate use, is the usual adhesive; and for liquids a special neutral coating is applied inside to prevent corrosion. Wooden heads are commonly provided.

Ancient Tombs May Solve Mystery of Etruscans

"ONE of the most puzzling mysteries of history, the source of Etruscan civilization, famous rival of Rome, may be solved by the discovery announced from Italy of a very ancient city near Ferrara," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society, and continues:

"Tombs recently found beneath the sand deposited by the Po River are of a period antedating the founding of Rome and indicate an Etruscan origin. Romulus, founder of Rome, suckled by a she wolf, according to legend, found the Etruscan people firmly established when he began Rome. Legend gives them a league of 12 cities thriving on the rich fertile plain to which Egypt, Greece and Africa paid bounteous tribute in gold, silver, scarabs, rare vases and priceless gems. Pisa, famous today for its leaning tower, was a small village of rich, extravagant, voluptuous Etruria. All the great cities have vanished.

"Etruscans are supposed to have entered Italy from the Po region. Whether they came from Macedonia, the home of Alexander the Great, or whether they were a colony established by Greece in the days of her grandeur may be decided by the remains of the lost city discovered near Ferrara. Like Rome, Etruria fell victim of her sin.

"Diodorus wrote, 'Their country was so fertile they derived therefrom not only sufficient for their needs but enough to supply them with luxuries. Twice a day they partook of elaborate repasts at which the tables were decked with embroidered cloths and vessels of gold and silver. The servants were noticeable for the richness of their attire. In fact, giving themselves up to sensuous enjoyments they had naturally lost the glorious reputation their ancestors had won in wars.'

"Etruria today is a country of dun fields and deep rocky ravines. Ferrara, too, where the ancient Etrurian city has been unearthed, is a dismal, faded flower living on the memories of its glorious blooming in the bright days of the Italian Renaissance.

"Scraps of graceful cornices and weather-worn marble remind the visitor of famous names, of Lucrezia Borgia, who had been married four times by her father, Pope Alexander VII at the age of 22; of Tasso, who wrote 'Jerusalem Delivered,' while living under the patronage of the famous Lucrezia. Titian achieved his first great success in Ferrara with a magnificent Renaissance canvas for the altar of the Church of Fari. Then there was Aldus. Even today men who deal with type the whole world round know and praise the work of this man, who, following close on the heels of Gutenberg, inventor of printing, produced type which is still a standard of grace. It was Aldus, also protege of Lucrezia, living at the magnificent ducal palace of Ferrara, who developed what is now known as italic type.

"Aldus was no less a scholar than a printer. His emissaries and fellow workers scoured Greece and Constantinople for the fast disappearing Greek gems of literature. He produced the first Greek grammar and saved to the world priceless works of Horace, Plato, Socrates and other writers, philosophers and singers who will always be intellectual giants of civilization.

"Brilliant and colorful as was the Italian Renaissance period it was also corrupt, licentious, immoral and wicked beyond belief. Great works of Titian, Bellini, Raphael were balanced by diabolical murders, by assassination bought and paid for, by poisonings, by internectine wars, by religion adn political life both sunk in a morass of evil practices. Into such a setting a famous son of Ferrara was born, the noted Savonarola. He forswore the corrupt court life and, like a prophet of the Old Testament, went through the land preaching against wickedness and assuring God's forgiveness for the penitent. Great crowds were charged with enthusiasm by the power of his oratory; the people changed their way of life, simple garb was assumed by thousands and monarchs were overthrown.

"So powerful did Savonarola become that enemies plotted his death. Finally he and two of his followers were tried by a jury of their enemies, condemned to death, hanged and their bodies burned. Amid the memories of great courts, great painters and great martyrdom Ferrara lives, sleepy and stodgy under the sun and the Italian blue sky.. Now with the discovery of the Etrurian town a new memory is added to the already long list."

actually develop and become acute is based on a recognition of the nature of the injury. The effects of ivy poisoning on the skin are very like those of a burn, and the treatment suggested resembles that successfully used during the war in burn cases. The affected parts are first bathed with ferric chloride solution, to neutralize the toxin. Then the skin is dried with a current of air from an electric fan, and melted paraffin painted over it, or sprayed with an air brush. A thin sheet of cotton is laid over the wound, and this also is impregnated with paraffin.

The affected area is thus protected from the air and from rubbing, and a new skin is given a chance to grow over it.

The plants that cause ivy poisoning are all botanically related, and belong to the genus Rhus, to which belong also the harmless and beautiful sumacs of our autumn roadsides, and certain Oriental bushes that yield ingredients for shellac and varnish. There are three principal poisonous species of Rhus in the Eastern United States, and one on the Pacific coast.

The first and most common of the Eastern species is the poison ivy itself, known botanically as Rhus toxicodendron. The rather terrifying species-name, toxicodendron, is simply a compound of two Greek words that mean "poison tree"—which is fair enough. Poison ivy is easily distinguishable by its three-parted compound leaves, as shown in the accompanying illustration. Its flowers, which appear late in spring, are clusters of inconspicuous, greenish-white bloom, followed by waxy white berries. The plant is said to be especially poisonous when in blossom.

There are two principal habits of growth. In one phase, the plant comes up as slender, stiffly erect, little-branched shrubs arising from winding underground stems or rootsticks. The bark is rather smooth and light-gray. The height is usually from one to two and one-half feet, though in rich, moist places it may reach four or five. In the other growth phase the main stem comes up from underground and clambers up trees and over rocks and walls, sending out aerial roots that cling like those of the true ivy.

Because of the rooting habit of this phase or type of poison ivy, the great poineer botanist Linnaeus gave it a separate name, Rhus radicans—"radicans" means "rooting"—and considered it as a separate species. But the present-day tendency is to regard the vine simply as a climbing phase of the shrub. The poison ivy is found in practically all woods from Kansas eastward, as a shrub where the woods are open and rather dry and as a vine where they are rich and moist. Poison ivy vines with trunks nearly a foot through grow in the "hammocks" of Florida.

Very closely resembling the poison ivy we have two species of poison oak, Rhus quercifolia of the East and Rhus diversiloba of the Pacific coast. Both of these plants look so much like the poison ivy that there has been a tendency on the part of some botanists to try to combine these species also with it, as Rhus radicans was combined; the point is as yet unsettled. The poison oaks seem, however, to be less virulent in their action than the ivy.

The most vicious member of this whole vegetable Borgia clan, however, is the poison sumac. It is very fortunate that this species grows commonly only around the margins of bogs, where no one but occasional hunters and naturalists ever go. Sometimes, where a road has been built through a bog, a clump of poison sumac will cause a great deal of trouble.

Its leaves, as the illustration shows, look very much like those of the common wayside sumac, but the plants are easily told apart. In the first place, the common sumac never grows in bogs, and the poison variety never grows anywhere else. In the second, the fruits, both of common sumac and the staghorn sumac, another ornamental variety, are still, erect groups of brown or black seeds, while the fruit of the poison sumac is a drooping bunch of pallid berries.

Sometimes the woodbine, or Virginia creeper, a fine ornamental vine, is confused with poison ivy and thus gets a most undeserved bad name. The confusion is easy to avoid. The woodbine always has five leaflets whereas the poison ivy always has three. There is an old adage that is an excellent guide: "Five fingers may handle five leaves." Moreover, the woodbine does not support itself on aerial roots like the poison ivy vine, but climbs with tendrils like a grape. Finally, its fruit, instead of being an erect bunch of white berries, is a drooping, flat-ended bunch of purple berries.

The woodbine is deserving of the encouragement that should be given to all our excellent native ornamentals, and should be cultivated where the poison ivy is rooted out.

The Department of Agriculture favors the eradication of poison ivy wherever it occurs near farm buildings, in public parks and playgrounds, and wherever else it comes into contact with human beings and causes trouble. The most effective and only final method of getting rid of it is to pull or grub it up, paying special attention to the rootstocks. This may be done by anyone now, with the protection afforded by the "iron treatment."

The department also states that sheep and stock browse on the bushes without harm, and may be used to keep it down. Spraying with kerosene, sodium arsenite solution or strong brine are recommended as chemical means of destruction.

"Treasure Hunts" Through City Streets

is a pity. Of course, she did it unwittingly, in her usual burst of [illegible] spirit, but even the most censorious should not be cruel enough to call her behavior 'bright.'

"The treasure hunt, as far as I can find out, and I have tried hard, was started in Mrs. Holden's garden at the lovely Priory, near Chichester, to amuse a child of 10. The treasure was then probably modest—half a crown in a twist of gold paper—the clews difficult enough to make up an afternoon.

"Two enterprising sisters, living in London, who are allowed their mother's car, and had two or three friends with two-seaters, thought of elaborating the Priory garden game.

"They conceived the idea of making a London treasure hunt, not only of clews put in telephone boxes, lamp posts and fire escapes, but clews that involved a little thought in the way of a combination of quotations, or the solving of an acrostic or the discovery of new beauties in London.

"The picture galleries, museums, statues and ancient buildings are for some reason or other a sealed book to what are known as the leisured classes, or shall I say treasured classes? The bronze tablet of Eleanor of Castile, the [illegible] in the London Museum, have all held clews—slips of paper, 'not to be taken away.'

"Good manners are needed to allow one to leave the trail, unchallenged by the faithful custodians of the collections.

"We are not allowed to help each other, and not allowed to follow each other's cars, so that if Miss Gladys Cooper, one of the keenest hunters, were to make up her mind that 'Barnaby Rudge' meant 'Dickens' and, therefore, went to the house where Dickens once lived, and she met Lady Diana Cooper going in exactly the opposite direction, having thought that 'Barnaby Rudge' meant 'St. Paul's,' she is not to say, 'Ah, Diana is sure to be right,' and follow her car, but depend on herself and find out her mistake—and Gladys Cooper always will—if mistake it is!

"The last one was magnificently done, printed and with a lovely little wood cut by one of the talented Wyndham family. The one before that was set by Miss Blossom Forbes Robertson, and a great hunt it was! Earlier still, I have memories of myself in full coster clothes, running 'hell for leather' down Bow street with clews and oranges bursting from my basket. Oh, it's a great and harmless game!

"If we can only 'confine ourselves within the narrow limits of order.'"

Things They Tell the Divorce Judge

stantial number. Persons who get these decrees are generally wealthy, and willing to pay well for a speedy separation. The courts of France are smoothly running institutions. Americans who seek divorces see to it that they are kept well oiled.

Paris, the mecca of the disillusioned, the city of easy decrees, is now the headquarters for divorce-seeking Americans with much money and less grounds. More recently, Yucatan has crept into the spotlight as a community where the sour notes of the matrimonial blues can be isolated with neatness and dispatch.

It is reported that quite soon a huge divorce mill will begin operating in Lower California. Whether or not this breaking-up point is being supplied for the movie trade is a matter of conjecture. It will be convenient, at any rate.

From Russia comes the news of some real high-pressure divorce grants. In case both parties agree, a decree can be had in five minutes. The cost is quite reasonable—only $1.50. These bargain rates evidently appeal to the residents of the Moscow district, as divorces in this section have shown an increase of 45 per cent during the first six months of 1924.

Malasia, however, still shows the way when it comes to quick action. If a man wishes to divorce his wife in that country he chants, "I divorce thee," three times, and that ends it. Wear and tear on the vocal cords is the only expense entailed. This system is held in high esteem on the archipelago.

But it is doubtful whether Malasia, even with its "speak-easy" divorce method, can surpass this country in actual divorce grants. The American divorce mills grind busily six days a week, and still there is a large waiting list.

honest."

"No," said Crickmay, "I can see that you couldn't, but I am deeply grateful to you for not trying. Let me tell you my part of the story."

He read to her the telegram, the memorandum of Henry's report, and part of the full particulars from New York.

Arvilla listened with intent, earnest eyes fixed on his face. She was thinking once more of that poor derelict in his far country, and of his mother's hungry heart. This boy was sick and forsaken among strangers.

"What do you advise me to do?" she asked, when the reading was finished.

"I am hardly in a position to advise you professionally," said Crickmay. "I represent the other side in the matter, you know. But with your permission, I will telegraph to New York and lay the facts before my principals, with my recommendations. I believe they will do the right thing. I will telephone you as soon as I have their answer."

"I am quite satisfied to leave the matter in your hands," said Arvilla, 'so far as I am concerned. But what about that poor boy at Reno, sick and alone among strangers?"

Crickmay smiled at her. How like a woman to put it that way. "Hardly a boy," said he, "thirty-four, according to the record, you know. He seems to be in safe hands, at least. I think we may rely upon his family to see that he is properly cared for."

Arvilla did not think so, but she said nothing more about it. She had the feeling that the care his family had been giving him thus far left much to be desired. She took her leave now, and Crickmay shook hands again, cordially, as he showed her out. She was really too good to be true, but he found it impossible to doubt her.

Arvilla went steadily about her small concerns and made ready for bed earlier than usual. Before she put out her light she took up the photographs. "He said I had done the 'rightest thing possible,'" she murmured. "I wonder if I did. That poor boy of yours will not get the money that belongs to him, after all." Arvilla, it will be observed, reasoned in a feminine fashion.

She slept soundly and long that night. The next afternoon, summoned by a telephone message from Mr. Crickmay, she took the bonds from her safe deposit box and carried them to his office. He handed her a telegram from New York, and watched her as she read it:

"Upon return of the bonds you will please express to Mrs. Carter our sincere appreciation of her good faith, and hand her a check for fifteen thousand dollars. Please add that this is not a reward but evidence of the esteem of a much-tried family. Accept our thanks and congratulations for yourself."

Arvilla lifted her eyes from the message. They were very bright. It was a pleasant message to read. But she spoke soberly:

"Fifteen thousand dollars!" she said, "That is a good deal of money. Do you thing I ought to take it?"

Crickmay smiled and pushed the certified check across his desk. "Of course you must take it," he said. "It's worth every cent of it to them, and to me."

Arvilla sighed and took the bonds from her bag, watching quietly while Crickmay checked them over and signed a receipt for them. She folded the check and receipt together, stowed them carefully in the bag, and stood up.

"Thank you," she said simply. "That is all, so far as I am concerned, is it not?"

Crickmay came from behind his desk and walked to the door with her. "May I say," he asked, "that it has done me good to know you, and to be honored by your confidence? I hope you will look upon me as a friend."

"Thank you," said Arvilla again.

That day and the next she had an unusual amount of business to attend to. At five o'clock on the second afternoon she drove to the station in a taxi and took a west-bound train. The smaller of her two trunks had a new lock.

"On Board S. S. Two Americas, Off Panama.

"Dear Mr. Crickmay: I have made up my mind that it is right to tell you all about it. You must do as you think best about notifying the family in New York. I could not bring myself to write to them direct.

"When I arrived at Reno, I took a room at a hotel and drove out to the sanitarium. I told the doctor in charge that I was a friend of the family. I was, too, at least so far, though I suppose they will never believe it, after what has happened. The doctor made no objection to my seeing Donald, and I had quite a talk with him. I saw at once that the poor boy had been very sick, but when they told you he was only partly rational they did not know what they were talking about. The trouble is, Mr. Crickmay, that the boy has been misunderstood all his life.

"I went up every day to see him, and we grew to be great friends in a short time. He has had care and a good education, and some opportunities—but his family never had any confidence in him.

"When he went wrong, they tried to protect him from the consequences, but they were never willing to trust him and let him go his own way, and believe he would come out all right. Not even his mother. She loved him and broke her heart over him, but she was never his friend. That was just what he needed, just a good friend.

"After a few days, the doctor let me take him for drives in a car I had hired. We used to drive along the river. There are some lovely spots, and it was mild and sunny weather nearly every day. We had good times together, picnics, and long walks and drives. And long talks, too.

"Well, one day, after I had been there about three weeks, the doctor came out and handed Donald a telegram. He read it and showed it to me. It was from his brother, and it stated that he was sending money to the doctor to pay all his bills up to date, and enough more to cover his fare and expenses to New York.

"We did not talk about it until we had left the car and found one of our quiet spots on the river. Then Donald asked me to marry him. He said I was the only real friend he had ever had, and that if I would stand by him, he knew he could win out; that he was well now, and ready to work, if he could work for me; that if he should go back to his family and live there on sufferance once more, it would simply mean he would go to the bad again.

"I would not answer him until I told him about the bonds, and how I had returned them to you, though all the time, Mr. Crickmay, I had felt they really belonged to him.

"He said, 'If you had kept them, I should have missed you. And with you to stand beside me, how can I ever go wrong again?'

"Mr. Crickmay, I knew it was a gamble, a desperate chance. But I took it, and I have never been sorry, not for a minute. We were married the next day in Reno, and we sailed from San Francisco a few days later. And can you guess where we are going to spend Christmas day? In Rio de Janeiro! Donald has a position waiting for him there, with one of the big importing firms. We arranged that in San Francisco.

"All my life I have expected to find hidden treasure that had belonged to some one else. I have found it now, and it is really mine, my very own.

"Please forgive me for writing such a long letter, but I felt I must tell you all about it. I will mail this at Panama tomorrow.

"Good-by, my friend,
"ARVILLA CARTER LITTLETON."

Crickmay leaned back in his chair and stretched his arms high over his head in a gesture of triumph, and laughed aloud. "Oh, 'Frabjous Day!'" he cried: "What a bully world it is. And what a bully little sport. I back Arvilla against the field."

It must be confessed that Arvilla was absolutely incurable.

Most Mysterious Murder Case

on him instead of putting him on the ferry back to New Jersey he took him by boat to Troy and thence overland to Bennington, Vermont. The County Court was in session, but it broke up quickly and the Judges joined in the general demonstration which took place when it became known that the supposed dead man had returned.

The farmhand was recognized and identified beyond all doubt as Russell Colvin.

A courier was sent ahead to Manchester. The whole town was awaiting Colvin's arrival and cannon were fired in celebration of the prospective release of the prisoners. Stephen Boorn was brought from the jail in chains to fire the first cannon.

Colvin looked at the chains and said: "What are they for?"

"Because they say I murdered you," replied Stephen Boorn.

"You never hurt me," said Colvin. "Jesse struck me with a briar once, but it didn't hurt me much."

Colvin refused to remain with his family and returned to New Jersey, where he died a few years later.

Far from clearing up the mysteries connected with this strange murder case, Colvin's return added new puzzles and problems, too. His mental condition was such that he was unable to tell just what happened after he was felled with the beech stick.

If there had been no murder, whose toenails and bones were dug up, and why were Colvin's knife and button found where Stephen Boorn said he buried the body?

If there had been no murder, why did Stephen Boorn confess one?

What was the significance of Colvin's assertion that it was Jesse and not Stephen who struck him?

And, important most of all—

Whose ghost appeared to Uncle Amos?

It might be assumed that Stephen's confession was in part false and in part made in good faith. Would it not be possible that his confession that he struck the blow was intended to save his brother, Jesse? Try to reconstruct the happenings in this way:

Stephen saw Jesse strike down Colvin. The brothers fled, going to their respective homes. After nightfall Stephen returned to the scene of the tragedy and buried the body to cover up his brother's crime.

But whose body did he bury? Manifestly it was not Colvin's, for Colvin came back.

Did Stephen bury the living Colvin, unconscious and unable to offer resistance, and did Colvin later crawl out of the shallow, twig-covered grave and go on his way, leaving only his knife which fell from his pocket and a button torn from his coat in his effort to free himself? On that theory the rude board coffin was empty when Stephen reburied it in his father's barn. That was quite a while after the supposed murder and the reduction in the weight might have been accounted for by natural disintegration.

Then how account for the bones dug up in the barn and from under the stump where Stephen said he buried the body?

The known facts would seem to show that Stephen didn't kill anybody, but he buried somebody.

Let fancy come to our aid again.

The war of 1812 was just getting under way. Thousands of volunteers were being mobilized in New England camps. Young men "going to war" single or in groups were not uncommon wayfarers in districts where in normal times wayfarers were scarce.

It must be remembered that Russell Colvin, when at his best, was reputed to be "weak in his intellect." His mind was in a chronic state of confusion and it must have been further scrambled by that blow with the pointed stick.

So we have Colvin lying there unconscious after the Boorn brothers fled. It is dark or deep dusk when he comes back to consciousness. He has no idea how much time has elapsed. He awakens in a blind fury of resentment, thinking only of revenge. On the ground beside him stained with his own blood, is the beech stick.

At that moment did some luckless wayfarer cross his path in the gathering darkness and did Colvin set upon and kill this wayfarer, thinking it was one of the Boorn brothers? Fancy can picture this man of weak intellect gloating over his revenge and possibly hiding in the bushes and watching Stephen bury the body.

Perhaps somewhere in the Government records of the war of 1812 there is the name of some soldier designated as "missing," who in reality filled that grave dug with feverish haste by Stephen Boorn while the man he thought he was burying looked on.

Uniforms were scarce in the early stages of the war of 1812. Many men in camps had not been equipped and were still in their civilian clothes.

Is it an unwarranted conclusion that in the time that elapsed before Stephen's return on his grim mission of burial the half-witted but crafty Colvin exchanged clothes with the man he had killed? That would account for the button and for the knife, too, if Colvin forgot to remove it from his pocket when making the quick change.

But to get back to Uncle Amos' dream and the ghost that appeared to him in the night. Would a ghost lie? If the ghost was that of the unfortunate wayfarer why should it have told Uncle Amos it had been murdered by the Boorn brothers? A stranger from an army camp, or a tramp passing through the Country, would not have known the Boorns.

Men of Russell Colvin's mental twist sometimes do oddly crafty things with great cunning and success.

Suppose it was no ghost at all, but Russell Colvin in the flesh, who sneaked into Uncle Amos' bedroom that night and made the accusation against the Boorn brothers. Uncle Amos may have been awake when he actually thought he was asleep and dreaming. Uncle Amos described the apparition as most realistic. According to his own account the vision was so distinct that it was just as if Russell Colvin himself stood there and talked to him. Maybe it was. It would have been a master stroke of revenge and would have aided in protecting Colvin from the consequences of the killing he himself had done. A fine way to get even with the Boorn brothers and at the same time destroy all evidence of his own crime.

We may suppose that when Colvin crouched behind the bushes he still thought he had killed one of the Boorns. In his highly wrought state and feverish haste he might not have noticed that the dead man was a stranger.

So, when he saw Stephen at the burial he may have thought Stephen was burying Jesse. Later when he learned that both the Boorns were still alive he played the ghost for Uncle Amos.

No matter how far afield speculation may lead us, the fact remains that this strangest murder case remains unsolved after 112 years.

Even the court which had sentenced the Boorns tried its hand at the solving but gave up the problem in despair. The best it could do was to order a new trial. The State then made an entry of nolle prosequi and the Boorn brothers were free.

And no one ever did find out whose toenails those were.

HAY FEVER
PROMPTLY RELIEVED BY NEW DISCOVERY
Eyes Quit Itching. Nose Stops Running and Burning. Makes Life Worth Living. Money Refunded if It Fails.

At last! Real relief for hay fever. The long search by scientific men for something that would counteract the effect of pollen has resulted in a new discovery. It is now possible to go through the hay fever season and hardly know that you ever had this terrible affliction.

Dia-pollin is the name of this new compound. It is absolutely harmless, contains no injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Simply apply it in the nostrils, and almost instantly you realize that hay fever has met its master. The nose clears up and stops running. The fever cools off. Breathing becomes easier. The redness and itching of the eyes ease and soon cease almost entirely. A few applications a day enable you to work in comfort and sleep in peace.

Hay fever is caused by pollen from weeds, vegetation, etc., which irritates the mucous lining of the nose. Dia-pollin keeps this pollen infection under such control that it doesn't make your life miserable. It is easy to use and acts like magic.

"Gave Wonderful Relief"

"I started using Dia-pollin for hay fever last July and obtained most wonderful relief. For the first time in many years, I slept soundly during the hay fever season, and was able to work with very little of the usual nose and eye troubles. I recommended Dia-pollin to several others and all of them received the same benefit I did."—C. H. Rogers, Mgr. Salvation Army Hotel, 26 So. Capitol Ave., Indianapolis.

"My First Real Relief"

"I have found complete relief through Dia-pollin all through the Rose and Hay Fever seasons. My suffering used to be very severe. Dia-pollin cleared my head, stopped the itching of the eyes, made my breathing easy and in fact made it possible for me to work and get a good night's sleep. It is the first real relief I ever found and has had no bad effects."—Wm. Walker, 736 Edgemont Ave., Indianapolis.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY

You can try Dia-pollin without risking a penny. If it fails to please you, your money will be promptly refunded. No red tape about it—try Dia-pollin at our risk. WILSON & CO. PLACED IN HANDS OF A RECEIVER

New Jersey Court Acts When Debts of Packing Concern Are Alleged to Be Nearly $30,000,000.

LONG COMPLAINT ALLEGES INSOLVENCY

Funded Indebtedness of $47,177,000 Also Is Outstanding Against Firm, One of the Largest.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 25.—Wilson & Co., Inc., one of the large packing establishments, has been placed in the hands of a receiver. On complaint of Maurice I. Klein of Newark, Vice Chancellor John E. Baches has temporarily named State Banking Commissioner Edward Maxson receiver for the company.

In a lengthy complaint attached to the insolvency charge of Klein, it is alleged that the big packing concern is indebted to various banking institutions for nearly $30,000,000 and has a funded debt outstanding of $47,177,000.

Klein claims that he is holder of 25 shares of Wilson & Co. stock with a par value of $2500 and contends that in at least two recent instances where interest fell due on the company's stocks and bonds the defendant had no cash on hand to pay the stockholders.

Debts Exceed $40,000,000.

Wilson & Co. recently acquired a rendering plant on the outskirts of Trenton and has large packing houses in many parts of the world. Its capital stock is listed on the New York exchange and other leading exchanges throughout the world.

Specifically, Klein's complaint sets forth that 202,500 shares of no par value common stock have been issued by the company and are outstanding, together with $12,000,000 in 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock. First mortgage 6 per cent bonds worth over $22,000,000, due April 19, 1941, are included in the company's funded debt, together with convertible 6 per cent gold bonds in the sum of over $15,000,000, due Dec. 1, 1928, and $9,126,000 in 7½ per cent bonds due Dec. 1, 1931.

Klein charges that on June 1 last there became due $400,000 to holders of the 6 per cent convertible bonds, and that the defendant was unable to pay the instalment because of lack of funds. It is further charged that the firm was unable to meet the semi-annual installment of $345,000 due Aug. 1 last on the 7½ per cent cumulative bonds.

Creditors' Committee Named.

On April 19 last Klein states the company was financially embarrassed and called a meeting of creditors, at which a creditors' committee was formed. Klein charges that the committee has been unable to satisfactorily readjust the company's finances.

Vice Chancellor Backes has ordered the defendant company to show cause in the Chancery Cou here Sept. 2 why the receivershi should not be made permanen and the company declared insolvent. His order was accompanied by an injunction restraining the Wilson company from disposing of any of the assets. The receiver is ordered to post a bond of $250,0
